Ottawa Endeavors To Slash Interest

Banks' Won't Pare Rates'

TORONTO (CP) — Banking sources said today they see little chance of an immediate reduction in interest rates on consumer loans following the bank rate cut announced by the Bank of Canada.

The central bank reduced its bank rate by one half of a percentage point to 6¼ per cent effective today, putting the rate back where it was between Dec. 18, 1968 and March 2, 1969.

A spokesman for the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce said the reduction was not unexpected and seemed appropriate.

"It will not necessarily have any impact on chartered bank rates on consumer loans, which still are subject to supply and demand," he said.

"We see no change in the immediate future."

"The normal trend for chartered banks is to ease up a little in their lending rate policy," explained Jack Burgess, manager of the Toronto Dominion Bank in downtown Belleville.

Mr. Burgess said "the normal procedure is to follow suit from the Bank of Canada, which gives a nudge to the chartered banks. However, it will be a few days yet before the head offices have assessed the situation."

Mark Haslett, assistant manager of the Provincial Bank of Montreal, reiterated these statements. "Consumer lending has eased up in the past few weeks . . . but there is no indication (as yet) whether the Bank of Canada's lowered rates will bring lower interest rates to the individual."

Other banking sources said the bank rate reduction was no surprise because interest rates in the United States have been declining.

Cut in Bank Rate Should Set Pattern'

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) —The federal government's financial authorities watched the commercial financial community today for action to reduce interest rates in line with a reduction in the Bank of Canada's bank rate by one half of a percentage point to 6¼ per cent.

The central bank's move, announced Monday night after a meeting of Bank of Canada directors in Quebec City, puts the bank rate back to its level between Dec. 18, 1968 and March 2, 1969. It touched a historic peak of eight per cent on July 16, 1969, and now has moved back in three stages starting last May 12.

The bank rate is the rate charged by the central bank on its rarely drawn loans to the chartered banks when they require money for a short period to keep their cash reserves up to the required level. Commercial banks avoid drawing advances from the Bank of Canada whenever they can, and repay them as quickly as possible—usually in a matter of days.

While the bank rate itself is therefore only rarely drawn into play, it acts as a signal from the Bank of Canada to the chartered banks and the financial community on what the central bank thinks should be the credit atmosphere of the country.

When the Bank of Canada sees financial difficulties on the horizon, such as the recent bout of inflation, it raises the rate as a signal to the commercial banking and finance community to follow suit by tighter credit conditions. Increases in the bank rate thus tend to be a prelude to change.

Louis Rasminsky, governor of the central bank, issued a rare statement with the bank's announcement Monday night, stating out the context in which the Bank of Canada reduced the bank rate. He said that while the fight against inflation cannot yet be considered to have been won, other forces are at play in the economy which make a reduction of interest rates advisable.

Actually, some significant interest rates have declined. Investors' earnings on three-and six-months treasury bills have dropped by about two percentage points between February and August, touching just over seven per cent last week. Yields on long term government bonds are down slightly.

This means that money invested now doesn't earn as much as it did six months ago. As a corollary, it means that it shouldn't cost people as much to borrow now as it did six months ago.

The test is whether the grandiose plans Ottawa—particularly for house mortgages and bank and consumer loans—will reduce their interests in the trim in the cost of money to businessmen and homebuyers, without at the same time sparking such an expansion of buying demand as to give inflation another spur.

Synopsis: Temperatures dropped sharply overnight reaching the 60s across southern Ontario. With bright sunny skies today, temperatures should climb rapidly to the low 70s near the Lower Lakes and above fire degrees cooler over the rest of the province. Southerly winds developing over Ontario Wednesday will push temperatures a little higher but could produce some cloudiness as well.

Safeguard ABM System Tracks Down Minuteman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Development of the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system has reached a significant milestone with its first interception of a missile in space, but the ultimate test remains five years away.

It was the first time the Spartan was fired at an actual target and guided by its new and complex missile site radar, the defence department said Monday. In previous tests, Spartans were fired only at points in the sky.

"This was the first test to see if the system works," a spokesman explained. "It wasn't the ultimate test, but it was a milestone."

The ultimate test of the disputed multi-billion-dollar ABM system will come in 1975 when the first Safeguard site is scheduled to become operational with all its component parts, including the important but still to be completed perimeter acquisition radar at Grand Forks, N.D.

Safeguard is designed to protect America's offensive Minuteman missile force by knocking out incoming enemy missiles with its long-range, no-clear-tipped Spartan and short-range Sprint missiles.

Safeguard critics, both in Congress and the scientific community, question whether the ABM's guiding radars are sophisticated enough to distinguish the incoming nuclear warheads from decoys and other electronic devices designed to fool or jam the system.

Friday's mid-Pacific test demonstrated the missile site radar's ability to track an incoming missile and guide Spartan to its target. In this case, it was a single nose cone and not a multiple warhead such as would be expected in an actual attack.

The Safeguard system also will be aided by its perimeter acquisition radar, which is being designed to pick up enemy missiles when they first appear over the horizon minutes after launch. However, because of its size and complexity, it will be impossible to fully test the radar and the completed Safeguard system until the first site is installed at Grand Forks.

In describing Friday's test, Pentagon officials said the Spartan intercepted a Minuteman nose cone launched 4,200 miles away from Vandenberg Air Force Base, near Santa Barbara, Calif.

Ground tracking instruments indicated that the Spartan's final stage, which in an operational situation would carry a nuclear warhead, flew close enough to the target nose cone to have caused its destruction," officials said.

World Health Body Fears Cholera Spread

By Reuters

Health officials in Europe, Africa and the Middle East took special precautions today to stop the spread of a major cholera outbreak.

As the World Health Organization held a top-level conference in Geneva to discuss preventive measures, Spanish health experts said they are convinced the disease will reach Europe.

Cholera, highly infectious and quick-travelling, is at present affecting parts of the Soviet Union and the Middle East.

A total of 35 cases have been confirmed in Israel and on the Israeli-held West Bank of the Jordan. The first fatality occurred Sunday with the death of a seven-year-old Arab girl from East Jerusalem.

In Lebanon, there are 32 suspected cases.

Anticipating a spread to Europe, Spanish authorities have already prepared 1,000,000 vaccine doses, a senior health official in Madrid said.

Guinea has resigned from the W.H.O. in protest over allegations that there is cholera in the country. Radio Conakry said. A W.H.O. team recently investigated an epidemic with diarrhea symptoms there.

French airport and harbor officials stepped up health checks today on foreign visitors and vaccination certificates were demanded from travellers arriving from affected areas.

Postal Talks Are Deadlocked

OTTAWA (CP) — Negotiators meet again today in another attempt to break the deadlocked postal mediation talks and avoid the possibility of a government-imposed settlement of the year-old contract dispute.

Reliable sources said earlier Monday that if a settlement or substantial progress had not been achieved by Monday night, it would not likely be reached later.

Sources say the talks now are deadlocked.

Union Says Hydro Ignored Aid Offer

TORONTO (CP) — Supervisory staff of Ontario Hydro went back to work repairing breaks in power lines in the Toronto area Monday night when workmen went home at the end of their regular shifts.

The employees, members of Local 1,000 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, have refused to work overtime since they started a slowdown last Wednesday to support contract demands.

Andrew Bekerman, Information officer of the 11,000-member local said Hydro was "extremely irresponsible" in its refusal to approach the union for emergency help.

Mr. Bekerman said that following Sunday's storms Hydro stuck to its policy of following usual channels, calling the workers themselves for emergency work. Supervisory personnel eventually made the repairs.

Mr. Bekerman said six 27,000-volt feeder lines near Toronto were restored by 8 a.m. Monday, but could have been repaired 1½ hours after the early-evening storm by union linemen.

"In Kenora on Sunday local management called out an emergency crew according to the policy we laid down and power was restored. As a result today they received instructions from Toronto not to do that again."

Hydro said in a statement Monday it "cannot operate the complex electrical power system with any degree of security during a strike if it hands over decision-making powers to the Ontario Hydro Employees Union."

Hydro agreed with the union that repairing the breaks without help from union crews "undoubtedly delayed the restoration of service to some extent."

Israel Delays Resuming Talks

FromReuters-AP

JERUSALEM (CP) — Israel again delayed the resumption of the Middle East peace talks in New York following an inconclusive cabinet meeting today on the subject.

Usually well-informed sources said Israel's representative, Yosef Tekoah, was expected to stay on in Jerusalem to attend another session of the cabinet later this week.

Although the question of Tekoah's briefing for the talks was ostensibly the reason for the present delay, the sources said a much more fundamental issue was that reported continued Egyptian ceasefire violations in the Suez canal zone.

Defence Minister Moshe Dayan felt that the United States, as guarantor of the ceasefire, should publicly acknowledge the reported Egyptian missile buildup, they said.

He also insisted that Israel should retain the right in all options open to it in the face of the violations, they added.

Tekoah, who returned home for consultations on the first day of the talks, has been here a week.

At the United Nations in New York, diplomats expressed rising concern over Israel's continued absence from the talks and some sources said the whole peace initiative might be threatened by the delay.

A spokesman said Jarring is aware of the developments which have resulted in Tekoah prolonging his stay in Israel.

However, the UN spokesman said that in talking to Jarring he "did not get the impression of any alarm."

Street Full of House

Leon Trupp of 384 Sidney Street found his living quarters almost in the middle of the street yesterday morning, during efforts to move his house one block to Yeomans Street. However, the house was saved from long habitation on the roadway after an hour and a half's work and was moved to its new location. The incident occurred shortly after 11 a.m. when a beam on the back of the truck supporting part of the house suddenly buckled, blocking Sidney Street traffic.

Must Be Member Agency

No UCS Aid for Youth Centres in 1971 Says Fund Chairman

By BARRY McCULLAGH
Staff Reporter

The United Community Services of Belleville and District is making a study of drop-in centres in other communities the size of Belleville but Ben Corke, who is chairman of this year's United Appeal campaign emphasized that no promises have been made for raising funds for any kind of youth centre in 1971.

Mr. Corke made his statement during a talk to Rotarians yesterday by UCS Community Planning Co-ordinator Andrew Cooperman. He said he was doing so in view of confusion in the minds of some people. No such funds would be forthcoming until such a facility became a member of the United Appeal as another agency. When that would be he did not know.

Mr. Cooperman pointed out that as the UCS delved into the matter of youth centres, whatever would be set up would have as many safeguards as it was possible to have in dealing with human beings, including professionally-trained people.

The American - born Mr. Cooperman referred to last week's meeting at the Bleecker auditorium and said that after 18 months' hard work supervising the drop-in centre on Front Street Roland Belanger and Byron Cassman felt they had gone as far as they could go.

Noting that service clubs have their "pet projects," Mr. Cooperman went on to suggest that when they begin to think of new projects they invite the UCS to join in the discussion, "so we can determine what are the priorities and the community at that moment."

The planning co-ordinator said there was a lack of counselling services and with some government money that was available it was intended to organize an additional agency for young people over the age of 18 to help families.

It was also planned to establish a central bureau to administrate such services as a furniture exchange, clothing needs, meals on wheels and the Christmas Exchange.

To a question on possible co - operation by the YMCA, Mr. Cooperman said there had been a meeting with the Y executive and it was indicated that this was an area in which the Y could become involved.

"As we go along I hope we will be able to turn over some of these activities to the Y.

Rotary President Bill McKay said that because it would interfere with the United Appeal campaign, the club had decided not to participate in the Toronto - sponsored Rotary Olympiad in aid of sport in Canada.

A UCS circular issued to Rotarians explained its functions and listed possible areas of UCS initiative as follows:

"The United Community Services of Belleville and District consists of two divisions. One is the United Appeal, the other is social or community planning.

"Through social or community planning we seek to:

- determine the present and prospective social resources of the community;
- identify its present and estimate the future social needs of the community;
- promote the satisfaction of community needs through co-ordination, and stimulation of the social services operation of voluntary agencies, public departments and private charities; and
- inform the public and invite their support for adequate and balanced services.

To be effective in the social or community planning sphere, the UCS must maintain research services which permit a continuing intimate knowledge of the physical, economic and social aspects of the community, as well as a detailed understanding of the current and prospective state of its social services, similarly, from time to time it must survey and evaluate the community expectations for health, welfare and recreational services.

Suggested available areas for Belleville and district are:

a) Community resource unit; b) Child Care and Protection, Including Adoptions, Children Aid Societies, Citizenship, Civil and Human Rights, Community Planning, Consumer Client and Patient Protection, Continuing Education — Formal and Informal, Correctional and Rehabilitation Services, Counselling — Personal and Family; Day Care and Day Nurseries — for Children with Disabilities, Day Care and Day Nurseries — For Well Children, Debt Counselling, Disaster Services.

Not Union's Fault Says Representative

The United Steelworkers of America as representatives of the now 'jobless workers of Amplifone Canada Ltd. does not feel it is responsible for the closing last week of the Belleville plant.

"It is unfair to imply that if the company is out of business, it is because of the union," stated Lloyd Fell, International representative for the big Steelworkers' union.

Mr. Fell said local workers at a meeting last night authorized his union to seek further negotiation meetings with the company.

"We are taking the position that the workers are being locked out — we are anxious to return to the bargaining table," he said.

Course Teaches Students How Other Driver Lives

With the mounting number of fatalities on the highways, a psychological means of avoiding accidents is being employed to keep the drivers more aware of driving hazards.

This method is termed "defensive driving."

In a word, it means that each driver thinks of the other as a potential accident. This does not mean that the person behind the wheel expects a collision at any moment, but he is alert to any possibilities.

If he saw children playing on the sidewalk, he would think in terms of his reactions should a youngster dart out into the street.

Courses in defensive driving were first instigated by a U.S. firm, and quickly spread throughout the country.

In Canada, the Canadian Armed Forces based their own defensive driving courses on the U.S. firm's lessons and established classes in the late 1950s.

Cost of the course is $5 and is open to the public, licensed drivers preferred, but those preparing to obtain their driving permits will also be accepted.

The administration staff for the course are accepting applications until Sept. 22. Some of the staff and the facilities for this course are being provided by the extension division of Loyalist College.

From the armed forces, the course spread to schools, police departments, trucking firms and agencies interested in driver training and driver conservation.

This fall, in conjunction with the Ontario Safety League, Loyalist College extension school will provide a defensive driving course on the college campus.

The OSL has been in contact with the community colleges throughout Ontario setting up these courses.

Instructors on the Belleville course will be Lou Gaudet, chief instructor, Earl Hewison and Norm MacCrimmon. The instructors are all members of the Canadian Armed Forces and hold the national Canada safety council awards for their efforts in instructing defensive driving courses.

The course will be held for four evenings between 7 and 9 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, Oct. 6, 8, 13 and 15.

Interest rates in the U.S. now are slightly below those in Canada. Further reductions in the U.S. would have upset the balance had the Canadian government not reduced its bank rate.

One banker noted that it takes six months or so for the reaction to a bank rate reduction to filter down the line and the shopkeeper will feel the effect and be able to increase inventories.

President Allan T. Lambert of the Toronto Dominion Bank said that the reduction in the bank rate means that the federal government can move away from the restrictive monetary policy of the early part of this year.

"This is a reflection of a trend that has been in evidence for some time," he said. "The money 'glut' that has been low in the past few weeks."

"The adjustment in the bank rate put it more in line with short-term interest rates. Money has become a little more available in the past few months."

"I think this simply indicates that the central bank would like to see more money around. The reduction is designed to improve the economy."

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was up moderately in mid-morning trading today.

On index, industrials climbed .53 to 180.81, golds .54 to 161.95, base metals .11 to 95.45 and western oils .21 to 189.38.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 547,000 shares, compared with 398,000 at the same time Monday.

Gains outnumbered losses 141 to 69 with 167 issues unchanged.

The market was up sharply during the first 30 minutes of trading but gave it up as selling profit-taking eroded some of the gains.

Analysts attributed much of the market's strength to a reduction in the Bank of Canada's lending rate to 6¼ per cent from 7 per cent. It was the third time this year that the lending rate has been reduced. This rate is usually taken as an indicator of rates for chartered banks.

Strongest sectors were banks, real estate, communications and utilities.

Among rising issues, Electrohome was up ½ to $17¾, Texas Gulf Sulphur ½ to $15¼, Canadian Hydrocarbons ½ to $15, Bell ¼ to $43¾, Royal Bank ¼ to $18¾, Consumer Gas ¼ to $18¾ and CPR ¼ to $36¼.

Investors Overseas rose 35 cents to $4.95 and IOS Ltd. 10 cents to $1.75. Bernard Cornfield, former chief executive officer of Investors Overseas Services Ltd., said he would drop his proxy fight for control of the company.

On index, industrials were up .05 to 160.28 and golds 1.24 to 181.41. Base metals fell .13 to 95.34 and western oils .43 to 189.05.

Volume was 1.60 million shares, down from 2.36 million Friday.

It was the second consecutive advancing session for industrial issues.

Advisers Called In By Nixon

SAN CLEMENTE Calif. (AP) — Amid rising Israeli complaints of ceasefire violations, President Nixon and his top aides met with his top advisers today to assess the Middle East situation.

He called Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew back a day early from a Honolulu rest stop on the way home from Asia to join in the session at the western White House. Agnew also will report to the president on the 10-day trip in which he met with leaders of five Asian nations.

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said he did not expect any announcements or reports to come out of the Middle East meeting. Nor, he will be able to turn over some of these activities to the Y.

Contracts Diminish

New Trend to Canning Operation Leaves Farmers Cold

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

The annual tomato harvest in Prince Edward county is again under full swing but for many Ameliasburg farmers this season there is a difference.

The difference is that for many farmers in the north part of the county around Mountain View, Rednersville and Big Island this year there will be no large scale tomato harvest.

The reason is that Sprague Foods Ltd., the only canning factory in this particular part of the county did not contract last spring for the growing of Ireland the company decided to grow its own.

One Ameliasburg farmer, George Flower of Massassaga, said that as a result of the Mountain View canning factory decision, for first time in more than 30 years, he was not growing tomatoes on a commercial scale.

MORE

"I am out of tomatoes for the first time in 30 years," Mr. Flower told The Intelligencer.

Mr. Flower said that, normally he would have planted about 10 acres of tomatoes.

Approximately 15 farmers in the north end of the county were effected by the decision of Sprague Foods Ltd. to grow its own tomatoes, the acreage of these farmers ranged from a low of two or three up to the 10 contracted Mr. Flower.

However, a few of the farmers effected by the Sprague decision were able to contract tomato acreage with another small plant in the area.

Mr. Flower said the loss of tomato contracts was a hardship for many farmers. The average crop for tomatoes in this area of Prince Edward is about 100 bushels to the acre. Another blow for area farmers was the decision this year of a Trenton canning plant not to contract pea acreage in Prince Edward.

Roger Sprague, owner of Sprague Foods Ltd., admitted that the decision to grow his own tomatoes had resulted in him "not being too popular among the farmers."

He is growing this year's supply of canning tomatoes on rented land in the Rednersville area and commenced canning operations on Aug. 20.

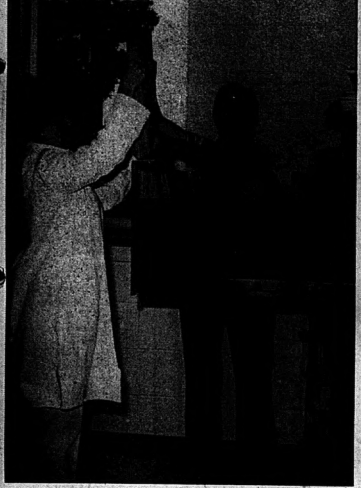
This year's crop of tomatoes was described as being possibly a little above average although the dry August weather was not too good for the crop. Light warm showers were needed to ripen the fruit, he said.

Mr. Sprague has four Barbadian workers picking tomatoes and at the height of the season will require about 15 pickers.

He expects no difficulty in hiring the necessary pickers.

So far mechanized picking of tomatoes hasn't been introduced to Prince Edward, although the machines are being tried in Western Ontario. A requirement for mechanical picking is even ripening of the fruit.

Even then only little more than 30 per cent of the crop is harvested without damage but in view of savings in labor costs this loss percentage can be tolerated.



However, Mr. Sprague did not feel the Prince Edward tomato crop ripened evely enough for the successful use of mechanical pickers.

The canning of dried beans is another first this year for Sprague Foods.

In contrast to the tomato crop however, the growing of beans was contracted with local farmers.

Red and white kidney beans are the major types grown, with the harvest to commence in the fall after they have ripened.

The dried beans will go into storage until winter when they will be processed and put into cans.

Today Was Moving Day

Mrs. Sharon Burns, and Heather Rutledge, secretaries at the ODH chest clinic, load the first of 25,000 X-rays into a filing cabinet at their new offices. The clinic is expected to be fully operational by early next week.

Soon Open for Business

Mrs. June Fisher, manager of the Ontario department of health chest clinic, tests the X-ray viewer at the new offices at 208 Dundas Street East. More than 8,000 such X-rays are taken each year.

Chest Clinic Headquarters Moves to Dundas Street

Organized confusion was the order of the day at the Ontario department of health chest clinic this morning.

More than 25,000 X-rays were scattered throughout the office and the 20-year old X-ray machine was non-operational.

Now as bad as it seemed . . all was not lost.

The chest clinic was in the process of moving from its old location at 14 Bridge St. West to new offices at 208 Dundas St. East.

Throughout the rooms were cartons of X-rays, rows of unfilled filing cabinets, darkroom equipment, and that pleasant odor that pervades all new buildings.

Mrs. June Fisher, in charge of the clinic whenever Dr. W. R. Waddell, physician in charge, is absent, explained that the offices should be completely functional by early next week.

The area serviced includes all of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Campbellford, and both the Peterborough and Belleville jails.

The principal disease which the clinic attempts to work with, is tuberculosis, but lung cancer, emphysema, and other chest ailments are also included for identification and treatment.

Sponsored by the Ontario department of health tuberculosis prevention branch, with regional head offices in Kingston, the clinic dispenses drugs on prescription from Dr. Waddell.

Approximately 8,000 X-rays are taken each year by the clinic free of charge either by appointment or by referrals from doctors.

"Because of all the outside work and the follow-ups from the school TB skin tests, we do, appointments are appreciated," said Mrs. Fisher.

Both the mobile X-ray unit and the machine contained in the lead-lined room at the clinic offices are operated by Ray McLennan, a registered technician who today celebrates his 32th year with the clinic.

Mrs. Fisher said the clinic was moved to its new location because many of their patients suffer from chest ailments and the lower floor will be more accessible to them.

Hydro Managing Services Despite Strike by Workers

A rotating strike by members of the Ontario Hydro Employees Union has had little effect on bringing hydro service to the customer despite a weekend thunderstorm Sunday night.

Norman Manning, public relations officer for the Eastern Region of the Hydro Commission with headquarters in Belleville, said this morning that supervisory personnel in this region handled hundreds of trouble calls as a result of the storm that included high winds and lightning.

Yesterday saw delays in receipt of power rectified despite the union's refusal to work overtime, one of the provisions of the strike.

Mr. Manning said the worst areas for trouble were Kingston, Picton and Frankford but trouble had been halted.

During the strike Hydro management is required to ask the area steward in the OHEU for assistance by union members if it is needed.

According to Mr. Manning, this means that the steward rather than management is forced into a position whereby he must judge the severity of the emergency.

However, in this case all trouble calls were handled by supervisory staff working overtime because of the strike.

Negotiations between management and OHCU representatives continued this morning at 10 after an adjournment last night at 6.30.

Management has offered a new position that is being considered around the bargaining table.

Hydro has offered new wage and fringe benefits that would cost the commission $15,000,000 over a two-year period. The union is still requesting improvements that would mean $33,000,000 in two years.

Management has offered an increase in wages ranging from 4½ per cent to 7½ per cent on a wage scale. The increase the second year would amount to from 3½ per cent to 6 per cent plus a 3 per cent escalator clause in the second year.

In addition the commission is offering to pay 100 per cent of health plan premiums as of April 1, 1971 and to reduce retirement age from 65 to 64 years of age with 25 years service.

The union is still bargaining for a flat across the board increase, but Hydro management still desires a staggered pay increase.

"Management feels that some trades are out of line, primarily operators," Mr. Manning said.

OCEAN TRANSPLANT

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) —Four hundred sea otters from Alaska were released off the northwest coast of Vancouver Island during July, the second attempt within a year to transplant the otters to the area from more northern waters. Last year 25 sea otters were released in the same area and a number are known to have survived.

Prince Edward Issue

A cloud of uncertainty still surrounds the establishment of a kraft paper mill somewhere on the shoreline of Prince Edward County.

County residents are concerned about the pollution factor in any such project and the need to preserve the natural assets of the region. They are worried too that their interests, as citizens, are being threatened by big business without their being so much as consulted. It is participatory democracy at work and this is encouraging; letters on this page today are indicative of this.

A meeting is scheduled September 9 between Canadian International Paper and local and senior government representatives. This meeting, it is less encouraging to report, will be closed but a press release, we are informed, will be issued at its conclusion.

This press release had better be explicit if the interests of Prince Edward County and its residents are to be fully satisfied. Fortunately, however, there is talk of further meetings later between the company and other interested groups and this, we take it, means any concerned citizen organizations.

Whatever the outcome, current controversy has served to focus attention on Prince Edward. It is not enough to merely protect the establishment of an industry — after all it would provide jobs and strengthen the county's economic base — citizens should have some positive ideas on the region's future if it is not to just stand still.

Sun and Shadow

For all its natural advantages — a quiet atmosphere and pleasant scenery — there are times when Prince Edward County can appear dismal and depressing. Like when the sun stays away.

En route home from Milford and Black Creek a couple of weekends ago was such an occasion, and yet it can be enlivened by a great splash of sunlight. A great landscape around Picton, with rain threading through the cloud cover, suddenly became awash with fiery light.

But what a contrast Sunday when the stark overcast barely let up and finally erupted in an electric storm. Earlier, though, there was a brief blurry of interest down at the Waupoos Canning Company. It was late afternoon and a Waupoos Island resident was unloading from a ferry a big truck load of hay. He drove it ashore, then with the three boys and a girl who were accompanying him, he headed his motor boat back to the island. They would likely have made it back home not long before the gathering storm broke.

We have been to the other islands down Kingston and Gananoque way — Amherst, Wolfe and Howe — but not to Waupoos which sits out there mysteriously and as such places do, beckons the curious. But how to get there? The island is home by the way to a number of farmers. The Oblate Fathers are among them and the religious order also runs a summer camp there.

Corby Park

A letter on this page today regarding the taking of flowers from Corby Park reveals a strange line of reasoning on the part of the person concerned. A Parks Board spokesman says this problem has been encountered before, but it has not been so prevalent this summer. Corby Park is a much admired haven of floral attractiveness in Belleville, but if everyone took their share of what grows in it there would not be much park left.

Road Repairs

Sidewalk repairs are being carried out on Church Street, between Patterson and Victoria, and we hope the Public Works department will extend their beneficence in this regard across the intersection and down the hill to Station Street. The road surface there is badly rutted and the edge of the sidewalk cracked and broken. Doubtless there are other areas in need, but since the focus now is on Church this would be a good opportunity to complete the job there.

A Sea of Troubles...But

Stanfield's Image-making Try Least of Grits' Concerns

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Parliament may be only about two-thirds through its initially - planned long three-month summer session, but that does not mean there are not at least a few members of the Commons here in the Capital.

There are, and they are at work.

Some of them have been dropping in periodically to attend to correspondence and constituency chores that can only be done here.

Others have been on duty with the Commons Finance Committee. These, either active working members of the Committee or interested observers, have been hearing final submissions by the Jacobsen Report — Finance Minister Benson's controversial White Paper on Taxation.

Almost without exception, the taxpayers, in a high state of alarm, have been protesting Mr. Benson's "share the wealth" philosophy of tax "reform." And this could influence those MPs who are working members of the Committee and now busy preparing a report with recommendations — to the Government and Parliament.

Liberal and Conservative alike, they are wearing worried faces.

The Liberals have reason for concern — high unemployment, the postal paralysis, the bigger-than-ever wheat surplus, labor's defiance of efficient wage guidelines, inflation, pollution, Arctic sovereignty, the youth drug hangup, violence, the whole sorry mess.

It is a thin one, but a smile it is, indicating that all is not doom and gloom.

Three things amuse them:

1. The happily uncovered way, as they see it, that the long hot parliamentary summer has seemed to cool some of the overheated issues. Basically it is the cool of it - sight out - of - mind syndrome, and it has been receiving wonders for the Liberal peace of mind on everything but unemployment and the still-to-be-tried.

2. The strange distension — it has to be of weakness — by the Conservatives that with the next election less than two years away, is good, solid, winning issue stuies them.

3. The most stronger frantic scramble by Conservative Leader Stanfield to make himself over in the swinging image of Prime Minister Trudeau.

On the Number Two point — the so-far, unsuccessful search for an issue that could take them to election power and glory — the Conservatives realistically know they can not count on unemployment, inflation or even the mail strike, at this late summer moment, the pay-dirt problems they could so readily raise for votes if this were the spring or fall of 1972.

For there is no guarantee that these issues will stand up two years from now.

Political time — 20 to 24 months of it — is on the side of the Liberals.

For it by that time they have the local politicians we demand action — before it is too late!

MRS. DAVID TAYLOR,
RR1, Picton.

With reference to pollution hazards of a proposed pulp mill in Prince Edward County, which are quoted in The Belleville Intelligencer of August 19 as saying as far as pollution is concerned there is no danger" and "the project has been gone into very carefully with everyone involved, and I'm sure there is just no possibility of it."

Mr. Minister, please do not keep us "groping in the dark" as our Picton Gazette headline said on August 21st. What is your definition of pollution, and do you include, air, water, and soil? What scientific proofs or tangible evidence can you show us that either a sulphite or sulphide process which breaks down wood chips by caustic or acids, can totally re-use, convert to other industrial use, or cause to disappear, its daily biomasses of gallons of harmful effluent? Even the Pulp and Paper industry make no such claim. Nor have they as yet any answer to the famous bad smell.

In this beautiful and cherishable county we are no longer so gullible as when we swallowed the empty promises that our cement plant would be not done something constructive about unemployment and inflation and all the rest of the Government fools-up, even that disaster area, the Post Office, then they just do not know what to effort to even think about re-election.

The White Paper on Taxation still could be a slowly-ticking bomb by 1972. And the Conservatives a destruct mechanism to demolish the Government . . . except that by before then, the Liberals almost certainly will have defused it.

If they are nothing else, the Liberals are politically smart, or how else have they managed to ride for 34 of the last 38 years?

Unless, that is, the Conservatives are more politically clumsy than they so often seemed to have appeared seven of the last 10 elections, and only one of those decisively.

It has been reassuring for them to consider Points One and Two, but even more soothing, if for only a fleeting happy moment, to ponder Point Three: the crazy mixed-up scramble for a "new" pretty-Stanfield image.

The instant thing the Tories could have done to help their leader by now was the revved-up Prime Minister by jumping onto the platform at the Tories' convention and the public hit "Hair," got kissed on his shiny pate by showgirl Tobi Lark and stomped off a bunch be "loved" it.

It was like looking at your granddad cut a caper at a rock festival. At Least Trudeau would have done into it and done — Stanfield just shuffled into an awkward foxtrot.

You should have seen the look on Conservative faces when they saw these crazy news pictures of their leader looking out at them from every Front Page on the country on the parliamentary reading room.

You felt sorry for them, they looked so stricken.

Rachel Carson's Warning Recalled

Prince Edward Citizens on Paper Mill Issue

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

My husband and I are most distressed to hear that a large Kraft Pulp Mill maybe established at Huyck's Point in Prince Edward County. The most distressing aspect of the present situation is the lack of information available through the local media on which to assess the pros and cons of the establishment of such a plant here. On the one side we hear "we need industry"; on the other, "we don't want an industry which will contribute to air and water pollution". But facts are mighty hard to come by.

Corby Park

Visitor Reminds Citizen That Flowers in Park Are Not for Picking

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

As a frequent visitor to Belleville, I would like to compliment the municipal authority on the manner in which Corby Park is maintained. I have observed that the beauty of the gardens attract many people.

Unfortunately, it seems that some local residents regard the park as their personal property. While walking in the park on Sunday, I observed a woman, accompanied by her two children, blithely helping herself to a bouquet of roses. Each of them had picked several blossoms, discarding on the grass some which evidently were not quite satisfactory.

Perhaps, as an outsider, it was not my place to do so, but I could not resist the temptation to remind the woman that flowers were public property, planted and cared for so that everyone could enjoy them. Her response to my remark was clearly that as a taxpayer, she felt she had a right to help herself to the flowers; and furthermore, if she couldn't have the flowers, by George, she was going to see that she was going to pay 'any taxes!

In my many visits to Corby Park for the first time I have seen anyone pick the flowers. I hope I am right in thinking that the attitude of this woman is uncommon. Otherwise, the Parks Board will certainly have a formidable job in maintaining your beautiful city.

HEATHER BENNETT,
Carleton Place, Ontario.

In the first place, are the local residents aware of the problems (aside from that of pollution) which are involved when any large industry seeks to come into an undeveloped area such as this? Extra services which are demanded, such as water, and sewage, housing, roads, more schools could well become an intolerable economic burden on the local taxpayers who are taxed up to the hilt at the present time. But has anyone yet made a financial projection on this score?

Many of us are concerned, (and many not concerned enough) with the increased pollution — air and water — which a Kraft plant will bring. People who have ever been within 20 miles of an existing plant, e.g. Cornwall, will know to what extent the stench is intolerable.

While various Government agencies are conferring we know nothing; we assume (if optimistic) that one of the stipulations may be OWRC for this paper company is that it shall have a good modern treatment and disposal plant. But how does this meet? Is it possible to dispose of ALL the dangerous byproducts of the paper-making industry before they reach Lake Ontario? Is it possible to eliminate the stench with which the prevailing westerly winds will smother the County? And if not, then surely this is not good enough, and we should all fight for self-preservation. All we know is that one Government branch is saying that Prince Edward County should be developed as a tourist area; while another government branch is helping a Kraft mill to set up here? How can the two possibly exist side by side?

As we are all aware, Lake Ontario has reached the danger point now, ecologically speaking. The fish are contaminated with mercury (one by-product of paper making) and bathing on our beaches has become unpleasant to varying degrees. Fifteen years ago the fishing industry was still in a healthy condition and the beaches were free of algae; the water was crystal clear.

If the local residents can be persuaded that a Kraft mill would be a bad thing for Prince Edward County, what power do they have through their elected representatives to prevent its establishment?

We have not been informed, let alone consulted. It is a completely depressing and frustrating situation. Often the government agencies involved, we demand the information: from

Satellite Hurried Into Sky To Spy on Chinese Missiles

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The hurry-up launching of a secret spy satellite has underscored the U.S. need to fill an intelligence gap on China's missile program.

The new satellite, sent aloft Monday night, was launched today toward a stationary orbit some 20,000 miles above Southeast Asia, where it would be in position to monitor test launchings by both China and the Soviet Union.

The air force, which launched the spy craft, hopes it will do better than a similar satellite sent up last June.

That payload achieved a preliminary orbit of 112 to 20,726 miles above the earth. But two days later, the second stage of the Atlas-Agena rocket failed to restart and the satellite did not reach the desired lower orbit over Southeast Asia.

Sources said the Atlas-Agena rocket fired Monday night was rushed to the launch pad ahead of schedule because of the June failure. They said the move was necessary because the defence department wanted to monitor a reported forthcoming series of Chinese missile firings.

The air force dropped a secrecy lid on the launch and did not announce it in advance. Five minutes after liftoff, a brief statement said only that an Atlas-Agena had been launched with an experimental payload.

The sources said the United States increased its surveillance of China missile activity significantly after the China's launched their first earth satellite last April 24. Observers feel this demonstrated the capability of launching an intercontinental range missile with a nuclear warhead.

In a stationary orbit 19,800 to 24,600 miles high, the new satellite would provide 24-hours-a-day reconnaissance. The sources said the satellite also carried a television camera and sensors to spot missile bases, air fields and troop movements in the Soviet Union, China and North Vietnam.

After launching, the new satellite was shifted from a normal 60-to-100-degree inclination to the equator to a 80-degree inclination. This would provide better coverage of China.

It also would give American intelligence a twice-a-day look at military movements in the Middle East.

Africans Hold Summit Parley

ADDIS ABABA (AP) — The seventh summit conference of the organization of African Unity opens in the Ethiopian capital today, and the delegates will receive reports detailing U.S. investments in South Africa and military assistance to Portugal by the United States, Britain and West Germany.

The 41 delegations are expected to adopt resolutions condemning France, West Germany and Britain for selling or planning to sell arms to South Africa. Those resolutions and others expected to pass were approved by the OAU Foreign Ministers Conference that ended last weekend.

To prove allegations of U.S. aid to Portugal, which has colonies in Africa, an OAU report by Secretary-General Diallo Telli says fragments of U.S. Air Force 750-pound napalm bombs have been found in African villages bombed by the Portuguese in Mozambique and Angola.

Telli's semi-annual report quotes various sources for details of French, German and U.S. financial involvement in the Portuguese colonies and says the Gulf Oil Company spent $130 million last year for oil exploration and development in Angola.

It also details U.S.-private trade with South Africa.

Four Bandits Foil Vermont Townsmen and Escape Into Quebec

RICHFORD, Vt. (AP) — Four masked and armed bandits held up the lone bank in this small Canadian border village Monday and escaped after they were almost foiled by about a dozen townspeople who tried to blockade their getaway car.

They fled only minutes before state police arrived, stopping a half-mile away to clip the town's telephone lines and then speeding over a little-used dirt road across the border into Quebec.

A spokesman for the bank, a branch of the Franklin County Bank, said the loot was expected to amount to less than $30,000.

The robbery was the third of its kind in remote northern Vermont in as many months, and a state police spokesman said he was convinced the bandits were members "of a professional, really professional gang based in Canada."

Kenneth C. Baker, vice-president of the bank, said the bandits pulled up outside the branch shortly before noon.

Several passersby saw three of the bandits, wearing rubber face masks and carrying a pistol and two rifles, jump out of the car and dash inside. The fourth man, also masked, waited behind the wheel.

"Somebody called the state police right away, while they were still inside," Barker said.

Outside, the bandits found their car hemmed in by two other autos, one parked against the getaway car's rear bumper, the other backed tightly against its front bumper.

"One of them had to get into the front car to move it," Baker said. "It didn't slow them down much—maybe only a minute or so—but the state police arrived just a couple of seconds later, so it almost worked."

Baker said a hidden camera filmed the holdup, but it might be later today before officials know whether the film holds any clues.

Three masked gunmen operating in similar fashion escaped with nearly $10,000 after holding up the Enosburg Falls National Bank June 16. Another trio escaped with about $6,000 after robbing the North Troy branch of the Chittenden Trust Co. June 22.

There also was a similar holdup in a border community in upstate New York in early July.

In every instance, the robbers escaped by using unsupervised country roads that cross into Canada.

Seven Canadians were arrested last week at Rouses Point, N.Y., and charged with conspiracy to commit robbery, and state police said then that they were investigating the possibility of a link with the earlier Vermont holdups.

The seven men were identified as George W. MacAllister, 37, of Chomedey, Que., and a brother, William, 27, of Montreal; Gaetan Gingras, 28, of Fabreville, Que.; Gilles Normand, Gastonguay, 26, of Montreal; Serge Gamelt, 23, of Montreal; Claude Dubamel, 26, of Richelieu, Que., and John Machibrauda, 39, of Brantford, Ont.

Anti-war Buddhists Head List for Saigon Senate

SAIGON (Reuters) — Ten candidates backed by the powerful anti-war An Quang Buddhist faction today headed the list of 30 new members of the 60-seat South Vietnamese Senate.

Complete results wer issad by the press office of the upper house. A formal announcement from the electoral council was expected later.

A solidly pro-government slate ran second in the Sunday voting, and an independent-minded group which generally supports President Nguyen Van Thieu's policies was third.

Figures taken from complete returns in the country's 44 provinces and six cities showed the Thieu Flower slate of candidates —led by former foreign minister Vu Van Mau and backed by the An Quang Buddhists—collected 1,148,073 votes in Sunday's polling.

The Sun—the solidly pro-government slate led by Senator Huynh Van Cao, a former army major-general—came second with 1,106,980 votes.

Third was The White Lily—an independent group led by Senate Chairman Nguyen Van Huyen.

Land-only Oil Wells Suggested

WASHINGTON (AP) — The petroleum industry should confine its drilling to land and delay further offshore operations to protect the environment, a federal study suggests.

The study cited eruption of an oil well in California's Santa Barbara channel in January, 1969, and pollution resulting from an oil fire off the Louisiana coast last February as examples of offshore operations damaging the environment.

The oil industry, the report said, has improved its record of containing blowouts on land, and pollution, when it occurs, is localized.

"With onland problems of production and transportation of petroleum sufficiently well in hand so that substantial pollution seldom occurs, the onland search for new petroleum reservoirs ought for this reason and other good reasons be encouraged," the report said.

This bloc, which generally supports the government, was credited with 883,817 votes.

Fourth place went to The House, a slate dominated by former supporters of the late President Ngo Dinh Diem, which won 744,000 votes.

The An Quang faction has boycotted all previous elections and considers President Thieu's administration illegal. The Buddhist-backed candidates were the most important opposition group ever to contest a national election in South Vietnam.

Big Three Auto-makers Today Unveil Their New Offer to UAW

DETROIT (AP) — Big Three auto-makers reveal their new contract offers to the United Auto Workers union today, hoping to provide the basis for a settlement that would avert a mid-September strike.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock had served notice on the companies that they must meet the UAW's major demands to reach a contract peacefully.

The offers today, separately from each company, were the first responses from General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co., and Chrysler Corp. to the UAW's proposals since bargaining began July 15. The old contract expires Sept. 14.

Some 720,000 of the union's 1.6 million members are employed by the Big Three auto-makers in the United States and another 47,000 in Canada.

The union's International Executive Board traditionally picks a target company to press for a pattern-setting settlement —or, in case of continued disagreement, to strike. The last UAW strike, against Ford in 1967, lasted eight days.

The UAW also is negotiating a new contract with American Motors, but the present contract there does not expire until mid-October.

The Big Three settlement traditionally serves as the pattern for new pacts with supply plants and the agricultural implement and aerospace industries.

The AFL-CIO has pledged its support to the UAW despite the fact the auto union has dropped out of the giant labor organization.

Woodcock told the UAW Community Action Council in Grand Rapids Monday that the union would not be intimidated by either a threat of a lockout by auto-makers or a prolonged strike. There has been some speculation in Eastern financial circles that the auto-makers may resort to an industry-wide lockout if one company is struckbound.

Woodcock, who succeeded the late UAW President Walter P. Reuther, repeated Monday that the UAW would strike against one of the auto-makers unless a pattern-setting contract is reached by midnight Sept. 14, when current three-year pacts expire.

The UAW has built up a $130 million strike fund in preparation for the negotiations.

The union has asked for a "substantial" but so far unspecified wage increase, the removal of the ceiling on the cost-of-living wage clause tied to the U.S. consumer price index and the option to retire with a $6,000 annual pension after 25 years of service, regardless of age.

The companies have said they would strongly resist an unlimited cost-of-living clause.

In 1967 bargaining, the UAW agreed to limit the cost-of-living increases to a maximum of eight cents an hour for each of the last two years of the contract.

Under current contracts, the average hourly pay of U.S. auto-workers is $4.86. The automakers say that fringe benefits add $1.75 hourly.

Ontario Sunday Storm Damage Placed at $4 Million by EMO

TORONTO (CP) — A thunderstorm which lashed sections of Southern Ontario Sunday night inflicted damage of about $4 million, John Pollard, commissioner of the Emergency Measures Organization, said Monday.

"It was the worst thing since hurricane Hazel," he said. "What amazes me is that people weren't killed or injured."

Hurricane Hazel, which roared through Southern Ontario in October, 1954, killed 82 persons and caused damage of about $25 million.

Sunday's storm, which swept towards Toronto from Georgian Bay, knocked down powerlines near Kitchener, smashed houses in Caledon Township, destroyed a DC-3 aircraft at Toronto International Airport and damaged homes and factories in the Toronto area before blowing itself out over Lake Ontario.

The storm tore the roof off the Aero Hotel near the airport and part of the roof of an airport hangar. Two helicopters were blown over and damaged extensively.

Winds gusting up to 70 miles an hour ripped the roofs off several factory buildings in the borough of Etobicoke and damaged several homes. Power to some factories in the borough was still off Monday because of damage to a transformer station. Service was expected to be restored today.

The storm also disrupted air service to and from Toronto International Airport. Flights out of Toronto affecting 3,000 passengers were cancelled and incoming flights affecting 1,000 persons were diverted to Montreal, Ottawa, London, Windsor and Buffalo.

In some areas near Kitchener, power was disrupted for about an hour after two 25,000-volt lines were knocked down.

DRUNK DRIVER

PARYS, South Africa (AP) — Ludewyk Christoffel Maloney, 37 was fined $70 for drunken driving on his bicycle, magistrate's court reported.

Kingston Tenants Ousted

KINGSTON (CP) — Police cleared city council chambers here Monday night after about 30 members of a tenants' association interrupted a council meeting.

The chambers were cleared after council voted to exclude spectators and press after a member for the Association of Tenants' Action Kingston (ATAK) wanted to state some grievances.

Earlier, Mayor Valerie Swain had advocated the meeting because a member of the group wanted to read a petition on rent control.

Maddie Tousley, secretary of the association, told the mayor:

"You only listen to people who have property and money and you won't listen to people like myself who don't have money and don't have property."

Two aldermen, John Meister and Joan Kuyek, also left when the room was cleared. Both are members of the tenants' association.

Executive Secretary Of Social Service

OTTAWA (CP) — Phyllis Harrison of Ottawa will still have plenty of time to work on her book, although she has recently been appointed the Canadian executive secretary of International Social Service.

The organization, with its head office in Geneva, operates in Canada as a unit of the Canadian Welfare Council and Miss Harrison says she is happy that her new job is a part-time one at present.

The International Social Service arranges services for people with problems caused by migration from one country to another, working through existing welfare agencies.

The whole range of individual and family problems of a social or legal nature is handled, including inter-country adoption.

"It's a liaison service, Miss Harrison says. "We don't initiate action, but we help with the procedure at both ends.

"In adoptions, for example, a Canadian Chinese couple might want to adopt a Chinese child. So we would get in touch with the appropriate agency in Hong Kong. That isn't too common any more, as the agencies in Hong Kong are not having difficulty finding adoptive homes for children there.

The society's North American office is in New York City, and Miss Harrison says arrangements to transport children from one country to another, and provision of an escort for small children are made there.

"Canada hasn't been much involved in bringing in children from other countries, but since the Korean War there have been many children moved from there to the United States. Of course, many of these have American fathers.

"It's the responsibility of the parent to pay for transportation, but what usually happens is that a group of five or six children will be brought in and one will be accompanied by an escort, and the parents split the cost of the escort's fee."

Miss Harrison is quick to point out that there are complications in finding homes for children in other countries. Adoptive parents have may not be the same, and legal requirements may also differ.

FEARS ALLAYED

"Some people don't like the idea of children going to other countries because they don't know what type of home they will be going to. But if the agencies involved at both ends have comparable adoptive procedures and attitudes, these fears should be allayed."

Inter-country adoptions are only a small portion of the problems handled by the society, however.

It is also involved in problems of maintenance—where a man has emigrated to Canada, leaving in his country of origin a wife and family whom the courts have ordered him to support.

"We haven't any legal teeth to force him to pay," Miss Harrison said. "We can only encourage him to pay voluntarily."

The international society also becomes involved when a divorced parent uses his or her visiting rights to take the child to another country.

"The parent with legal guardianship can start proceedings against the other one where he or she is living. The ISS might be asked to contact an agency in the country which the child has been taken to, to find out what the situation is."

The Ottawa office handles 20 to 30 new cases each month, with 300 active at any one time.

In addition to her new duties, Miss Harrison is still working on a book, Children Canada Forgot, which deals with the experiences of children who were brought over to Canada during a 70-year period by a variety of British child emigration societies.

"At least 18,000 British children were brought here from Great Britain to work on farms during the 70-year period, the last arriving as recently as 1930.

"They were destitute children . . . They were, in fact, indentured servants, ranging in age from 10 to 15 years, and they were indentured until they were 18."

Miss Janet Elizabeth Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Courtland Miller, graduated from the Kingston General Hospital School of Nursing on August 21. Janet has accepted a position on the staff at the same hospital.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Miss Delores Demorest has successfully passed her summer examinations and will again be teaching in Kingston. She is now enjoying a vacation in Toronto and London, Ontario.

WEDDING

BAILEY — MURPHY

TWEED — Sacred Heart of Mary Church, Madoc, was the scene of the wedding when Father P. Murphy united in marriage Noreen Margaret Murphy, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Murphy of Tweed, to Donald Frederick Bailey, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bailey of RR 3, Madoc.

Organist, John Murphy, of Millbridge, played traditional wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Harold (Karen) Bailey.

The bride wore a floor-length gown of white nylon embossed organza over satin, in Victorian style, and a tiered shoulder - length veil. She carried a bouquet of white 'mums, baby's breath and pink and yellow rosebuds.

Miss Mary Murphy was her sister's maid of honor, and she wore a yellow flowered empire - styled floor - length gown of the same material as that of the bride, with a matching yellow picture hat. She carried a bouquet of white and pink carnations.

Flower girl, Miss Anna Marie Masterson, wore a white flowered empire gown of the same material as the bride and bridesmaids and she carried a basket of white and yellow carnations.

Wayne Bailey, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and ushers were Mr. Michael Murphy and Mr. Michael Murphy and Mr. Raymond Bailey. Robert (Bob) Bailey was ring - bearer.

At the wedding dinner served in the Sacred Heart Parish Hall, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a blue crimp dress with a matching blue hat, beige accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Assisting her, the bridegroom's mother wore a bone white crimp dress, a gold hat and a corsage of pink roses.

Guest Smith of Virginiatown was master of ceremonies. An evening reception was held in St. Carthagh's Hall, in Tweed.

Double Wedding Ceremony for Tweed Sisters

St. Carthagh's Church, Tweed, was the scene of the recent double wedding of Bernadette Mary Gabourie and Harold Laurence Ervine, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Ervine of Thomasburg; and Anne Catherine Gabourie and Daniel Martin Simundson, son of Mrs. S. Simundson, Kingston, and the late Mr. Simundson.

The brides were given in marriage by their mother, Mrs. W Gabourie, Tweed. Both brides were similarly attired in gowns of white crepe with chantilly lace bodice, sleeves and chapel train. Their flowered headpieces held their floored silk illusion veils in place. They carried cascade bouquets of sweetheart roses and stephanotis.

Maid of honor for her sister Bernadette, was Miss Maureen Gabourie of Vancouver, attired in a floor-length pink crepe gown, with gathered yoke and jewel neckline. The bridesmaids wore gowns similar to the maid of honor — Miss Pretoria Johnston, Belleville in blue, and Mrs. Gary Hunt, Tweed, in yellow. These attendants carried bouquets of shasta daisies and were matching flowers in their hair. The flower girl, Miss Catherine McAvoy of Oshawa, cousin of the bride, was dressed identically to the maid of honor in a pink crepe gown and carried a basket of shasta daisies.

Miss Marlene Gabourie, Peterborough, was maid of honor for her cousin Anne, gowned in pink crepe. The bridesmaids were Miss Linda Parks, Tweed, wearing gown of blue crepe, and Mrs. Francis Kearns, Kingston, wearing yellow crepe. Miss Leisa Whalen, Kingston, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. The gowns of these attendants were identical to those in the first group.

Best man for Harold was his brother Ronald Ervine of Oshawa and ushers were Leo LeSage, Oshawa and Leonard Ervine of Peterborough.

Dennis McBrien of Kingston was best Mass and delivered an appropriate homily. Acolytes were cousins of the brides, Mark Thompson, Kingston, and Brian Kirby, Stirling. Soloist was Leonard Whalen, Centreville, with Sister Rita Gleason as organist.

For the wedding trip through northern New York State and to Niagara Falls, Anne chose a white Forted Raschel knit dress with a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

Consumer Affairs Dept. Handles Many Complaints

OTTAWA (CP) — After about two years of operation, the consumer affairs department's complaint and inquiry service called Box 99 is still going strong, having dealt with almost 20,000 complaints and inquiries since its inception.

In its first two months, the service received 1,300 complaints, mostly about trade practices. Its mailing address is The Consumer, Box 99, Ottawa, Ont.

The emphasis quickly switched to food. In 1968 and 1969, complaints involving food topped the list, followed by motor vehicles and accessories, and wearing apparel. Real Estate and housing took fourth place over appliances in 1969. Food was also one of the biggest topics for inquiries.

Prices led the list of complaints by category in 1969, followed by quality, composition, alleged unethical practices and advertising.

The same trends are evident from Jan. 1 to June 30 this year. In that time, the complaints, inquiries and administration division of the consumer services branch, which handles Box 99, got 1,438 complaints about food, more than 800 of which were either about quality or prices.

Next in line were labelling and packaging, followed by standardization and advertising.

As in 1969, Ontario is producing the largest number of complaints, followed by British Columbia, where Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford represents the riding of Vancouver Centre.

Inquiries processed in 1969 numbered 1,594, an increase of 66 per cent from 1968. More than 40 per cent of the total fell into the subject areas of foods, government functions and services, and publications.

A little more than five per cent concerned detergents and their effect on water pollution.

About the same trends are continuing in the first six months of 1970, but inquiries about government functions and services have taken the lead over food.

J. L. Catley, assistant director of the consumer services branch, said almost as many men use Box 99 as women.

"We are completely equipped to handle complaints in the French language and the number of these increased perceptibly this spring," he said.

Aside from resulting in numerous bulletins about subjects concerning consumers, the Box 99 service also sparked an interdepartmental study of hearing aids.

The Box 99 complaints probably also influenced the consumer affairs department in its formulation of regulations under the Hazardous Products Act. The regulations set out certain warning symbols and information to be included on the labels of containers of toxic substances.

As well, the consumer service has shown that the lack of adequate care and fibre labelling on fabrics concern many Canadian consumers.

This spring Parliament passed a bill requiring names of fibres "present" for more than five per cent by weight of a fabric to be shown on the labels of a wide range of garments.

Prepared for Days

Women Waitresses Are Replaced

CORONADO, Calif. (AP)— Within a week after Women's Liberation Day, 90 veteran waitresses have learned they apparently will be replaced by men at President Nixon's state dinner Thursday honoring Mexican President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz.

"Aren't we good enough to serve the president and his guests?" asks Ivy Easley, 40, a waitress for 25 years.

"We've been getting ready for days," she said Monday. "Many of us even bought expensive wigs."

Tim Elborne, a White House spokesman, said simply, "state dinners have always been served by waiters."

About 50 waiters have been hired through the San Diego local of the Waiters and Bartenders Union AFL-CIO, a union spokesman said.

The waitresses, who work six days a week and make $70 to $80 in tips during their four-hour dinner shift, stand to lose a day's wages.

They have sent their story via telegram to the western White House in California Gov. Ronald Reagan and to several congressmen.

COLD DUCK?

You must be kidding!

Nobody kids about a great wine in a champagne bottle with a wired-on cork, and a fancy foil capsule. This pink, pink wine with millions of crazy bubbles deserves all that fuss. And a name like COLD DUCK. After all, what else could you call it? After the first sip, you'll call it delicious.

Births Averted

NEW DELHI (AP) — Government figures indicate the national family planning program has averted 3.1 million births in India during the last three years. Experts have estimated the population might balloon from the current 540 million to more than one billion by the year 2000 if the birth rate is not controlled.

Physical Problems Tied Up with Emotions

By DORIS CLARK

The doctor has always to ask himself why does a particular person fall ill at a particular time and in a particular way.

The human life is so complex and our ignorance still so great that even simple studies of life's events in relationship to disease can be illuminating.

For instance, the defeat of Germany in the last war produced tremendous social disruption — families, regiments, factories, so nearly all social groups were affected. This disruption was reflected in the strikingly high incidence of certain diseases, such as stomach ulcers, high blood pressure and heart disease.

The psychosomatic approach has to take account of both short and long-term stresses, for both the degree and the duration of the stresses are important. Every man has his breaking point in the end, although the human spirit is very tough. The Psychosomatic Disorders Mental Health Research Fund).

It seems that even very tangible physical troubles are tied up with emotional factors. A man may drop dead as a result of healthy extreme anger, just as he may collapse from physical over-exertion. Overwork and overstrain may prove equally lethal.

In an easy - to - read 15-page booklet is discussed the psychosomatic approach to disease. If you think a copy would help you or someone you know, write in for one, enclosing a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dear Doris: My husband finally confessed his behavior after I confronted him with an underskirt of his covered with lipstick. He admitted to seeing women, and after a party, if one was, as he put it, his type, he would have her for his evening.

He says he doesn't feel he has hurt anyone and, given the opportunity, he would do it again. If I hadn't "snooped" everything would still be kept that way. — A.B.

He sulks constantly now, insists that my knowing of his adultery has done this to our marriage. I am to go my way and he is to go his.

In spite of everything I still love him and want to try to have a marriage again but it's almost impossible to do this by myself. — Confrontation.

Dear Confrontation: His idea of morality seems to be that the only thing wrong about doing wrong is if someone upsets the boat by finding out about it. And you are supposed to close your eyes to future indiscretions. Would he accept the same standards for you?

Married love is not called upon to accept this kind of insult. If you need help in summoning the fortitude to stand up to him, get it. Talk with a counsellor.

* * *

Dear Doris: I have so many problems, I don't know where to start. So many teachers give me such sour mash little things, although I try to do my best. My parents criticize my friends. My father teases me about sex, so I start quarrelling with him. I feel like running away from home.

Is there any kind of job I could get with grade eight? I am 15 years old. — Troublesome.

Dear Troublesome: Any kind? Probably. Good, kind? Doubtful. Every year of schooling you soak up now will make for a more interesting career.

There are the years when you develop personality and learn to get along with people, and your parents and teachers are just trying to help. Talk with the teacher you like best. Ask her to let you know, some time, when you do well. Same to your Dad.

Try to be a little more easy going; less willing to argue. You can make it; other teens have!

A Favorite Cheesecake

By MARY MOORE

For pure Cheese Cake perfection this recipe takes first prize.

Being a purist at heart my friend Iris made it without crumb crust, without topping and modestly served it to four of us. We all went back for seconds and consumed the whole thing.

Be sure to clip this beauty.

IRIS' CHEESE CAKE

Two 8-oz. pkgs. white cream cheese (room temperature)
3 medium-large eggs (room temperature)
⅔ cup sugar
¼ tsp. salt
½ tsp. almond extract
½ pint dairy sour cream
½ tsp. vanilla.
½ tbsp. sugar (second amount)
½ tsp. salt (second amount)

In small beater bowl beat cheese until fluffy. Add eggs, sugar (first amount), salt (first amount), and extract and beat until thick and pale lemon color. Pour into buttered 9" pie plate (crumb crust optional — see below). Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 20 min. Cool 20 min. then mix remaining ingredients and spread on cake. Return to oven and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 10 min. Cool then chill thoroughly. Cut into pie-like wedges and serve on your finest tea plates.

If you must have a Crumb Crust on your Cheese Cake, here it is

CRUMB CRUST

1 1-3 cups graham cracker crumbs
1-3 cup brown sugar
½ tsp. cinnamon
1-3 cup melted butter or margarine

Combine ingredients mixing well until crumbly; press crumbs onto sides and bottom of a well-buttered 9" pie plate.

If not using glaze (see below) reserve ½ cup crumbs to sprinkle over surface of baked cake.

Cherry Glaze use canned cherry pie filling.

Ann Landers

Advice to 'Nosey Land Ladies' Received

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Today I received two copies of your advice to "Nosey Landladies" in the mail. Of course there was no hint as to who sent them, but I can guess.

ANN LANDERS

No wonder you have a lot of fans. You look the other way while people do every rotten thing they can think of and call it "minding your own business."

I am a Nosey Landlady and I'm proud of it. Some property owners don't care who they rent to so long as the money comes in. I'm not one of those. I have nine apartments, all occupied by decent, law-abiding, God-fearing girls. Five of my tenants are under 20 and they come from small towns in Indiana and Illinois.

I don't rent unless I get the right answers to my questions. Before I take a girl's check I want to know where she stands on cigarettes, alcohol, dope, fornication, adultery, religion, gun control, sex education in public schools, communism and fluoride in drinking water. My home is my castle and I intend to keep it that way. — A.B.

* * *

DEAR LADY GUINEVERE: Thanks for the latest word from Camelot. If I run into any girls who are looking for a room, I'll have them checked out by the F.B.I., give them lie detector tests, have their bodies x-rayed for impurities and send them over.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why can't married children leave their parents alone? Our two are in their early 30s, colleges graduates and considered bright. Our son married a girl both married "well" (whatever that means). Now, all they do is fight with their spouses, and over in excruciat things you can imagine.

I've begged them to leave me out of their family arguments but we don't live anything on the Ark. I don't want to see them at Christmas because this is the season when we are getting the worst of it. They are so fearful and anxious, serve as mediator for the sake of the children? The little ones with all the emotional problems they need setting, nail chewing, stuttering, unexplained skin rashes.

Pastoral counseling has not helped. The four of them are like kids. It makes me sick and it is ruining their children. What can I do, Ann? — CHAOS IN KY.

* * *

DEAR O.I.K.: There's not a great deal you can do, but you can do something. First, refuse to act as the referee. Pick up and leave the room when storm clouds gather. If they start to battle at your house, tell them to knock it off and settle their arguments at home. Spend as much time with the grandchildren as you can. If their pediatrician feels the children need professional help, urge him to suggest it to their parents. And don't let the wacky warriors give up on counseling for themselves. A change in counselor has provided the answer for others and it might work for them.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What are the chances for this marriage succeeding? The boy is 23. The girl is 22. They were officially engaged in January. Norma has thrown a ring in Bob's face three times. When he gets home his telephone is ringing. She is sorry and wants him to come back with the ring.

Last night they had a hair-pulling fight. Bob refused to come back when Norma called. Her mother telephoned him and said Norma was going to jump out of the window if he didn't bring the ring back.

I am Bob's mother. Do you think after they get married they will settle down and grow up? Please advise. I am worn out and so is everyone else. — OHIO.

DEAR O: Marriage is no cure for these two dingbats. The letter above will give you an idea of what is in store for kids like Norma and Bob. They need to grow up before they consider marriage. With good counseling it will take at least 18 months.

Candidates Want Women's Votes

The national election registry says more than 3.5 million of the country's 8 million inhabitants will be eligible to vote in Friday's election and that almost 49 per cent of these are women.

Election officials predict that in Santiago, the capital and largest city, and in Valparaiso, the second largest city, more women than men are likely to go to the polls.

The candidates — former president Jorge Alessandri, an independent backed by the right wing; Christian Democrat Radomiro Tomic and Socialist Salvador Allende — have tailored their campaigns with an eye on the 1.6 million women voters.

Previous elections have indicated that Chile's women tend to favor moderate candidates, leading some observers to predict that Alessandri stands a better chance to gather their votes than either of his leftist opponents.

All three candidates have carried on a press and radio campaign aimed at attracting the female voter. And each has staged women-only rallies.

The Age of Appollo Fashions Steal Spotlight at Athens Show

ATHENS (CP) — Fashions in resort and beachwear turned back to the pure paganism of the era of Apollo and Aphrodite at the Hellenic Fashion Institute collection showings this summer.

Four nearly-nude males leaped into view for the shoe's opening wearing printed silk sarongs as if they had leaped off the designs on museum vases. On their bare chests swung clanking chains and medallions in the new "virile jewelry." They crossed their arms in the stiffed position of the Colossus of Rhodes for a cool-eyed appraisal of the 300 international fashion editors and buyers for major stores on two continents.

The shirt suit, a simple tunic for men worn with matching pants, replaced the more conventional jacket and trousers for several numbers. Fast becoming favored international hot-weather wear, the new casual features softer fabrics, knits, comfortably cut, sun colors with yellow as prime, or earthy tones.

Indications of the acceptance of the casual shirt suit appeared among male members of the audience. Tom Crater of John Wanamaker of Philadelphia sent a lieut.-colonel, the gear tie at throat and a hipster belt in elaborate design. Chip Talbot, fashion consultant for Esquire magazine, appeared as Solomon in his glory in unmatched prints for shirt and slacks, the shirt open for a four-button exposure of chest.

Commentator for the show, Talbot quoted a leading Athens designer of male fashions, Economou, who insists on "a gay abandon" in order to escape the anxieties of modern living.

The escape is achieved, judging from the collections, by "playing it cool" in sizzling weather with the discard of the shirt. Designer Voulonbaskalis showed printed fabric jacket on a white background worn over bare flesh. Tie or neck scarf were replaced by a chain and clasp of barbaric jewelry.

Building the manufacture of footwear steadily, Greek designers favor the moccasin last for fall wear. The leathers are buffed to a high gloss with an antiqued effect of color-on-color.

RAIN AFFECTS PRICES

Too much or too little rain affects sharply the prices Canadian housewives pay for spices and herbs.

Religion Combined In Plays

TORONTO (CP) — Rex and Rita Deverell of Toronto are attempting to weave theatre and religion into a single feeling.

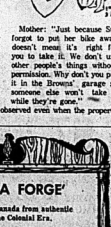
They met in New York where they had come to study theology. Rita had already been pondering the link between theatrical and religious feelings.

"Whenever people get together and experience some kind of large presence," she said in an interview, "they leave changed people. That's worship. And I think that happens many times in the theatre."

Rex recently left his post at St. Deverell of Toronto as its Kitchener, Ont., to write plays which, he emphasizes, are not morality plays.

The playwright, he said, "assembles the facts so the mysteries will emerge by themselves."

"A kind of insight will come through that is new even to him."



The couple has moved to Toronto but Mr. Deverell has not abandoned his pastoral duties. He will continue to return to St. Thomas until the fall to conduct services.

In the meantime, he writes plays that are partly influenced by his vocation as a minister. To Rex the Bible is "kind of like an explosion of meaning." Man could catch some of the fragments which would take him further in life.

While in Toronto, the Deverells will continue their weaving of artistry and religion. As Rita said, the reason they "praise God this way is because this is what we can do."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Gas Pains Reason To Consult Doctor

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I'm in a dilemma. I know I ought to see my doctor, but I keep putting it off.

It may seem like a silly reason, but I hate to bother him because he may label me a hypochondriac. Having known a few friends who were in that category — always complaining about little things and scared they'd die — I vowed I'd never be a candidate for that classification.

To come to the point, I am 52, and feel completely healthy except that for the past few months I've been having indigestion when I walk. Gas seems to fill my chest and press on me. I stop for a few minutes and the pain — pressure goes away as if by magic. No other complaints. I get to the office and forget about it.

My wife says it may be heart trouble, but I tell her that she's trying to make a hypochondriac out of me. If I went to the doctor, he'd laugh me right out of his office. Don't you agree that too many people bother doctors for silly complaints and take up their precious time? — Mr. D.

Comment: As one who is especially interested in preventive medicine, I think you've come to the right place for an opinion, I am biased. I believe that whatever the complaint, nothing is unimportant and "silly" until it has been investigated and proved innocent.

Even at the risk of making a real hypochondriac out of you, I must say your wife may be right. I think it's important that your doctor have the opportunity to look you over to make certain that the "gas and indigestion" is not due to coronary disease causing anginal attacks. Your trouble may be due to a faulty gall bladder or something else.

But this is all guesswork. It's your own doctor's job to diagnose your case.

Forget about the shame of being labeled a hypochondriac. Some time ago I wrote that it makes better sense to be a live hypochondriac at 80 than a dead super-athlete at 50. No complaint should be considered "silly" unless examination proves it is entirely innocent.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Your column about the woman who said she whipped her child with a belt prompted me to write this letter. Many of the parents I know whip their children with a stick, paddle, or a belt. When they use a belt, I've noticed some times actually get wild. I wish they knew how crazy-eyed they look.

What's wrong with these parents? As I recall, the least my parents used on my bottom - side seemed adequate. I think that when a child gets so out of hand the parents have to beat it with a belt, both the parents and the child need help.

I've never used anything but my hand on our child. And he seems to act better and is happier than all the belt-beaten kids. — Mrs. S.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: The mother who signed herself Mrs. B. wrote you that her 6 - year - old son gets a good beating with a thick strap and becomes ill after a beating. Well, I think both parents should be tied to a post and whipped until they are black and blue. Maybe a taste of their own bitter medicine will wake them up to how cruel they're being to a helpless child. — Mrs. B. (Unrelated to first Mrs. B.)

Comment: As you might guess, most of the mail is against the belt - beaters.

Lack of Information Solidifies Front Against Paper Mill

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

WELLINGTON (Staff) — A solid front of community opposition is mounting against the proposed kraft paper mill in Hillier township.

About 300 people at a panel discussion here last night, called by Pollution Unwanted, supported a request to authorities to consider re - siting of the mill.

"Maintain Prince Edward County as an agricultural and recreational area, one of the last such areas within reasonable distance of the heavily populated and industrial areas of Ontario," their resolution demanded.

The meeting, originally called "to investigate the evidence, question the experts," was weakened by the absence of the expected experts.

Called by Jack Purtelle, Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce president, and presided over by William West, chairman of the PU committee, the discussion drew protests objecting loudly to the construction of the proposed mill.

Mr. Purtelle said the officials directly connected with the project had been forced to decline PU's telegraphed invitations because of short notice and prior commitments.

Among the absentees were Hon. George Hees, MP for Prince Edward - Lennox and Norris Whitney, MPP for Prince Edward - Lennox.

Fielding questions were Gary Wright, a representative of the community planning branch of the department of municipal affairs; William Smith, conservationist with the Bay of Quinte Regional Tourist Council and Frank Parker, a Prince Edward county conservationist.

The meeting revealed a solid community front against pollution. In a show of hands vote, the chairman recorded only about six persons in favor of construction of the kraft mill. A handful of persons was undecided.

Those in attendance called for elected representatives of the several jurisdictions in the county to determine immediately the long and short term effects of the proposed mill.

They asked for information on the exact amount of water pollutants to be discharged by the proposed mill and the consequences of air pollution.

By resolution, the majority demanded that county representatives determine the number of workers who will be imported into the community to build and operate the mill

CORK Gives Canadian Sailors More Than They Bargained For

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian Olympic Training Regatta Kingston (CORK) was established last year to give Canadian sailors a taste of top-flight international competition.

Judging by the results of the first two days of racing in this year's event, the Canucks are getting more than they bargained for.

Some of the top yachtsmen in the United States and Europe swept every class in all 11 classes Sunday and Monday, racing over four courses in Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River.

American yachts had double wins in seven classes and Britons had two doubles. American yachts also won in the Star and Lightning classes which —had their first races Monday.

Sailors from England, Denmark, the Bahamas and Bermuda—many sailing in borrowed boats—began to show up strongly on the second day as they mastered their unfamiliar craft and unknown waters.

The Canadians, although missing out on the top spots, put up a respectable showing with three second-place listings and four thirds when the standings were computed Monday night.

There were a number of head-to-head contests, with the same yachts placing first, second or third in both races, while some of the younger sailors were making a strong bid to put down their more experienced competitors among the 474 yachts registered for the six-day regatta.

One battle involving both elements was in the Fireball class between Peter Bateman of England, the 1968 world champion, was slugging it out with a 16-year-old American and Martin Herbert, an 18-year-old Canadian.

Herbert, an arts student at the University of Calgary, placed second in the first race. With his third-place finish Monday, it put him in third spot overall.

Herbert took the lead heading for the jibing mark on a spinnaker reach, but he was afraid to raise the spinnaker "because I didn't think we had the speed."

"Even when we put ours up, boats passed us," said Herbert, who took time most of his sailing on the Glenmore Reservoir in Calgary with his female crew, 19-year-old Sydney Bell of Calgary.

He was engaged in a three-way battle with Terry Thom of Ann Arbor, Mich., reserved in the over-all standings, and Brent Poulsen of Oakville, Ont., who was fourth over-all at CORK last year.

Two wins were scored by Ray White of England in the Fireball class.

Canada's best showings in the standings were two seconds.

Dave Miller of Vancouver was No. 2 behind Rod Steiges of Zeeda, Wis., in the Soling class. Sharing second spot was E. R. Cooper of Hamilton, Bermuda.

Harry Jemmett of Kingston, Ont., was runner-up to Dennis Clark of Kent, Wash. in the International 5.5 class but had to share second spot with Ken Rose of Seattle, Wash.

Want Team by '72

London Business Group Seeking CFL Franchise

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A group of London businessmen announced Monday it will make a Canadian Football League franchise application Sept. 8 for entry of a London team into the Canadian Football League.

It hopes to field a team by the 1972 season.

The committee in charge of organizing the move said it would build a 30,000 seat stadium at a cost of nearly $2 million.

Bob Harris, a London real estate agent and a member of the committee, said the stadium would have an Astro-Turf field surface and an all-weather track.

He said CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur has been receptive to the idea of such a club which would round the league out to 10 teams.

CFL bylaws call for unanimous acceptance by the Eastern Conference teams.

Mr. Harris said the informal application is more of a letter of inquiry, but if the reply is encouraging the group will formally apply at the Grey Cup.

Bob VanEmmerik, president in charge of London Lords of the Senior OHFU, said "from the standpoint of balancing their schedule our entry makes common sense. Geographically, we are ideally situated."

Mr. Harris said he wasn't worried about raising the $25,000 CFL entry fee, but said the cost and method of player availability would be the stumbling most. It is the group's understanding it said, that players might cost $15,000 each under a draft system.

If the initial bid in Toronto Sept. 8 is ignored or action delayed by the CFL, the committee said it would go to the bill.

Mr. Harris said financing the stadium would be handled by a directorship representing 10 shares each which the Free Press group would be worth $50,000 each. He said there would be no limit to the number of persons involved in each share.

In Edmonton, Jack Baker, president of the Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference said: "It's something the league has looked forward to for a good number of years."

Mr. Baker said a London team would help the league —five teams in each conference —and make scheduling much easier.

London could support a team because it is the centre of a heavy population belt, he added.

Argonauts Make Last Offers For Forecasts, Figures

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts' offence has failed to live up to pre-season predictions of greatness but several blue-shirted standouts remain high among the Eastern Football Conference ground-gainers.

The Argos have produced only two victories in five tries but their halfbacks lead the EFC rushing, they're the top three pass receivers and their two quarterbacks are among the top four pass throwers.

The Canadian Football League weekly statistics also show the Argos leading in the EFC punting and punt-return departments.

The Argos, however, have played two more games than Montreal Alouettes who lead the EFC with three straight victories and one more game than either Hamilton Tiger-Cats or Ottawa Rough Riders.

Toronto halfback Bill Symons leads the EFC in rushing with 316 yards on 67 carries while teammate Dave Ramey has caught 17 times for 248 yards. Ottawa's Jim Mankins is third with 313 yards on 49 carries.

The Argo pass receivers are flanker Jim Thorpe who has caught 22 for 342 yards gained, and Mel Profit with 13 for 212 yards and end Tony Moro with nine for 191. Hamilton's Tommy Joe Coffey is fourth with 13 passes caught for 186 yards.

Ottawa's Gary Wood is the leading passer in the East. He has completed 56 of 102 passes attempted for 814 yards. Toronto's Don Jonas is second with 44 of 87 and 748 yards.

Hamilton's Joe Zuger has completed 40 of 67 for 577 yards while Tom Wilkinson of the Argos was good on 34 of 52 for 517 yards.

Dave Mann of Toronto has taken over from Hamilton's Joe Zuger at the leading punter with 1,761 yards on 39 kicks. But Zuger still has the best average —48.1 yards.

ANDY CAPP

Ski Team Waxing Professional?

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's national alpine ski team is getting a head start on its training program this year, thanks to a tour financed by the ski industry.

Ed Creed, chairman of the Canadian Amateur Ski Association's alpine program, said Monday a dozen of 25 skiers will leave Sept. 22 for a training tour in Europe and return just before Christmas.

About $35,000 of the $40,000 tour cost will come from manufacturers of skis, ski boots and other related equipment and supplies, Creed said.

The alpine chairman said he doesn't expect any opposition to the plan from Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, who tends to brand as professional any skier who accepts money from equipment manufacturers.

"Our racers will not be supported individually by the industries," said Creed. "The industries will be supporting them on this tour, but through our Canadian Amateur Ski Association.

"We are taking this money and using it for the benefit of the whole team rather than for any one individual member."

Mets Making Different Tack To NL Title

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York Mets, who won the World Series in 1969 with a young pitching staff, may take another route to the title this year—with their bats.

They snapped a three-game losing streak Monday night by trouncing St. Louis Cardinals 11-4 with the help of two-run singles by Donn Clendenon, Art Shamsky and Cleon Jones and Tommie Agee's 22nd home run.

That was the only game in the National League and the East Division standings now show Pittsburgh Pirates on top by one game over Chicago Cubs and 1½ over the Mets.

In a sparse American League schedule, Baltimore Orioles crushed New York Yankees 10-2, Boston Red Sox topped Detroit Tigers 4-3 and Washington Senators held off Cleveland Indians 5-4.

While the talented young Mets have displayed the ability at times to serve up hits of all kinds to the opposition, the once punchless Met bats are taking up some of the slack.

"It's encouraging that we're getting the hitting," said manager Gil Hodges, "because we're not pitching well. . . .

"Clendenon's done well at the plate, Agee's doing well and Jones has been swinging the bat a lot better the last week. It's good to get back on the winning track. Holy cow, it's been a long dry spell."

The dry spell covered six losses in seven games, and even though the Mets dropped from second place to third they gained ground on the Pirates, who lost six in a row.

Mets starter Jerry Koosman, saving a bad start with relief, yielded a three-run homer to Joe Torre in the sixth, followed by Jose Cardenal's single and another home run by Ted Simmons, and the lead was a shaky 6-5. But the Mets wrapped it up with five runs over the final three innings.

Vic Davalillo of the Cards drilled a pitch single in the ninth and set an NL record of 23 pinch hits in a season, one short of the major league mark.

The Orioles blasted five of the Yankees quickly, scoring four runs in the first inning. Mike Cuellar breezed to his 21st victory, aided by Brooks Robinson's two-run homer and RBI single.

Frank Howard's 36th home run with a man on capped a four-run fifth inning that carried the Senators past the Indians. The long blast tied Howard with Minnesota's Harmon Killebrew for the league home run lead.

Terry Found Energy

OTTAWA (CP) — Halfback Terry Wellesley nailed down a starting position with Ottawa Rough Riders last week when he ran for three touchdowns against British Columbia Lions.

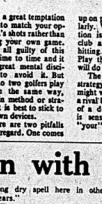
But the 22-year-old rookie from Belleville appeared to have little chance to make the Eastern Football Conference club when he attended tryout camp earlier this summer.

Wellesley was at Tennessee Tech on a football scholarship this spring when he developed mononucleosis, a blood disease that leaves its victims with little energy.

He was weak and overweight at 218 pounds during the camp but Rider coach Jack Gotta had been sold on his ability when Wellesley attended a high school camp conducted by Riders in 1967.

"I just felt that there was a kid with a future in football," said Gotta. "That's why we were so patient with him, who dent he'd come around when he got into shape."



Now 205 pounds, Wellesley rewarded Gotta's patience with his scoring spree at Edmonton.

In two home games, Riders were anything but impressive in losing to Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Saskatchewan Roughriders, but Gotta feels the team has finally jelled in beating Eskimos and battling Lions to the final minute in a losing cause.

Lucy Cooper Says:

Golf's Million Dollar Winner

PLAY THE COURSE

It's a great temptation to try to match your opponent's shots rather than playing your own game. We're all guilty of this from time to time and it takes great mental discipline to avoid it. But since no two golfers play exactly the same way, either in method or strategy, it is best to stick to your own devices.

There are two pitfalls in this regard. One comes up on par-3 holes particularly. Where the temptation is to use the same club a normally longer-hitting foe does. Don't. Play the club you know will do the job.

The other concerns strategy. For instance, you might want to "show up" a rival by cutting off more of a dogleg corner than is sensible. Don't. Play "your" shot.

TORONTO (CP) — Mike Walton wants substantially more pay and ice time from Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, his legal adviser said Monday. Alan Eagleson said that when he last met with Jim Gregory, Leafs' general manager, 11 days ago the Toronto team was prepared to offer Walton $29,000 — the same as he received last year. Eagleson said Walton's figure is in the $50,000 range.

OTTAWA (CP) — Halfback Ron Stewart of Ottawa Rough Riders has been placed on the 30-day injury list, the Eastern Football Conference club announced Monday. Stewart broke a bone in his right arm playing against British Columbia Lions last week. Riders are expected to move Wagner Hamilton from defensive backfield to fill Stewart's spot. The club also said flanker Whit Tucker, out with a leg injury since training camp, will miss the game against Montreal Alouettes here Wednesday but is expected to dress for the following game.

TORONTO (CP) — Hockey leagues for boys under 12 will continue in the borough of Scarborough, despite a commissioner's suggestion last week that they are bad for boys at that age, John Keay, commissioner of parks and recreation, said there is too much pressure to win on boys in organized hockey. Don Montgomery, president of the Scarborough Hockey Association, said Monday the hockey leagues will continue.

Als Didn't Begin with 'Building' Story

MONTREAL (CP) — That Montreal Alouettes are currently the only undefeated team in the Canadian Football League is no surprise to the club's new management.

"To start here on the premise that we'd build for the future would have been like spitting in the eye of the fans," Red O'Quinn, general manager of the Als, said Monday.

O'Quinn, with new owner Sam Berger and with J. I. Albrecht as director of player personnel, has teamed with head coach Sam Etcheverry to lift the Alouettes from a seven-win record in 42 games over a three-year period, to a potential Grey Cup contender.

The Montreal club will attempt to make it four straight victories when it travels to Ottawa Wednesday night for a contest against the defending Grey Cup champion Rough Riders. The game will be carried at 8 p.m. EDT on CTV's Eastern network.

"We didn't have any thoughts on when we would become a winner when we took over," O'Quinn said. "But we hoped it would be soon because of the long dry spell here in other years."

When the Als beat favored Toronto Argonauts 34-27 and Edmonton Eskimos 14-10 at the 21,000-seat Autostade here, a total of 53,638 fans turned out for the two games. Last season the Montreal club drew only 84,156 for seven home games.

Montreal's third victory was a 16-10 win against the Blue Bombers at Winnipeg. A sellout crowd here Sept. 12 for Hamilton Tiger-Cats' visit could surpass the total home attendance for last season.

O'Quinn said the club sought immediate success when it went to training camp with a lot of good people, although we also knew they had to learn to play together to become a team.

"I know we've been fortunate to win the close ones so far, but that's a good sign for a ball club," O'Quinn said.

Key trades, excellent recruiting, solid coaching and professional organization have been the club's strong points this year.

The policy continued Monday when the Als signed George Springate, Liberal member of the national assembly for Montreal Ste. Anne, to take care of the place-kicking assignment.

Springate was chosen over several other candidates because of his durability and the fact that if an import kicker had been signed the Als would have found it necessary to cut import Tony Passander, backup to quarterback Sonny Wade.

The Als have 10 newcomers on this year's edition, but O'Quinn said most of them had been winners before coming here 'and they came here with no common dislike of being a loser."

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

You'd think Dave Sehl would get sick of driving after a while.

But what's a few laps of the Belleville Fairgrounds track after you've driven 148,000 miles in a year.

That's how much mileage the Waterdown, Ont. 22-year-old and his pit crew colleagues have logged in their 1969 Ford van since they started to make it big on the motorcycle racing circuit.

Monday night Sehl showed a packed Belleville grandstand why he can afford to make motorcycles his bread and butter.

Dave breezed to record-setting wins at both expert classes — the 250 and 750 cc events — in the Canadian Half-Mile Dirt Track Championships.

The wins were a giant step toward retaining the Number One plate Sehl lifted from Montreal's Yvon Duhamel last year.

"I'm not sure how many points I've got — maybe 15," said Sehl, who spends most of his pastime these preparing for the next trip. "We're off to Chicago for Wednesday — and Indianapolis on Monday."

Sehl literally can't afford to race in Canada anymore. His share of last night's Belleville purse — about $300 for winning both expert classes — is a drop in the bucket of comparable racing purses south of the border.

The lucrative (American meet purses explained the absence of the unpredictable Duhamel, whom Belleville track records were literally run into the ground by Sehl, Bob Sehl and protege brother Doug, 20, nipped tenths of a second off Duhamel's record time for the half-mile oval. Doug, who drove his Triumph second to Dave's Harley - Davidson in the 750 expert final, ran a 57 - seconds - flat lap en route to winning the first 750 heat.

Dave squalled the record in the 750 final, and also clipped three seconds off Duhamel's 10 - lap time by roaring home in 4.50 for the five miles.

The elder Sehl won all three heats of the expert 250 cc ahead of Hamilton's Maurice "Moe" Fraser, who beat Duhamel in two previous Belleville meetings this summer, then gave the Sehls a run for their 750 cc money before engine trouble forced his Triumph to the sidelines in the second heat.

The slender, 16-year-old from Flint, Michigan, has been dirt-tracking for three years. "I heard you people treat riders real well here in Belleville, so I thought I'd come up," Cummings bashfully explained after his win.

CANADIAN DIRT-TRACK HALF-MILE CHAMPIONSHIP FINALS

JUNIOR 250 cc
1. Tom Cummings (15), Flint, Michigan.
2. Don Eyo (15), Scarborough, Ont.
3. Gerry Jackson (23), Guelph, Ont.
4. Don Gibson, Intl., London, Ont.

Pestinas was released with an injured right wrist, while Binkley was transferred to hospital in Hamilton to recuperate from a fractured leg.

JUNIOR 500 cc
1. Ron Keyes (16), Oshawa, Ont.
2. Bob Richardson (17), Montreal, Que.
3. Glen Reeve (16), Lasalle Intl., Ont.
4. Garry Jackson (23), Guelph, Ont.

EXPERT 250 cc
1. Dave Sehl (21), Waterdown, Ont.
2. Maurice Fraser (28), Hamilton, Ont.

Oshawa junior Ron Keyes broke the Harley monopoly on first places when he piloted his Jawa speedway bike to an easy win in the junior 500 cc competition. His only competition came from Jawa pit-mate Bob Bickerdike.

The race program — last of three jointly staged in Belleville this summer by the city Firefighters and the Trenton Pushers Motorcycle Club — raised $500 for the Firemen's Christmas toy fund for underprivileged children.

Tinkering Tells Tale

Often, the rider who does the best pit tinkering with his motorcycle is the most successful. Dave Sehl (right), of Waterdown, Ont., is a case in point. Sehl — Canada's number one dirt-track rider in 1969 — took a giant step towards retaining his title at the Belleville Fairgrounds Monday night by winning both the 250 and 750 cc expert classes of the Canadian half-mile championships.

Scott's Glove, Duvall's Bat Deadly

Ellis Juniors downed Rollins Construction 5-1 to take the first game of the best four - of - seven Commercial League championship playoffs at the Alemite Monday night.

The Juniors jumped on top of their opposition in the first inning when Dale Duvall bothered with two men on base. In the fourth Cliff Scott got a base hit driving in Steve Ling who had doubled at his turn at bat. They accounted for their final run in the sixth when Rod Ridley placed a bunt down third, stole second on an overthrow, and scored on Ling's infield out.

Scott's leaping one - handed catch brought an ovation from the crowd and Wes May fanned to end the Rollins threat.

Reid pitched a six - hitter, striking out 12 and walking three and McConnell had a seven - hitter with nine strikeouts and three free passes.

The second game will be played Wednesday at the Alemite field, starting at 8 p.m.

Marine Wings End Perfect Summer

The Harbour Marine Wings had things pretty much their own way in Belleville Minor Softball Association play this summer.

Last night was no different, as the Wings won the city tyke softball title in two straight games with a 10-3 win over A and W Drive-in.

Tim Soule's two-hitter provided the Wings with their championship win, their 16th in as many games this season. Soule struck out 17 while only issuing two walks.

Winning pitcher Tim Soule and Bob Hedge each contributed a double and pair of singles to the Wings' attack, with Don Turner's triple, and singles by Tim Jacques and Mike Wood accounting for the other Wings' safeties.

'We're Number One'

Weese's Get First Win

Shannonville Weese's downed Dairy Queen last night 8-5 in the best three-of-five semi-final for the city women's softball championship, but Dairy Queen still lead the series two games to one.

For the winners Valerie Brown had four singles and Evelina Hill and Irma Barberstock two singles and one double each.

For the losers Kathy Brown had a single, double and triple, Beth Palmer a single and double and Judy Pulta a single.

The winning pitcher was Nora Barberstock and loser was Barb Breadner.

The next game will be played Wednesday at the Cheese Producers field, starting at 6 p.m. The winner of the series meets Cony Grill for the league championship.

Quinte area armchair quarterbacks have the chance to get a little closer to the football scene than their television screen.

A football officials' clinic will be held this weekend at the 4FTPU Building on CFB Trenton for persons interested in officiating high school football games in the area.

"We had ten Dallas handling games in Trenton, Picton, Tweed, Napanee, and who now advance against Cobourg.

Bruce McDonell struck out 11 Trenton batters in shoveling the loss, getting solid support from mates Bill Arthurs, Dave Andrews, and Rod Thorpe, who collected two hits each.

Thurlow Not All Done

Foster's Thurlow peewees last night finished their local baseball season, but are just beginning on wider fronts.

Despite outhitting their Trenton Legion "A" opponents 9-6, the Thurlow "C" team dropped a 6-3 decision and lost their BOBA Group Two Series two games to one.

Two Scores Settled

Novice and bantam were the most convincing classes in minor lacrosse play Monday, as the T-Birds captured the city's novice title with a 8 - 0 win over Goldfinch Mile and Bud Gill Appliances earned the bantam crown by blanking Teasers Food City 7-0.

K. Reynolds (4), M. Reynolds (3), and T. Walker accounted for the T-Bird goals, while Scott (3), Belanger, Grier, Donald and Cuff provided the Bud Gill bantams with their scoring punch.

The two other divisions saw their respective best-of-three final series knotted 1-1 as the Dairy Queen peewees dumped Y's Men's Club 5-2 and the 707 Jets edged Larry's Imperials 3-2.

B. Walmsley (2), Semark, Runciman, and Ward scored for the Dairy Queen, with John Geen and Rob Richardson replying for the Y's Men's Pewees.

Searle, Turner, and Hockey shared-the scoring for the 707 Jets, with Muldoon and Prescott accounting for the Imperials goals.

Legion Takes Lead

In the minor baseball peewee finals Monday Legion 39 whipped Cablevue 12-1 to take the lead in the best three-of-five series 2-1.

The winning pitchers were Brian Turner, Billy Walsh and Billy Balyx, striking out 10 and walking ten. Losers Mike McClelland and John Minnes struck out five and issued four walks.

Tony Meagher had a triple and double for the Legion, Brian Turner a triple and single, Roger Lapp a double and single and John Enright a double.

Armour Gets 4

BRANTFORD (CP) — Peterborough's fortunes dipped as Brantford Warriors 14-13 Monday for a 2-1 lead in their Ontario Lacrosse Association Senior A best-of-seven final.

Cy Coombes paced Peterborough with five goals while Bill Armour scored four. Jim Paterson added two and Ken Henderson, Gerry Collins and John Davis one each.

'C'mon Boys!'

Turbos on Track

The CN Turbos got back on the industrial Softball League's championship track Monday night, downing Union Carbide 9-5 to even their best - of - seven final playoff series at 1-1.

Brian Plumbe picked up the win for the trainmen, walking three, striking out one, and contributing two of the Turbos 12 hits.

Butch Duvall's homer and Zaine Plumbe's triple were the big Turbo blows off loser Ken Osborne, who walked four and recorded six strikeouts in absorbing the loss.

Barberstock and Bird each hit safely twice for Union Carbide, who committed five errors to three by the Turbos.

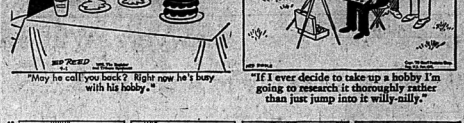
Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

This Special Hemorrhoid Remedy
Contains a Unique Healing Substance
That Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles". It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and intolerably aggravating at night.

If you want an ointment relief that's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain; it actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Even more important, tests also help prevent infection.



In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained over a period of months! Among those sufferers were a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions—even cases of long standing.

This new ointment is called by a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H.®. Ask for Preparation H. Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H. Governments, Not Students, Blamed for Troubles on Campuses

MONTREAL (CP) — Government policies came under fire Monday during the second day of the 57th annual conference of the International Association of Universities, as many delegates reprimanded politicians for not providing enough funds for the proper functioning of education institutions.

More than 500 delegates representing about 80 countries flayed against government bodies for inadequate leadership of youth and a lack of funds for proper training.

Students themselves were not criticized for recent campus upheavals and the academics and administrators at the conference tended to put the blame on the lack of money for their universities and on world crises.

Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University in South Bend, Ind., said most of the unrest today was due to "government policies."

Father Hesburgh said students today "are protesting a social disease, not university structures."

Ishaya Audu, vice-chancellor of Ahmadu Bello University in Zaria, Nigeria, said the main problem in his country was changing the well-to-do areas and the not-so-rich areas into a comprehensive and co-operative education program.

Mr. Audu said there really is no unrest caused directly by the Nigerian government. "But we must still settle the issue of controlling those who have received European influences and those who remain in tribal cultures."

"The northern countries of Nigeria are still very mindful of their tribal heritage while those of the South want to stretch toward European goals.

"This tension is our greatest concern at the moment."

Dr. Enrique Leon Lopez, technical director of the Polytechnic Institute of Mexico, said his country's main concern is the lack of communication between "ideological professors" and the bourgeois classes.

"The students in our country do not understand this ideological language [ ], and this low number of students interested in something beyond their capacity is minimal.

"We need more incentives and more funds to perpetuate this drive," Dr. Lopez said.

Professor Henri Janne of the University of Belgium said students in his country are not really protesting society "but rather the lack of good facilities."

"This lack of facilities can only be cured by government financial aid," Prof. Janne said.

Dr. Constantine Zurayk of Damascus, Syria, told the conference Monday the question of the university and its relation to society "is a most crucial element . . . and it is a very complex one."

"All discussions on university problems lead to this most important subject whose main element is the students," Dr. Zurayk said.

Today the conference will hold study sessions on the university and its role in society.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"The food's not much and the service is pretty rotten, but you never have to wait for a table."

Lawyers Will Deliberate in Ten Committees

HALIFAX (CP) — The full sweep of the law is put on display today when the Canadian Bar Association's annual convention fragments for a series of panel discussions and expert reviews.

No fewer than 10 committees are scheduled to meet simultaneously for most of the next two days, after Monday's opening general meetings for the estimated 1,200 delegates.

A measure of the variety of legal practice in modern society is given by the topics up for discussion. And the power of the legal profession can be found in the list of participants.

For a discussion on "collective bargaining in the public service," the bar has enlisted Mr. Drury, president of the treasury board if he can be spared from the painful negotiations in Ottawa. Fellow panelists are Prof. Maxwell Cohen of McGill University's law faculty and an acknowledged expert in the field; Prof. Harry W. Arthurs of Osgoode Hall law school in Toronto; and chairman John Parker of the British Columbia mediation commission.

Another meeting has been given the quaintly-titled topic, "wither municipal government?" The Liberal of panelists comprises Attorney-General E. H. Gerbart, Alberta; Municipal Affairs Minister W. S. K. Jones, Nova Scotia; Attorney-General A. H. Mackling of Manitoba, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Ontario; Justice Minister Bernard Jean, New Brunswick; and Municipal Affairs Minister Maurice Tessier, Quebec.

In the association's marine-law section there is a talk scheduled on the five-wire question of Canada's pollution control in Arctic and coastal waters. The criminal justice section will discuss bussing and its variations and the air law division tackles jumbo jets.

When the civil-justice section hears a panel talk about law reform it will have the opinions of Davie Fulton, chairman of B.C.'s law reform commission, plus two provincial deputy ministers and assorted other experts.

The bread-and-butter character of most of the talks, however glamorous, contrasts considerably with Monday's program where the theme for the five-day convention was set out in unequivocal fashion.

The delegates were charged with "aiding and abetting the perpetration of injustice" and with "failing to reform the law".

The students backed up their case with folk and rock music, strobe lights, movies and slides and a blistering commentary on the apathy of the practising lawyers. They were rewarded with a standing ovation by the capacity audience of about 600 delegates.

Arthur S. Pattillo of Toronto, retiring association president, parried the thrust of the same theme—the need for reform of both laws and the way they are administered.

GM Sets Up Environmental Advisory Board

NEW YORK (AP) — General Motors announced Monday the formation of a special committee to advise its board of directors on matters of social and environmental concern.

The committee, composed of five board members who are not company officers, "combines citizen concern and business responsibility," said James M. Roche, board chairman.

At the company's annual meeting this year, a citizens' group was defeated in its attempt to establish a similar committee composed of representatives of management, labor, environmental and consumer groups.

Chairman of the new GM committee will be John A. Mayer, chairman of the Mellon National Bank and Trust Company in Pittsburgh.

Campaign GM, a consumers' organization that has been battling the giant auto-maker, said GM's action was a direct response to the group's proposals.

Dead Captain's Blood Carried Much Alcohol

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Blood tests on the body of the captain of the sunken lake freighter Eastcliffe Hall revealed a high alcohol content, an inquiry into the sinking of the vessel was told Monday.

Dr. J. D. MacAulay, a pathologist at Cornwall General Hospital, said the sample of blood he took from the body of captain Richard Goudie contained 360 milligrams per 100 millilitres of alcohol or 0.36 per cent weight per volume. He said the captain died by drowning.

The Eastcliffe Hall, carrying 8,861 tons of pig iron to Saginaw, Mich., from Sorel, Que., sank to the bottom of the St. Lawrence July 14 within minutes of hitting a shoal.

Killed in the accident were Captain Goudie, his 16-year-old son, the chief engineer, his wife and daughter and four deckhands.

Dr. MacAulay was asked by Raynald Langlois, counsel for the marine division of the transport department, what the alcohol level implied.

He replied: "I am no expert but I have referred to my medical books and the average person would be obviously drunk."

Under questioning from A. S. Hyndman, counsel for Hall Corp. of Montreal, owners of the fast-bottomed vessel, Dr. MacAulay said he meant "by obviously drunk" that someone without medical knowledge would be able to determine by his behavior that the person was intoxicated.

The blood analysis, Dr. MacAulay said, was completed the same day as the autopsy. He said there would be a difference in the alcoholic level between the time of death and the time the sample was taken.

In a reply to Mr. Langlois, Dr. MacAulay said "there was no recognizable food in the stomach, indicating the subject had not eaten in at least two hours."

"If the subject had nothing to drink after 9 p.m. on July 13

Israel's Need Grows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird says Israel's need for U.S. arms has burgeoned in recent months and warns that delay on the military sales bill could upset the Middle East balance.

Laird commented Monday in a letter to Senator John C. Stennis, chairman of the Senate armed services committee.

He said Israel's military requirements have gone up since the defence department made its case for the sales bill last Feb. 25.

Mr. Laird said, the pending bill would provide less than half of Israeli needs in U.S. help.

and died on the following morning at 4 a.m.," asked Mr. Langlois, "what would the alcohol concentration be?"

"For the subject to die with an alcohol content of 360 milligrams per cent," Dr. MacAulay replied, "he would have to have had approximately 500 milligrams per cent at 9 p.m. This per cent of consumption would have killed the man."

In his opinion, he said, there was no alternative but that Captain Goudie started drinking at 9 p.m.

Dr. MacAulay testified that he had sent part of the blood sample to the Centre of Forensic Sciences at the University of Toronto for analysis.

"There would be every indication of mental and physical drunkenness in the average person," Mr. Howes said.

"The average person would be nearly unconscious. They would have difficulty in walking, talking, muscular co-ordination and seeing. Alcohol content at that rate could prove fatal."

He added: "It is possible that if he built up tolerance he could be in a state of confusion or maybe he wouldn't know where he was and the alcohol might have affected his eyesight."

He wouldn't be able to react immediately to an emergency.

Bail System Attacked

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Police Chief J. F. Gregory of Victoria, said Monday Canada's bail bond system hinders policemen trying to protect the public from "professional criminals."

Chief Gregory, one of about 100 delegates attending the annual convention of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police, said there are cases of accused persons on bail who received bail a second time after being charged with similar offences.

Suharto Postpones His Visit After Incident at the Hague

THE HAGUE (AP) — President Suharto postponed today for another 24 hours his state visit to The Netherlands that was put off Monday when about 25 rebels occupied the Indonesian Embassy in The Hague.

His office in Jakarta said the second postponement was to give the Dutch government "more time to prepare."

Foreign Minister Adam Malik of Indonesia had announced earlier that Suharto decided to go ahead with his trip to Europe after the insurgents surrendered to Dutch police and released 15 hostages they held for 12 hours. The visit to Holland will be the first by an Indonesian president to the nation that ruled his country until the end of 1949.

The departure now is scheduled for Wednesday.

Suharto has postponed his departure when a band of exiles from the East Indonesian island of Ambon invaded the embassy, killed a Dutch police guard and took as hostages the ambassador's wife and two children and members of his staff. Am.assador T. A. Natadiningrat escaped in his pajamas to a hotel.

Dutch Premier Piet de Jong said in The Hague that Suharto was given formal assurance his party would be safe and the rebels would be dealt with according to Dutch law.

Malik said Suharto would not be bound by any promises the Dutch made to obtain the release of the hostages. The Amboinese had demanded an audience in The Hague with Suharto for J. A. Manusama, the "president-in-exile" of the Republic of the South Moluccas which the Amboinese tried to establish in 1950. Indonesian officials said Suharto would receive Manusama, but as an Indonesian subject only.

There was speculation that Suharto had postponed his departure again until he got word from The Hague that no promises had been made for him.

Rich Ore Is Found in B. C.

OTTAWA (CP) — The evidence is official—right there in the Canada Gazette—that the adventurous may find mineral wealth lying on the ground in the Canadian North.

All the finder has to do is pick it up and arrange a way to turn it into cash.

That is the way officials in the northern affairs department explain an announcement in the current Canada Gazette, the official weekly publication of the federal government.

Statutory Order and Regulation 70-365, titled Jason Explorers Export Order, says the government is pleased to order that Jason Explorers Ltd. may export ore containing cobalt and nickel to France under regulations that control exports from the northern territories—as long as no more than 500 tons are exported up to March 31, 1972.

It seems Jason, a two-man operation incorporated three years ago in Vancouver, found the stuff lying around on Blanchet Island in the East Arm of Great Slave Lake in the Northwest Territories east of Yellowknife.

As mining finds go, the rocks were as close as they could get to being clusters of five-cent coins. Some of the ore proved out at 40-per-cent nickel.

There were a couple of problems: Refining and transportation.

The rock contains a lot of arsenic—more than any Canadian refiner could handily remove. Jason turned up a French refinery that might be able to handle the Blanchet rock, so export permission was arranged for shipments of test quantities to France.

Iraq Threatens to Help Guerrillas Fight Jordan

Nixon Refuses To Slap Egypt

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (Reuters) — The United States, yielding intense pressure by Israel, showed today its extreme reluctance to condemn Egypt for any violation of the fragile Middle East ceasefire.

A meeting here Tuesday between President Nixon and his top foreign policy advisers apparently ended with Nixon determined to remain silent on the Israeli charges of repeated ceasefire violations.

Ronald Ziegler, White House press secretary, said he expects no Middle East announcement from the president in the next few days.

Since the U.S.-initiated ceasefire began Aug. 7, the United States has steadfastly maintained that it has been impossible to prove any alleged violations.

Nixon and his advisers, in reviewing the entire Middle East situation, apparently decided to maintain this position, at least publicly, at the risk of a further deterioration in relations with Israel.

Israeli Premier Golda Meir has said her government is in strenuous dispute with the United States over reports of Egyptian ceasefire violations.

The White House even refused to say if the charges were considered at the meeting, although there seems little doubt they were.

On the day preceding the meeting, there was a gathering of Nixon's top intelligence committee—the group he set up to study the issue of U.S. surveillance of the ceasefire, and any charges of violations.

The United States, alliance is based on its belief that the current military standstill, and the first-tentative steps toward Israeli-Arab negotiations, offer the first hope in years of a settlement of the conflict.

Iraqi Troops Guard Palestinian Camps

From Reuters-AP

AMMAN (CP) — Jordan rejected today an Iraqi threat of military intervention if King Hussein's troops did not stop firing at Palestine Arab guerrilla positions.

Jordan's reply was handed to the Iraqi ambassador here after an emergency meeting of the cabinet which lasted almost four hours while sporadic fighting continued in some areas after Tuesday night's clashes.

The Iraqi threat came in a note handed to Jordan's ambassador in Baghdad Tuesday night while security forces and commandos blazed away at each other in and around Amman after an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate King Hussein.

Premier Abdel Moneim Al-Rafai told reporters after the cabinet meeting that the Iraqi note had said:

"The Iraqi government asks that the Jordanian forces cease-fire. If they do not do so, the Iraqi government cannot prevent elements of its forces stationed in Jordan from intervening on the side of the fedayeen (guerrillas)."

Rifai said the Jordanian reply, handed to the Iraqi ambassador here, expressed regret that such a warning had been handed and said it could not accept it.

In fighting between Iraqi and Jordanian troops threatened to break out, there were reports Hussein may declare martial law.

Baghdad radio said Iraqi troops stationed in Jordan moved into position alongside Palestinian guerrilla forces following the Jordanian shelling of Palestinian refugee camps and civilian quarters of the capital.

"This obliged the Jordanian army to withhold shooting at Fedayeen (guerrilla) camps and civilian quarters," the broadcast said. It added that Iraqi troops had been placed on the alert "to face actions against Palestinian resistance."

Military sources said Iraq has mostly artillery and anti-aircraft units in Jordan and would have difficulty taking on an infantry role. They also say the 15,000-man Jordanian army, the best in the Arab world, probably could contain the Iraqis.

Local reports said the Iraqis had sent a formal note to Amman warning that Iraqi troops in Jordan would side with the guerrillas if an immediate end was not made to the government-guerrilla clashes which erupted Tuesday after the attempt on Hussein's life.

Several persons were killed or wounded in the clashes and high tension continued in the city of Amman today.

More than a dozen grenades and the thump of mortar shells closed the morning and there were few streets on the capital normally jammed with rush-hour traffic. Two newspapers failed to appear, many government em-

Postal Talks Will Continue

OTTAWA (CP) — The outcome of two-week-old postal mediation talks is anyone's guess today after negotiators and mediator Thomas O'Connor dramatically announced they will negotiate talks beyond a Tuesday deadline.

Mr. O'Connor, lines of fatigue showing in his face, made the announcement Tuesday minutes before a midnight deadline.

But the mediator, a Toronto labor relations specialist, said progress has been made and

"I'm hopeful we can resolve it; I'm always hopeful."

The mediation talks, which resume at 10 a.m. EDT today, are riddled with broken deadlines. The latest was established after Prime Minister Trudeau told reporters Tuesday he expected a report from Mr. O'Connor before midnight.

Mr. O'Connor said he had not consulted Mr. Trudeau or any member of the cabinet about his latest decision. Union and government spokesmen, appearing exhausted after Tuesday's 13-hour meeting, said they had agreed to hold further meetings.

Both sides in the year-old dispute considered the prime minister's comment as an indication that talks should be completed before midnight.

The mediator, a chain-smoking and obviously edgy, asked reporters to allow him a chance to sleep after a tentative meeting Tuesday night in a west-end hotel where the talks are being held.

A previously-announced 10-day deadline set by Mr. Trudeau expired Monday.

The 27,000-member Council of Postal Unions announced at the end of Tuesday's talks that it will extend indefinitely a suspension of rotating strikes which went into effect last Thursday.

The talks have been shrouded in secrecy for the last several days as negotiators appeared jittery at the possibility of the government taking legislative action to end the dispute.

A cabinet meeting Tuesday—at which the postal dispute was discussed—and Mr. Trudeau's statement added to the uncertainty surrounding the outcome of mediation.

If current talks fail, the government is known to be considering a number of steps it could take, including a lock-out of all postal employees and the recall of Parliament to consider legislating a settlement.

Auto Firms' Wage Offer Rejected

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The United Auto Workers, having rejected the auto industry's initial offer for a new contract Tuesday, says it is set for tougher bargaining.

Spokesmen for the union in Canada and the United States said the 74-per-cent wage increase in the first year of a three-year contract submitted by Ford, General Motors and Chrysler did not satisfy union demands.

The 47,000 Canadian employees of the companies have wage parity with their 730,000 U.S. counterparts, but fringe benefits such as pension plans differ from those in the U.S. because of differences in Canadian law and government programs.

Tuesday's offer, the first since the talks began July 15, included increases of 36 to 43 cents an hour, which would bring rates to between $3.45 to $6.08 for most UAW workers. The offer also included an 11-cent hourly increase in cost-of-living adjustments carried over from the previous contract.

Ontario Farmers Are Likely To Get School Tax Relief

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A source close to the provincial cabinet says there will probably be some tax relief for Ontario farmers who say they are paying too much to sow the seeds of learning in the province.

The source, a government member close to the cabinet and a farm spokesman, says the government will take action soon but ministers will not discuss the plan because it is still being formulated.

The executive of Federation of Agriculture has asked farmers to withhold the education portion of their taxes because it says farmers are being over-assessed on their land and are paying more in tax than city residents.

How many of the federation's 160,000 members follow the OFA's guidelines and withhold their education taxes will not be known until after Sept. 28, the final date for payment in most municipalities.

Ken MacLeod, who raises mink and Ondawa as a hobby near Owen Sound, is the only known OFA member to hold back on his taxes.

His tax bill for the second half of 1970 was $416 but he paid only the $187 municipal share. The school board received only the remainder but first he wants to give "an argument."

The government, which has been attempting to distribute tax taxes more evenly for several years, says it is aware of the farmers' problem.

One area in which it has been working is farmland which should be considered "working farm" so that no additional incentives to land speculation are created.

The government source says an offer of temporary farm relief was made to the OFA this summer but was rejected as inadequate. The OFA denies the offer was made.

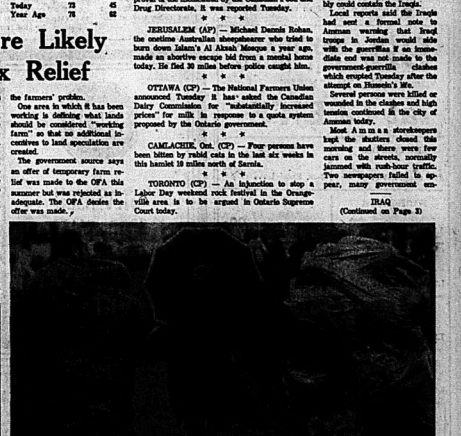
Packagers Told to Devise Litter Cure

TORONTO (CP) — Manufacturers of packaging goods have been advised to come up with plans for controlling the littering problem in Ontario or have controls imposed through legislation.



A government spokesman said Tuesday meetings have been held with industry representatives, urging them to solve the littering problem themselves.

One result has been creation of an industry committee to find ways to prevent and control the discard of packaging materials, from disposable bottles to cigarette packs and chewing gum wrappers.

The department of energy and resources management has given priority to the details of legislation expected to be ready this winter, a department spokesman said.

He emphasized that the manufacturers, including the makers of disposable glass bottles, have been co-operating with the department and are concerned with finding solutions.

The department also is trying to win support of the unions in the industry. There are fears among workers, particularly in the glass industry, that controls or prohibitions on the manufacture and use of some packaging materials may result in lost jobs.

Cheesemakers Seek to Clarify Position

By BIFF PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Representative cheese plants from co - operatively owned cheese factories in Central Ontario will meet informally with the Ontario Dairy Committee this week to provide information that might be used in helping to solve industry problems.

Under discussion will be the effects of cheese, elevation of milk shipments by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board and the prices paid to farmers.

One of the big problems is quota system set up by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board, many cheese plants are not receiving enough milk for economical operation and can do nothing about increasing supplies.

On the other hand, the industrial milk producers are under a quota system set up by the Canadian Dairy Commission and cannot exceed quotas without danger of losing out on federal subsidy.

As things stand, cheese plant operators and co-operatives are caught between diminished supplies of milk as the result of plant quotas and rising costs of production.

And on the other hand they are compelled to pay a price for milk set by the marketing board, and also to sell cheese at a set price.

This state of affairs has put many cheese and other users of industrial milk in a difficult financial position.

This week the long-established Dutton Milk Products plant at Wellington announced that it was being forced to close because of financial losses.

And other cheese plants in the Quinte area are also being placed in a difficult financial position.

The owner of the Foxboro Cheese Factory said his milk quota for 1970 had been set at 16,320,000 pounds or roughly 1,400,000 pounds less than it had been in 1968.

Quotas for cheese plants in Central Ontario were set at 92 per cent of amount handled during 1968 and based on projected available suppliers this year.

But a big percentage of the milk received at the Foxboro plant happens to be surplus milk from Belleville dairies which this summer has been sharply reduced and already Mr. Elliott is down more than 1,113,000 pounds from last year. His cheese make is down 89,000 pounds compared to the same period last year.

Reasons for the reduced supply of surplus milk at the Foxboro plant are increased fat bottled milk and for the warmer local days.

As far as many cheese plant owners are concerned, the answer is for the producer would be to raise the price of cheese.

"They have got to raise the price of cheese," said Mr. Elliott.

But dairy officials point out that the solution to the problem is not quite that simple.

They note that the price of cheese is to some extent determined by international trade agreements and if the price of Canadian cheese were raised, the result would be to invite more imports of lower-priced cheese from other countries.

Dairy officials say the present high quota of manufacturing milk is designed only for individual farmers as set up by the Canadian Dairy Commission, based on the system of marketing the production of milk.

Cheese plant producers receive $2.60 per cwt. for 3.5 per cent fat milk in cans, and $3.30 for bulk milk, both prices being set by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board.

Hopefully the Potter property will become a common ground where the people and their provincial leaders may rub shoulders, arguments and ideas in an afternoon of public-affairs participation.

"I'm hoping the people will come and talk to their ministers and let them know directly what they feel, what they think," says Dr. Potter. "And I want them to come up with ideas, to give the ministers suggestions."

The tea party, as a platform for current political participation, may be unique. But it follows the trend of Potter-style politics since the Belleville Conference he decided to Queen's Park in 1967.

Among his outspoken criticisms has been the lack of mutual contact between the political system and the people.

The belief has elicited more than speeches in the legislature against bureaucracy and big government.

In addition to the $2.60, they received a $1.35 per cwt. federal subsidy, less 35 cents deducted for the Canadian Dairy Commission, costs for a net of $3.60.

But if a farmer exceeds his quota for industrial milk, he loses the federal subsidy on industrial milk and if the same production is serious he could lose all his federal subsidy. The result is that increased milk production is serious because this costs him to purchase cows from other farmers. A quota applies to the Canadian Dairy Commission but regardless of the quotas which go with the cows, dairy plant operators say.

Under the present system in Ontario, cheese factories and dairies pay the Ontario marketing board for all milk received. The board in turn sets the income for the milk he has shipped.

The committee meeting with cheese factory owners this week and one from supplies to particular plants or for specific areas.

Mr. Elliott said the purpose of the meeting with the board in Toronto is to clear the dairy commission to get a consensus on what the new system is working.

Food for Thought to Be Fare At Dr. Potter's Tea Party

Outside Boston, tea parties have had little political significance.

Now, Dr. Richard Potter may be revitalizing the event — in a brand-new political context.

One week from today, the Quinte MPP is serving tea and democracy.

As a result, 9 is Conservative Dr. Potter's hope the public itself may become directly involved with government.

Sept. 9, Dr. Potter is throwing open his Massassaga home on the Bay of Quinte from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. for an afternoon tea to which everyone is invited.

Simply enough, it could be called a Tory Tea — since the guest list of those already accepting invitations include Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Education Minister William Davis, Economics Minister Bert Lawrence, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch.

"It's date, he has also arranged public confrontation between his constituents and cabinet ministers whose departments were involved in controversial, contemporary issues. The first, on municipal affairs, drew a packed house in Belleville. The second, in Trenton, on taxation, evoked a surprisingly sullen response.

However, Dr. Potter recalls both meetings primarily produced questions and answers.

Not enough ideas were brought out from the floor, he feels.

It's not a phenomenon in politics. People do write their political representatives with suggestions, and these are passed on through the various channels of government for consideration — and possible action. But the volume is disproportionate to the real total of citizens who participate.

Hence Dr. Potter apparently believes.

"Let's face it," he says, "if 30 people in a cabinet are not the only guys with ideas on how a province or country should be run. We've innumerable people who have some darn good recommendations — and this is the time for them to come forward."

Dr. Potter's confidence in Sept. 9 as party will provide just such an opportunity on the constituency level.

The program is intentionally devoid of formality to permit the free mingling of the people and members of the province's ranking politicians.

"I want them all talking — and listening — for the whole two hours," says the MPP. "Perhaps the first step toward achieving solutions, says Dr. Potter.

It really and truly believes that people have to participate more and let their views be known," he says. "Everyone isn't going to have the same view. But, at least, if they tell it, it gives us (politicial representatives) something to think about. There are too many problems to solve — and we need lots of help.

There's no sense in our government saying it has all the answers. These are the people we elect. Maybe because no one individual or small group of individuals has the answers.

"Everybody is attempting to find solutions. It would just get together a little more and discuss them we will arrive at some answers."

Harder Dr. Arena Site Is Acquired by City

Members of city council and a committee of Hastings county board of education agreed yesterday to an exchange of land for an arena site at Centennial Secondary School.

City council had originally proposed to buy the land for $1, with the understanding it would revert to the school board if it ever ceased to be needed for recreation purposes.

But the school board favored an exchange of land instead and council representatives agreed at a meeting at the board office Tuesday afternoon. The decision now goes before city council for ratification.

Tenders for the proposed arena will be opened tomorrow and are expected to be reviewed by council at its Sept. 16 meeting.

If approved, construction will get under way immediately.

Caretakers' Workshop Has Day-long Program

PICTON (Staff) — A caretakers' workshop for the maintenance staff of Prince Edward County schools was conducted yesterday at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute with films, demonstrations and lectures. This special event was organized at the suggestion of maintenance supervisor Frank Fitzgerald and sponsored by the Prince Edward County Board of Education.

About 30 caretakers met in the lecture room at PECI yesterday morning where they were welcomed by director of education, Alex McNeil, Gerald Anderson, chairman of the county school board.

The workshop began with an address by Mr. McNeil emphasizing the importance of the caretaking staff in relation to his place of employment. The education director described the caretaker as an unofficial public relations man who should avoid negative comments about his school, its teachers and its students.

He stressed that when caretakers "roll tales out of school" they go against the principals, the teaching staff and students by offering carefully considered comments instead of thoughtless ones. Mr. McNeil summarized the theme of his lecture as "accountability" and noted the contribution of caretakers to the education system.

The day - long program included a window washing demonstration planned to promote good workmanship through efficient methods. Later, safety films were shown at the workshop polling up on a job safeguards against accidents. Fire protection also was emphasized through a film short and a demonstration by Picton fire chief Lorne Tripp.

A tour of PECI led by Fred Frost provided a highlight in the program, supporting new methods of work and a new community role for today's caretakers.

Police Seek Joyceville Escapers

Provincial police in the Quinte area are on the look-out for three men who escaped from the medium security prison farm at Joyceville last night.

Authorities at the farm 14 miles north east of Kingston said the men were reported missing at the 10 p.m. count and police set up roa l blocks in the area.

The missing men were identified as Russell A. Weldon, 41 of Bloomfield, serving eight years for manslaughter; Douglas Clayton Whitney of Agincourt, Ont. serving 10 years for robbery and Douglas Eugene Scott of Hyblia in North Hastings, serving three years for breaking, entering and theft.

Mr. Weldon was convicted in the bludgeon slaying of George Cook in the Carrying Place area on October 21, 1965.

Prison authorities said the escaped men were not considered dangerous and were not believed to be armed.

Dairy Store Broken Into

Belleville City Police are investigating a break-in at Butler's Dairy Store on Grier Street.

A quantity of butter and cigarettes was taken but no value was placed on the stolen merchandise.

Deputy chief Harold Reid said this morning that thieves gained entry to the store by removing a window screen sometime overnight. The break-in was reported early this morning.

STEPS TOWARD TOP MANAGEMENT

Where in the world would you get a name like Certified General for an Accounting group? Oddly enough it fitted back in 1908 when a group of Audit-oriented accountants said: "Let's set up an Association to teach all the art of accounting and general management instead of just auditing."

It still fits today for the Certified General Accountants course is known as the one that places emphasis on financial management, not just auditing and cost accounting.

If you would like to know more about the career plan of the C.G.A., write direct to the Certified General Accountants Association, 25 Adelaide Street East, Toronto 210, Ontario, or call (416) 366-8501.

For over 60 years C.G.A. has meant financial management.

Iraq Backs Guerrillas

ported did not report for duty when the forces were alerted.

Amman was largely sealed off from the outside world today. The airport, the only one that does, most telephone communications were cut, and the borders were closed.

Guerrillas were busy building roadblocks with rocks and old cars from on roads leading to their compound in the city they control and manned them with machine-guns and anti-tank rockets.

During an evening of heavy firing in and around the capital, the king's government tried to play down the extent of fighting. But the worst since the current Middle East peace initiative got under way and pits the Arab world.

Official spokesmen, although reported free of attempt by unidentified men to kill the 36-year-old king as he drove to Amman's airport Tuesday, denied that the army had restored the capital or that it was in control. No explanation for the Palestine revolution.

Radio Amman said Hussein's motorcade was fired on as it approached a railway underpass but that the monarch was not hurt. He returned to the city by the airport to meet his daughter, Princess Alia, whose flight was diverted to Syria Tuesday because of the attack.

The Palestine Liberation Organization declared there had been no attempt on the king's life—described the fighting started by the government was a cover-up for the military strike against the guerrillas.

The government denied that the Jordanian army had started the firing, calling the blame on the guerrillas.

An ambulance was destroyed and for lack of transportation to hospital some of the wounded bled to death, the statement said.

An official Jordanian source said 17 persons were wounded in the clashes. But the guerrilla side said at least six persons lost their lives.

The Al Fatah guerrilla organization said in Beirut that 19 persons were killed and 60 wounded during the night, and that yet radio shooting was still going on today.

Several foreigners were among about 18 guests in the Intercontinental Hotel who hid in the pit when two shells slammed into the building Tuesday night. No one was hurt.

Guerrillas checked identity papers at roadblocks in areas near their headquarters. But the Jordanian army an usual stayed outside the city, controlling access routes and holding hilltops overlooking the capital.

The monarch, who survived at least four previous assassination bids, was the target of a reported guerrilla ambush less than three years ago, on June 9.

The clashes Tuesday were not on the scale of the bloody street fighting in June which claimed 1,000 casualties in three days, and the talk of the people on either side here no wish to plunge Amman back into such a bloodbath.

Today was the fifth straight day of fighting between the army troops and the guerrillas. Clashes last weekend killed 13 persons and wounded 30.

Junior Office Management

While volunteer Opus manager Dan Tucker takes down the location of job, assistants Paul Dixon and Phil Grogan locate the position on the city map. Opus is a YMCA-based youth temporary job placement organization.

Teens' Jobs Increase

Opus Teens, the YMCA-based youth organization which attempts to obtain summer temporary jobs for young people between the ages of 13 and 18, is closing down its operation this week.

Not to be confused with any government studied placement organization, Opus attempts to place youngsters who are interested in small jobs such as lawn mowing, painting, house cleaning and babysitting.

"We've had 85 kids enrolled this year," he said.

"Last year we only had 55 workers."

With the help of The Intelligencer and CJBQ Radio, who advertised the start of the second season for Opus, interested parties were notified of the group's availability for small jobs.

A total of 67 jobs were called in to the offices, and the young workers were sent out.

The two largest jobs undertaken were the cleaning of a trucking firm garage and the painting of the new Bruno Hotel at the plaza. In two days were employed for the latter job.

Many of the jobs, obtained on an occasional basis, have led to part-time jobs during the school year.

Through the new general secretary, and the YMCA board of directors, it is the hope of Opus that the youthful agency can be kept year-round.

Providing a watchful eye over the organization was Dave Hahn, program secretary for men and boys at the YMCA. The Y provided offices, a phone and filing equipment.

Police, Not Signs To Control Speed

On July 21 a letter was received by Sixty Township Council from Lt.-Col. George W. Reid on behalf of the commanding officer of CFB Trenton requesting that the township install signal lights and stop signs along Curtis Road near the air base.

Council decided to apply to the Ontario Department of Transport requesting approval for the passing of a by-law to allow construction of a 4-way stop on this road.

A letter was received at council last night from M. S. Stevens, manager of the traffic engineering section of the department.

In it he stated, "Stop signs are essentially right-of-way controls. They are not speed devices and should never be used for this purpose.

"The introduction of a stop sign in a location where it is not warranted or is used improperly will only instill in the motorists a disrespect for this type of control.

Reeve Jack Bush said that the township will attempt to provide controls on this section of highway by requesting police enforcement of the 25 mph speed limit.

High Speed Chase Captures Youth

A Belleville youth has been charged with dangerous driving and driving while under suspension following a high speed chase over streets on the West Hill about midnight last night.

Charged is Ronald Gordon St. Louis of 51 Orchard Drive.

According to police, the car chase began on North Front Street and ended on Alexander in the west end of Belleville until the car collided with a post at the corner of Wellington Crescent.

Three youths then ran from police but were caught.

Coroner's Inquest Is Called On Trenton Constable's Death

TRENTON (Staff) — An inquest will be held into the death of Trenton provincial constable Mark Bedden who died on duty, July 28, three hours after he was found unconscious, Coroner Dr. Lloyd Arthur announced at 12 College St.

Decision to hold the inquest was made Monday by Crown Attorney John Pickett and coroner Dr. D. Lidster.

Dr. Lidster of Brighton, who performed an autopsy on Bedden's body after his death, refused to comment publicly on the new development.

The coroner had judged that the cause of death was natural, but it was due to pressure on an ulcer, such a situation could have been avoided.

Mr. Lattin said, although he refused to state if the OPA had made the complaint.

Mr. Lattin stated at the Kilcher committee that representatives of the OPA would visit Trenton this week to investigate the bridled harbor. He stated yesterday that the OPA had already sought out the complaint.

The OPA head added that he may visit Trenton on Thursday or Friday. Today the Police Association leader was to be in Newfoundland.

Mr. Lattin explained that he wanted to come to Trenton to get certain matters with the widow of the 37-year-old constable.

"People who asked questions were not given answers" Mr. Lattin said yesterday, adding that four members of the Trenton police force did not know what was going on.

Statements were made by officers investigating incidents of the 26th of July.

They were filed in a folder and the folder was in plain view . . . No attempt was made to keep it secret," Hubert Campbell, chairman of the Trenton Police Commission, told reporters Tuesday.

Chairman Campbell said that Mr. Lattin had not contacted the Trenton Police Commission about his Trenton visit.

Furthermore, added Hubert Campbell and Dennis Lattin had heard of the inquest

Ulster Fights Back

Sir Francis Evans, an Ulsterman and former British ambassador to Argentina, is president of the council established by the Northern Ireland government to promote 1971 as "Come to Ulster Year."

In the light of the troubled conditions in Ulster of late a statement by Sir Francis at the inaugural meeting of the council is timely. The Government, he said, had two purposes in focusing attention on the region next year. "The first is the external one of inviting the world to come and see for themselves that conditions in Northern Ireland were never as bad as some people painted them and that, except though there were disturbances, ordinary life in the province has now resumed its normal course. The second is to ask the people of Northern Ireland to make a conscious and deliberate effort to put the past behind them and to concentrate on the future. . ."

The year will mark the 50th anniversary of the establishment of Northern Ireland as an integral part of the United Kingdom. Industrialists and tourists and Ulster folk abroad will be encouraged to visit the province and among the attractions will be an Expotype exhibition running from May to September.

Perhaps by then Northern Ireland will have settled down again and the divisions that have marked its there of late will be healed. We would hope so, for as Sir Francis Evans points out, things are never as bad as they seem. Exceptions do remain, however, and one of them is reflected in recent comment in The Winnipeg Free Press.

"A Winnipeg visitor to Northern Ireland recently, "The Free Press noted, "returned home with a report that people told him that the area's troubles were aggravated by the fact that children there attend different school systems, depending on their religion. Not until there is a common school system, they said, was there much hope that religious and other prejudices could be dissolved."

The fact is, the school system in Northern Ireland is little different to what it is in Ontario. There are primary and secondary schools, as there are, and the Roman Catholic community has its own schools, as it does in Ontario. So the "separate schools" are given something like a 60 per cent grant toward their operation by the Government.

There are a number of fine private (fee-paying) schools, only they are called "public" schools. For the purposes of government supervision and grants however, they come into the category of "grammar" schools, along with the State schools. One of these institutions is Portora Royal School. Founded in 1618 by James I it is one of the country's leading places of learning, attracting students from both Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic. Oscar Wilde was a pupil at Portora which sits on a hill overlooking Lough Erne at Enniskillen, County Fermanagh. So too was Sidney Francis Lyle, author of the hymn Abide With Me, and the contemporary novelist and Nobel prizewinner Samuel Beckett.

If there are divisions in Ulster society then, they are not the work of the school system. There has the record of remarkable achievement and conspicuous lack of concern for politics as such. But this obviously is not generally known, as The Free Press editorial suggests.

Calendar Lore

The Ontario Department of Education, News and Information has produced an attractive and informative school year calendar combining fine color photography with information on calendars as compiled in the Chinese, Roman, Egyptian, Mayan, Hebrew, Hindu, Pure Arabic and Braille fashion, as well as the binary number system which is the internal language of digital computers.

There's also one method in all the kind of computer numbers one sees on cheques and which as the calendar points out, "are the only symbols that may be "read" with equal ease by both machine and man."

In the pictures a tousled-headed group of boys is seen examining a Canadian rail track vehicle, a school band do their thing, a little girl is rather lost on her first day in kindergarten, a teenage lass views the paintings in an art gallery, a mother gives her daughter a helping hand in a swimming pool and two boys are pictured with some scientific instrument bearing Roman numierals.

The calendar reflects some of the more creative and admirable facets of youth activity in our time — of the kind touched upon in a letter on this page today.

Inflation..Labor Unrest..Ulster

Honeymoon Period Over for Heath Government in U.K.

LONDON (CP) — Parliament Richard Heath, returning from the east to its Tuesday session after a month by local luxury weather.

The honeymoon of Britain's new Conservative government is over. Commons and newspapers alike are predicting post-vacation holiday will find the style of politics changed. Some say the change will also find he will have to do considerable about reducing unemployment.

There are internal and external problems. Most pressing are the inflation rate, which Heath promised to do something about during the campaign that which he called Labor's Herald. When Labor government June 18.

Perhaps the most urgent is Ulster. This was the biggest legacy of the Wilson campaign, and it largely caused the defeat. It still is getting worse, despite strong words.

David Wall, political editor of The Financial Times, says:

"The test will be the next week of the prime minister and the full cabinet does not come in the summer's top issues — Heath and his colleagues won the election mainly on the public's distrust of Labor's ability to run the economy, and on the strength of their own claims to have a policy which would successfully curb inflation.

Heath's government has not yet put the proposals to the test. It is clear and strongly that they will be able to deal with the problem but that they do not yet have a policy for the unemployment. The credibility gap is beginning to open on the last general election issue found by the Tories in their campaign — that it is unnecessary of Heath to go to Ulster."

The T.U. rough deal from a Conservative in support with Tory Members of Parliament. Enoch Powell, Heath will really have to make up his mind, particularly on the issue of compulsory ballots before strikes. Many far from the working man's side of the economy.

Heath has already made it clear that the government by talks with national organizations. Heath's government may be a weak one, but it is unlikely that it will be forced to keep its promises to the letter.

One of these dates was to the effect that the first place to be affected by the cuts in the number of people employed in the government and by other agencies that run accounts and schedules.

Local authorities have been promised a year who knew the Electricity Council operating the Central Electricity Generating Board, and the Post Office. It would take more than a whole's order to make this return to wage increases a fact, his words, not mine, was about 7 per cent increase of about 32 1-2 per cent.

And Friday evening Labor peer, Lord Cooper, planned Conservative of the £20,000 unemployed would come Christmas' and the number would increase significantly as government employment ceases.

Heath has immediate problems and with each phrase of manufacturing Northern Ireland, the breakaway Rhodesia and South Africa, on which Conservatives recently has explained adjustments to the mother country's position, election engagement of strong arms to the apartheid government.

Swing Your Partner

Touring the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, staff member Ian Robertson came upon this swinging group of square dancers. Who could resist the invitation to join such a provocatively titled group? The "Ex" of course is as popular as ever, this year's program ranging from the top names in show business — Johnny Cash, Red Skelton, The Fifth Dimension, Brenda Lee among them — to a return visit by the National Band of New Zealand and Maori dancers, not to mention a host of other attractions.

What Next?

Schools Should Have Drug Counsellors

Montreal Gazette

There is something rather tiresome about the repeated assertions that more research must be done before legal restrictions on marijuana can be eased. It is even rather funny, considering the extent to which thousands of individuals have been doing their own research.

What is it that really has to be proved? That marijuana is harmless? A variety of drugs are known to be harmful. This is not the case with marijuana, however, although the civilized world has had 2,000 years, since the first records of cannabis plants in China, to discover the danger if it is there.

Alcohol can be dangerous. If abused; but there is a difference between use and abuse. Smoking is stupid but marijuana is not a substance whose excessive use has just been discovered, it is not clear why it should continue to be seen in a more sinister light than alcohol.

Why shouldn't the burden of proof rest with those who choose to regard marijuana as a dangerous substance that must be prohibited? The impossible of their opinion upon society is contributing to hypocrisy, disrespect for law, and a defiant attitude among the young.

Controlled sale of marijuana, as recommended by the LaGuardia Committee in 1944, is the answer. This will not be done, however, until the Trudeau government abandons the attitude that marijuana is harmful until proved beneficial.

The other part is education and counselling for teenaged children on drug use. Even if marijuana is not addictive and dangerous, there is no reason why teenagers may not be taken up the habit any more than there is to encourage them to start smoking and drinking.

In many cases, the reason for taking up marijuana may be nothing more than the need to feel a part of the gang or the crowd. Whether it is this or something more complicated, every youngster who is tempted to smoke marijuana or take any drug ought to have the chance to talk to a wise and sympathetic adult who knows something about the drug scene.

That is why the best idea to come out of the Toronto International symposium on drug abuse this week was the suggestion that schools have drug counsellors. Such counsellors would have to be allowed to have confidential, legally privileged sessions with pupils in order to get at any serious problems.

It is actually desirable to go beyond that and find a place in the high school curriculum for drug education, meaning straight talk about all manner of drugs and their uses. This is a subject that has to be embraced if the schools are to carry out their task of preparing children for the world into which they are growing up.

Madoc Lake Pollution

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Recently I attended a meeting th Huntington township hall, concerning the pollution in Moira Lake. The notice of meeting stated that representatives from Ontario Water Resources Commission Huntington township council, Hastings County Health Unit, Madoc Village Council, would be present, and I assumed would be answering questions and speaking to the meeting in general.

One person from Madoc Village Council spoke of the new sewage system that the village is having built. Two representatives from OWRC told a very thorough (and easy to comprehend) story of Moira Lake. They explained very clearly what had been done in research, etc., and what is yet to be done, on Moira Lake system. They described the sewage system intended for Madoc Village. Except the cottagers' spokesman, no one else explained anything.

In conclusion, cottagers voted to form an association. This seemed to be similar to one already in motion, called the cottagers' association. However, my impression of this organization's purpose, is to clean up Moira Lake; to find out why it is polluted; to tell the people what can be done about it, etc. When a 41 membership fee was suggested, someone stated that it should be 50. Since more people would, no doubt, pay 50 and join the Association. He stated that money was strength in numbers. "How much authority does this association have over OWRC?" was a question asked. The answer was, I believe, "No more than any taxpayer or organized group."

My conclusion is, if there is strength in numbers would not a group of ratepayers (making a lot of letters) carry more authority than one letter from this Organization?

If this is true, then would it not be paying someone $2 to write a letter which would carry no more authority than one I could write and which would cost me six cents for a stamp plus a bit of writing paper?

Perhaps someone will come up with answers to be published in your paper. It would be interesting to see.

ONE WHO DID NOT PAY

Farmers and Education Tax

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

Ken MacLeod, a farmer in Grey County, claims to be the first in Ontario to carry out the tax-strike proposal which is being urged by both the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and the Ontario section of National Farmers Union, in protest against burden placed on farmers by school taxes, Mr. MacLeod has withheld the education tax portion while paying the remainder of his municipal levy.

His claim may be contested. Several farmers in Simcoe County have also withheld the step from threat to action and paid their property tax, minus the school-tax portion. The OFA, which initiated the idea, and the NFU, which endorsed it, hope that before the end of the year the tax strike may become general, as a demonstration of farm protest against levies they think unfair.

Mr. MacLeod's tax bill was for $417, including $250 for school taxes, on a 100-acre farm. He paid $167.

In one of the Simcoe instances, Miss Robbert, who has help from Leo sons to operate a large farm, the tax bill was $2,011. He has paid $761, the amount levied for municipal purposes, but withheld the $1,372 education portion.

Farmers think it unfair that they should be taxed more heavily than city-dwellers with equivalent incomes, simply because education taxes are levied against land and buildings. The theory here is no subsidies. An industrial firm which owns land and factory buildings in a city is taxed for school purposes, even though it sends no children to school. The factory employs, in turn, pays school taxes either directly or indirectly, depending on whether it owns its house or lives in rented premises.

In practice it looks different. The farmer is both proprietor and worker on his own farm. He represents both capital and labor. When the school tax is levied on his land and buildings, and on his house, it does not work out the same way as in the city.

He pays the school tax paid by a factory owner, and pays as well the school tax paid by a factory worker. It is not surprising that the cost of supporting schools shocks him twice as much as it shocks most city dwellers.

The so - called tax strike launched by farmers like Ken MacLeod and Ross Hubbert won't create any big crisis. By and large their farms cannot be seized for non - payment of taxes until three years from now at the earliest.

Within that time Ontario farmers may make their point.

Today In History

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

September 2, 1970 . . . .

A bakery in Pudding Lane, London, caught fire 304 years ago today—in 1666 —and within hours much of the city was in flames. The Great Fire of London burned for five days. It destroyed 400 streets and public buildings, including St. Paul's Cathedral and the Guildhall. More than 200,000 persons had been made homeless by the fire in their lives. Although several grand plans for a new city were dreamed up, none was ever implemented. However, the rebuilt houses and streets were far more sanitary than those ravaged by the plague only a year before.

Participatory Democracy: Respective Merits of Group And Voice of the Individual

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am not the least bit worried about those babies at the drop-in centre. After all they have their principles; let their hair keep them warm.

It is true they have not asked for my help and they won't receive any because first you have to be invited. They have only asked for money. Money they have not the backbone to make themselves. The world hasn't changed so very much; we had the same type of cry babies a few years ago only we called them bums or tramps.

No I am not worried about those babies. I will put my faith in the wonderful common teenager.

A MOTHER

'Forgotten Teenager' Comes in for Praise

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I look around me and see all the wonderful teenagers of forgotten days. I see them working, playing soccer, tennis, baseball, helping at the hospital, chores too numerous to write down. Bless them for they are the ones who will make this world a better place to live.

They don't really like getting up at six in the morning or working nights and Sundays. They never would like it wear their dresses shorter or have their hair longer or grow a beard. They don't have money, than others. They just have the courage to be themselves and make of yourself and you do not get something for nothing a subject that has to be embraced if the schools are to carry out their task of preparing children for the world into which they are growing up.

ANAF NEWS

Last Wednesday saw the first group from Belleville leaving for Vancouver by train. The second group will be leaving by plane from the same city just before noon on Saturday. The second and third groups will also catch a plane at Malton but on Sunday. All groups will rendezvous at Vancouver on Sunday afternoon. Between twenty-five and thirty members of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit and No. 49 Ladies Auxiliary will combine their forces and accompanies to the 54th bi-annual Dominion Convention of the Army, Navy and Airforce Veterans in Canada and their Ladies' Auxiliary which will be held in the Vancouver Hotel.

As this news is being read, the delegates will all have registered and will be settling down to business. The ladies' auxiliary group is believed to be one of the largest representations from any unit across Canada.

This is expected to be one of the most important conventions ever held. The meetings are held from Aug. 31 to Sept. 7 and it will be an enormously busy five days to get all accomplished that is on the agenda. The trade union is probably be a subject of great interest to all veterans and dependents. That will be the Woods Report and what may happen to the insurance situation. The election of officers for 1971-73 is also important to find out who will guide the Association's destinies during the next two years. The members will start arriving back on Sunday, Sept. 8. All members wish them a fine journey and a safe return.

Thursday, Sept. 19 will be the first fall general meeting and the president will be giving a report on what transpired at the convention and should be interesting in more ways than one. A good turnout will be expected, so remember the date and make a note to attend.

Still confined to their homes are comrades F. O'Shaughnessy, K. Thompson, R. Fowlow and Dr. R. Potter. In the Belleville General Hospital are cdes. E. Schreiberberger, J. Miller, F. Cronin and R. Gardner. It is requested that anyone knowing of a member who is sick, please notify the sick committee or the stewards as soon as possible. Thank you.

A. Bradshaw, left, senior staff officer, accounts and finance at Air Transport Command Headquarters CFB Trenton, and his brother, Lt. R. J. Bradshaw, right centre, both RMC graduates.

Birdhouse Gets Permit

Birdhouses are tiny edifices constructed on a workbench out of scraps of wood. Easy plans followed, the tiny home is mounted on a tree, a pole or under a houses eaves.

Total cost; a few nails, possibly a dab of paint depending on the spoken of will hours, and a few pieces of lumber.

However, in a financial report for building permits received at last night's meeting of Sidney Township Council, one township resident received a building permit for a bird house.

This particular birdhouse is actually a $400 pigeon coop being constructed by Joseph Van Rampany of RR 2, Belleville. The coop will cover 120 square feet of ground.

A total of 24 building permits and five demolition permits were issued during the month of Aug. by the township. Total capital value of the properties was listed at $120,900. This brings the 1970 total for building permits to $1,578,112.

A total of $21,108 was collected last month, with the total taxes outstanding of $595,000.

Pitman-Lewis Emerge as Opponents After Images Dissected

TORONTO (CP) — Two professors in the Ontario New Democratic Party disagree on whether a serious issue for the party leader is common sense or ideals.

A paper prepared on behalf of leadership candidate Walter Pitman by John Wilson, a political science professor at the University of Waterloo, says the party must play down its socialist position and present a leader who is, at one and the same time, the personification both of progressive change and of cautious common sense.

The offer, by Gerald Caplan, assistant history professor at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education and campaign manager for candidate Stephen Lewis, says:

"It would be suicidal to heed Wilson's advice at precisely the moment when the party is evolving a tough, coherent, responsible socialist policy for Ontario."

The two memoranda are being circulated among party supporters.

Donald MacDonald will resign the party leadership at a convention in Oct. 29.

The documents show the first real split in philosophy between Mr. Pitman, 41, legislature member for Peterborough, and Mr. Lewis, member for Scarborough West. Their positions on foreign ownership and other issues have so far been similar.

The Wilson memo says Ontario has been governed by Conservatives for 34 of the last 38 years because they "have always governed with the caution which is expected by the Ontario people, yet with the touch of reformation which a prosperous province demands."

He says that because the province is well-off, its citizens don't want to rock the boat and will not be attracted by a socialist program.

"To my mind that makes it obvious that the party must choose Walter Pitman as its next leader."

Prof. Wilson says the electorate is in a state of flux, not because it basically disagrees with the direction in which the province is being taken by the Conservatives, but because it has grown surprised of the style of the Tory administration.

"They do not wish to punish the Tories for their wrongdoing. They are merely concerned that an imbalance is again growing in the Ontario system. They will be looking about them in the next election . . . for a way of moving ahead progressively with caution in repairing that imbalance."

Prof. Caplan says: "If the game is to prove who is safest and most moderate, instead of whose program is most reasonable and relevist, NDPers will lose to real Progressive Conservatives every time."

The Lewis campaign manager says the party must present a distinctive program to swing the vote in industrial and urban ridings from most likely to vote NDP.

Prof. Caplan argues that the position Prof. Wilson puts to the entire electorate is being narrowed more and more to the safety rural areas — small enough in terms of the electoral map that they are not grounded to victory.

However, his major argument against the Wilson memo is that if it does become central, it elects a party which has repudiated itself.

"It is socialists above all who must declare that there are certain principles which will under no circumstances be compromised. There is time enough once in power to examine the necessity for caution in certain areas.

"But to begin by tampering all that is unique and honest about the NDP will only result in its worst of both worlds: we will have sold out our principles and our credibility as a real alternative to the Government of Ontario. As an academic, the prospect is one I am able to face with scholarly equanimity. As a Socialist, it fills me with despair."

Both Mr. Lewis and Mr. Pitman say there is no ideological difference there, a fact backed up by their almost identical campaign statements on foreign ownership and other issues.

A major reason that Mr. Pitman delayed for more than a month before entering the race was precisely because he felt there was not enough disagreement to make a valid contest.

The personal friendship the two men enjoy is graphically illustrated by the fact that a week before Mr. Pitman declared his candidacy, he and Mr. Lewis held a private meeting, where they went over all aspects of the campaign and agreed on some basic ground rules.

Quebec Constables Had Cars Taken by Montreal Policemen

MONTREAL (CP) — Four Quebec Provincial Police constables told an inquiry Tuesday how members of Montreal's 8,700 striking policemen took their patrol cars last Oct. 7.

The constables told a Quebec Police Commission inquiry they were not threatened or harmed during the 16-hour walkout.

They were among emergency QPP personnel sent to patrol city streets and man Montreal police stations.

The four said they were cut off by a Montreal police van while they worked the night of Oct. 7.

Constables Norman Birtz, in one car with Constable Jean Lafferte, said about 15 men jumped out of a van.

"They started to tell us off," he said. "The sergeant told us we had no business being in Montreal."

Montreal police took Birtz car to east-end Paul Sauve arena, where the entire force was holding an extraordinary meeting over an arbitration report on a proposed contract.

Constable Birtz and Constable Lefebvre climbed into the van with the Montreal police because they wanted to know where their car was going.

Constable Birtz said he did not know who "the sergeant" was except that his first name was Pat. He could not identify the person called Pat from among Montreal police gathered in the court where the commission is holding its inquiry.

But Constable Lefebvre, who was behind the number of men in the van at about 12, said he saw a television program a month later about the strike and recognized the sergeant who stopped him as Sgt. Patrick DeLisle.

Constable Jacques Trudeau and Constable Alben Boisvert, from Joliette, could not identify the leader of the Montreal policemen who stopped their car.

But they said the exhaust of their car had been plugged and taped over, keeping the frequency jammed and unavailable in other QPP cars.

The QPP cars were returned later.

Community College Librarians Charge Censorship

KITCHENER (CP) — Three librarians say they have resigned from Conestoga College because of censorship in the college library.

The Council of Librarians of Ontario Community Colleges, supporting them, has given the college a year's subscription to the underground magazine that started the trouble.

Chief Librarian Anne Redwood and assistants Margaret Day and Patricia Dobson say in a letter sent Aug. 24 to President J. W. Church of Conestoga and made public Tuesday:

"For more than a year we have been aware of infringements on academic and personal freedom in the college. In particular, we were concerned when you ordered the library to cancel its subscription to the East Village Other in May, 1969.

"Subsequently, an applicant for the position of assistant librarian was questioned about his political affiliation by a senior member of the administration early this year.

"When the president and his administration feel they have the right to tamper with freedom in these ways, the library cannot expect to continue to function as an uncensored learning resource.

"We therefore feel obliged to submit to you our resignations to be effective one month from today, Sept. 24, 1969."

The librarians were joined with eight faculty members who announced their resignations Aug. 24 in protest against the dismissal in July of applied arts chairman Donald Groff.

Miss Dobson said Tuesday in a telephone interview the librarians "thought it would be appropriate to resign at the same time" as the arts faculty members to show support for them but had their own reasons for resigning, notably the censorship of the magazine.

She said it was removed from the shelves because of a section of advertising the administration called obscene.

Man Dies in Collingwood Shipyard Explosion

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP) — One workman was killed Tuesday and seven were injured, one seriously, in an explosion aboard a bulker under construction at the Canadian Shipbuilding and Engineering Ltd. here.

Frank Madrig, acting general manager of the shipyard, said Eric Service, 22, a torch operator from nearby Creemore, was killed in a major explosion in the engine room of the laker Agawa Canyon.

Cecil Ferguson, 56, of Collingwood was in serious condition in hospital with burns. The six others were treated for minor injuries and released.

Mr. Madrig said he could not confirm reports that paint fumes had exploded. The cause would not be determined until the Ontario labor department had completed its investigation.

He said there was no damage to the 640-foot ship, being built for the Algoma Central Railway. It was christened and launched last Thursday.

There were 400 men on various parts of the ship doing interior and external fitting, Mr. Madrig said, but only a few in the engine room. The engines had been installed but were not functioning.

A premature launching of the 9,200-ton ship Tadoussac at the shipyard killed two men and injured 40 others in May, 1966.

ANAF Opposes Dropping Armistice Day Holiday

VANCOUVER (CP) — Army, navy and air force veterans of Canada want the country to continue to celebrate the 1918 Armistice on Nov. 11 and not turn it into a long holiday weekend.

They voted in a resolution at their annual convention here Tuesday "that some Canadian railway unions have proposed to exchange the Nov. 11 Remembrance Day observance contained in their working agreements for a Monday holiday during the month of August."

Delegates approved a resolution of protest "to all concerned, including railway management, union officials, representatives and arbitrators."

Delegates passed a resolution from Fort Garry unit calling for federal government assistance that the department of veterans affairs cabinet post be maintained.

Another resolution asked that veterans be excluded from the conditions of legislation that may be enacted requiring fluency in French and English.

Bonaventure Sold

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver shipbroker has purchased the Canadian aircraft carrier Bonaventure for scrap.

A spokesman for Bill Kennedy, head of N. W. Kennedy Ltd., said Tuesday that the Halifax-based carrier had been purchased from the Canadian government for less than $1 million and would be towed to Furness for breaking up.

Canada purchased the Bonaventure from Britain in 1957 for $18 million and it was refitted in 1957 at a cost of $11 million. The decision to take it out of service was announced last year.

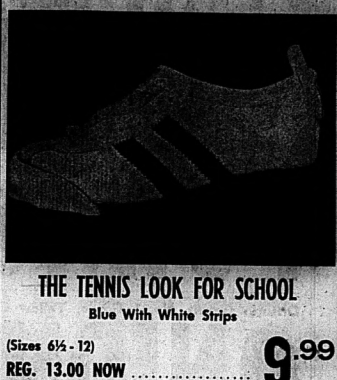
MP Sues for Million

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Mark Smarchuski, Liberal member of Parliament for Provencher, Man., is suing the federal government for more than $1 million in income tax and interest for which he says he was wrongly assessed.

The newspaper says the case was brought before the Exchequer Court of Canada in 1965 but is still in a preliminary stage and has not come to trial.

The case involves $961,618.81 paid by Mr. Smarchuski in 1964 after the revenue department reassessed his returns for the 1-year period between 1945 and 1956 when he was engaged in dealings with mineral exploration companies, the newspaper says.

Bar Association Hears Ministers



HALIFAX (CP) — The Canadian Bar Association's ability to reach join federal and provincial cabinets for its star debating material is apparent.

Six cabinet ministers from as many different provinces took part in a single discussion Tuesday on the question of municipal government and today's schedule was just as varied and crammed.

The Young Lawyers Conference studied the non-medical use of drugs, with controversial royal commissioner Gerald Le Dain of Toronto in the audience.

Judge John Parker, chairman of British Columbia's Mediation Commission, Tuesday told a panel discussion on collective bargaining in the civil service that civil servants should not have the right to strike.

New Secretarial Course Begins in Fall

The Bay of Quinte Chapter of the National Secretaries Association (International) opened the 1970-71 season with a successful membership tea on Sunday, Sept. 13, at Loyalist College at which time Mr. H. J. Butterill, Director of the Extension Division for the College introduced the new "Executive Secretarial Program," being offered for the first time this Fall.

The afternoon program commenced with a congenial half hour, during which tea served in the staff lounge where past presidents, Mrs. Hope Wilson and Miss Marion Meakes poured for the guests. A great deal of work and planning had been put into the event by Mrs. Joan Wilson, membership tea convener, and her enthusiastic committee.

President Gabrielle Watkins introduced the special guests: Miss Marie Switcher, CPS, president of the Canadian Association; Miss Margaret Ball, past Canadian division treasurer; and Miss Lillian Stock, past president, Toronto Chapter. Mrs. Watkins welcomed the secretaries in attendance from all over the Quinte area bringing the remainder of the program over to the convener and membership committee chairman.

First on the speaker's portion of the agenda, Mrs. Wilson introduced Miss Switcher, who presented a film entitled "The World of NSA" outlining the aims and ambitions of this active organization. In her capacity as president of the Canadian division, Miss Switcher is responsible for the 93 chapters across Canada. Miss Switcher received her own CPS rating in 1968 having joined NSA as a charter member of the Toronto Chapter in 1952. She is presently employed as secretary to the Vice-President and Treasurer of Moore Corp. Ltd., in Toronto, also an avid supporter of NSA.

This presentation was followed by the introduction of the "Executive Secretarial Program" by Mr. Butterill. He and the staff of Loyalist College have been working closely with the local chapter of NSA to establish a definitive program for the Association's members and others, to study for their Certified Professional Secretarial rating. The program aims to have the Extension Division of the local College, and NSA in of course, continuing education, and it appears they have developed an exciting and challenging new program for all interested, experienced secretaries in the area.

Mr. W. K. Templeton, Director Materials Management at Moul Johnson (Canada) Ltd., Belleville, and the Bay of Quinte Chapter's 1970 choice for the annual "Boss of the Year" award last April, addressed the gathering.

Mr. Temple encouraged the secretaries to take advantage

Ann Landers
Inability to Sleep Bothers Young Girl

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm an 18-year-old girl with a problem that has been bugging me for months. I can't sleep. It [redacted] I put off going to bed for hours and I'm afraid of crazy things like at night — like Counting sheep, polishing shoes, seeing buttons. I keep myself with "dry mouth" and "sour stomach." I won't be able to sleep and I hate the tossing and turning.

The main reason I can't sleep is because I worry about what will happen to me if I don't get enough rest. I'm always afraid I'll get sick, looking haggard, fainting from exhaustion and things like that.

Some mornings I'm certain I didn't sleep at all. Is this possible? Later in the day I remember bits and pieces of dreams. If a person dreams it means they slept, doesn't it? You can see how mixed up I am. This letter is being written at 3:30 A.M. Can you help me? — NIGHT OWL

DEAR OWL: Most people get more sleep than they realize — and as much as their bodies require, unless, of course, there is an unusual amount of emotional stress.

Insomniacs would have less trouble sleeping if they went to bed at approximately the same time every night and planned on just "resting." People who busy themselves cleaning closets and writing letters until the wee hours of the morning will not sleep better when they do go to bed. Most insomniacs suffer more from worrying about their insomnia than from the damage done by lack of sleep.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I enclose a letter from a reader in Bridgeton, N.J. I hope this helps solve another reader's "Sex problem." — J.M. McM. — PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER.

DEAR EXECUTIVE EDITOR: Ordinarily I would just read Ann Landers' column and say, "There but for the grace of God go I" — but the woman who has been scratching herself for months while the doctors can find nothing wrong, might have a bad case of synthetic fiber dermatitis.

Don't laugh. I tell you true. The woman may have picked up the affliction in someone else's home, but it is more than likely that she has synthetic fibre draperies in her own home and while laundering them (dip and hang — no ironing) she may have rubbed some of the minute particles under her skin.

I would be obliged if you would pass this information along to Ann Landers. — J.P.

DEAR J.P.: It is true that contact with synthetic fibres — in draperies, furniture covers, and clothing can produce severe itching. But a good dermatologist would not find this such a mysterious affliction. He would take a simple scraping of the itching skin and examine it under a microscope. The crystalline structure of the synthetic particles would be apparent.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please wire collect the name and address of the woman in North Carolina who is sure she has E.S.P. She claims she knows what is going to happen in advance and stated several instances where she was correct — but no one would listen.

I will not only listen, I will pay her plane fare to Indianapolis. We will then go together to Las Vegas and on to the gaming tables at Monte Carlo. I am not kidding, Ann. If you help me locate her I will cut you in. — R.R.J.

DEAR R.R.J.: No deal, Dad. If she lady had these extraordinary powers she could go to Las Vegas and Monte Carlo without you — and without ME, too. I'm not interested.

Arthritic Patient Thinks of Others

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I have had poly - rheumatoid arthritis since I was 12. I struggled and fought but I gradually had to let the best of it have its way. Now I need help in washing and dressing. I feel like a fool to just sit doing nothing is a waste of good time.

My husband is entirely crippled up. When someone stands me up I look like a sister. It's not easy for me, but I can still smile and laugh. I love poetry and to make things and sew. Please send me instructions for the new cover for mending Dilly bags and any of the new chair hobby ideas.

How do you get congratulatory messages from the prime minister and mayor and so on? My mother and dad are going to have their 60th wedding anniversary in September. They are not well and I thought if it is still done maybe they can receive a few.

When the paisa subdue a little I'll type out three or four economical recipes which are cheap and tasty to add to your collection. — Angela.

Dear Angela: Your name is appropriate. It sounds to me as if you have the patience of a saint.

You remind me of Hank Viscardi's remark that the truly handicapped are the persons who haven't the will to try.

A diamond wedding is worthy of congratulations from the queen as well as the prime minister and mayor. Write details (wedding date, place, names) to the Secretary of State, Ottawa, Canada, and request them there. I am sending you the other items you asked for.

* * *

Dear Doris: A few years ago a problem about a letter occurred between myself and a boy. I'd written it saying some pretty drastic things. I was quite young then and later on realized my many mistakes.

I want to tell him how sorry I am, but do not know how to go about it. — Mistaken

Dear Mistaken: You are lucky if he is still around to apologize to. Sometimes our supposed over indiscretions we can't correct in the price we pay.

If he is also growing up he will understand if you say or write that the letter still worries you: that you were just a mixed-up kid at the time and wish his forgiveness.

Summon a big gob of courage and just do it. Promote yourself to the ranks of people who are big enough to say they are sorry.

* * *

Confidential to Desperate:

In your desperation you failed to mention your age, his age, why your parents label him "good for nothing", "unemployable". Adult prejudices are seldom built on physical looks alone.

Change that plan to get lost. It will get you nowhere. Until you have the maturity and funds to make it on your own, don't do anything rash. If this is the boy for you, things will work out. And right now your best plan is to keep meeting new people, forming opinions, keeping unsubstantiated about the whole male population.

Points for Parents

By MARY BENSON

Father: "Let's go on a picnic."

Mother: "That's fine for you and the children, but it's twice as much work for me as it would be to fix a lunch at home."

Father: "We'll all pitch in and pack the picnic basket. Betsy, you butter the buns, and Jenny, you can wash a salad. I'll cook hamburgers after we get to the park."

Family outings should be organized and the work divided up so mother, as well as the rest of the family, can enjoy them.

The Experts Say

Home Economist Says Eggs Sold by Pound, Not Dozen

TORONTO (CP) — Laying an egg is a full day's work for a hen. It takes 23 hours from the time it first starts to form until it is laid, says Dorothy Batchelier.

Mrs. Batchelier says that although you buy eggs by the dozen, they are actually sold by the pound. When you know that, it helps you decide which size is most economical.

Mrs. Batchelier, home economist for the Poultry Products Institute of Canada, says grade A eggs are divided into five size classifications based on weight. The eggs within a classification may vary as much as ¼ of an ounce, which is why, when you buy a dozen grade A large eggs, you may get eggs of slightly different size.

Extra-large eggs weigh a minimum 2¼ ounces, large a minimum of two, medium 1¾, actual 1¾ and pewees under 1¼. The minimum weight per dozen of extra-large eggs is 27 ounces, and the others come down the scale three ounces per class.

If you want to decide which size is most economical, remember that medium eggs that cost ⅛ less than large eggs are exactly equal in cost ounce for ounce. Small eggs that cost ¼ less than large eggs are exactly equal in cost ounce for ounce.

When you have bought your eggs, Mrs. Batchelier advises getting them into the refrigerator as quickly as possible.

"Eggs will deteriorate in hours at a room temperature of 70 or over as fast as they will in days in the refrigerator."

When you story them, store the wide end up because that's where the air cell is.

"If you story an egg on its side, the air cell can slide around and push the yolk out of shape.

"Keep eggs cool and covered or in a door rack where they can't get a transfer of flavor from other foods."

You can judge the freshness of an egg if you break it onto a plate. Fresh egg has an upstanding yolk, thick white around the yolk and prominent chalazae. The chalazae appear as two little twisted white cords on either side of a yolk. They are actually extensions of the sacs that hold the yolk, and act as anchors to hold the yolk in place in the cell.

Mrs. Batchelier says you can use your knowledge of egg weights to help in cooking, as well as pricing.

"A little egg more or less doesn't matter much in cookies, but it may in a custard, where you want the volume."

One eight-ounce cup of eggs will take four large eggs, five medium or six small eggs.

Using egg yolks only, it takes 14 large ones to make an eight-ounce cup. 17 medium and 19 small.

Using whites only you need seven large to make an eight-ounce cup, eight medium and nine small.

Peaches Are Versatile But Perishable

By MARY MOORE

We were greeted with "Welcome!" when Gary and I arrived at my brother's Lake Joseph cottage bearing a basket of peaches.

Peaches are versatile and perishable. I want you to have this French Fresh Tart (or flan) so you can try it this week. Maybe for Sunday dinner dessert?

FRENCH FRESH PEACH TART

Pastry:
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1 tbsp. sugar
½ tsp. salt
¼ cup margarine
2 tbsps. butter
1 egg yolk
1½ tbsps. lemon juice
1 tbsp. water

Filling:
1 pkge. (4-oz.) vanilla pudding mix
1¼ cups milk
¼ cup whipping (32 per cent cream)
4 peaches scalded, peeled and sliced
About ¼ cup red currant or apple jelly melted.

To make pastry in large bowl cut margarine and butter into flour, sugar and salt until size of peas. In a cup mix together the yolk, lemon juice and water and drizzle over mixture with fork. Shape into ball and chill. Roll out in 28 9" pie plate or flan pan with fluted or scalloped edge. Prick well with fork. Bake at 300 deg. Fren. about 30-40 min. Cool.

Make filling by combining pudding mix with milk in small saucepan. Cook stirring until thick and boiling. Cool, then chill in refrigerator with surface covered with wax paper to prevent skin from forming. Whip cream until stiff and carefully fold into chilled pudding mix and pour into cooled crust. Arrange sliced peaches in neat concentric circles on top. Brush each slice with melted jelly and chill at least 3 hrs. Truly French.

Worst Air Pollution

BUDAPEST (AP) — After London, the Hungarian capital is the worst big city in the world for air pollution, city council sources say. They said examinations showed the average Budapester inhaled 18 pounds of soot in a lifetime. Car exhausts were blamed for 80 per cent of the pollution and a million old chimneys contribute.

Appetizing Peach Dessert

The bright golden color of the sliced peaches in our French Fresh Peach Tart above is retained by a glaze of melted red jelly. Mary Moore tells you how to produce this French dessert for a guest meal of which you will be proud.

Housewife Opposes Town Council

TORONTO (CP) — For nine months Helen Wurstz has been driving her local aldermen to distraction.

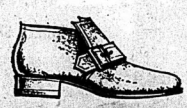
Who's Helen Wurstz? She's an Etobicoke housewife who says she grew up in a slum and now that she has escaped, that Toronto borough of Etobicoke council wants to build a garbage incinerator near her nice suburban home.

So far she has spent $1,000 in her fight against the incinerator, and she is not giving up.

Her neighbors recently took up a collection to help her campaign to stop the Etobicoke and Metropolitan Toronto councils from building the incinerator a few blocks from her home.

Mrs. Wurstz says that unless "little people" stop the building through the courts the incinerator will turn her neighborhood into a slum.

Despite nine months of pleas, tears and stratagems by Mrs. Wurstz and her family, the Etobicoke council voted in August to build the incinerator, which the council considers essential.



Until last October, Mrs. Wurstz was a quiet housewife with interests centred on home-making and her husband and two children.

Now her time is so taken up with petitions, tours of other incinerator plants and searches for alternative sites for the Etobicoke incinerator that she doesn't always get supper on time and her laundry done.

"I only went to Grade 8 in school, but if I spent three years on a university campus I could never have learned as much about political science and citizens' rights as I have in the last 11 months," Mrs. Wurstz said.

But it's a hard lesson. "I've come home from meetings with tears in my eyes."

Bourassa Won't Bow to Medical Specialists

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa has rejected one demand of the province's medical specialists regarding medical care insurance legislation. But he has left himself an option to act in another area.

Mr. Bourassa told a news conference Tuesday that the Health Insurance Act, passed July 16, will not be amended to allow the specialists to withdraw from the insurance plan without suffering loss of revenue and patients.

The premier indicated, however, in an interview later that the legislation could possibly be amended to allow the patients of doctors bypassing the government program to receive medical insurance coverage from private firms.

Coverage by private companies, which under the present legislation would be suspended automatically when the government plan goes into effect, would allow the specialists to charge higher rates than the insurance act allows.

More than 1,400 of the doctors voted at a meeting of the 2,000-member Quebec Federation of Medical Specialists last Thursday to strike if necessary in support of their demands for changes in the legislation.

Mr. Bourassa also reported Tuesday on other decisions taken at a closed weekend cabinet meeting.

Quebec will negotiate to recover $25 million paid by provincial residents under the former two-per-cent social development tax which his government contends was imposed to cover costs of the Canadian medical care insurance plan, and not launched in the province.

—A white paper on the status of French in the province will be presented next spring and legislation passed next year declaring French Quebec's language of work will be studied for possible changes.

The government will undertake a three-step program to "restore confidence" in the open arena private fish and game clubs in the province.

The Quebec Federation of Medical Specialists vowed to fight the government's proposal to withdraw from the province's medical insurance plan during a meeting in a month's time.

Mr. Bourassa's statements concerning the insurance plan dispute by specialists came after two cabinet ministers spent a day night to discuss the government's position.

Mr. Bourassa, who has said repeatedly he intends to make French the working language in Quebec, promised to release the report of a provincial royal commission studying the subject as soon as it is available. The report is expected by the spring.

The premier said he has already begun the campaign to "restore confidence" in the province by personally talking extensively from General Motors Corp. that centered on negotiations at its Ste. Therese parts plant near Montreal will be conducted in French.

Part-time Workers Get Boost

TORONTO (CP) — Part time employees of Steinberg's Miracle Food Mart in Ontario approved a two-year contract Tuesday night providing a minimum increase of 10 cents an hour.

The agreement, covering about 1,800 workers in 69 Ontario stores, provides a top rate of 25 an hour in the second year for part-timers with three years' service, a 100-per-cent increase from their current hourly rate of $1.50.

The employees, members of Local 175, Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, ratified the agreement in meetings at Don Mills, Mississauga, Oshawa, St. Catharines, Hamilton, Windsor and London.

Thatcher Hints at Saskatchewan Compulsory Arbitration Law

REGINA (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher said Tuesday night the legislature will begin an emergency session Friday to deal with Saskatchewan's labor problems if there is no agreement by then between Prince Albert Pulp Mill and its workers.

The special session would be the second in 10 weeks and the 1969 labor law to provide for possible compulsory arbitration in all strikes threatening the provincial economy.

Mr. Thatcher made the announcement after a two-hour session during which the strike against the Prince Albert mill and the possibility of a full general election were discussed. The strike began three weeks ago.

Mr. Thatcher cautioned from the caucus and while conceded that he felt the labor situation was still tense, said: "I have said nothing had been decided on that point. He declined to elaborate on the nature of the labor law proposals.

"Of course, there are other issues we could vote on election," he said. "We would be a good one, though. We do think the time has come when the fiscal powers of the people of Saskatchewan must be protected."

Mr. Thatcher said he was thinking of "an impartial labor court where judges are appointed for life, probably, and are neutral—one that would be fair to both sides."

He said: "I am convinced more and more they (judges) are the ultimate answer and I think if we are pressed, with enough time, what will happen is the people will."

The last general election in Saskatchewan was in 1967 and the Thatcher government could be as late as 1972. The Liberals in 1964 ended 20 years of rule by the Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation, predecessor of today's New Democratic Party.

The 1966 labor law, called the Essential Services Emergency Act and commonly known as Bill Two, originally was limited to workers in gas, water, power and hospital fields. It carries penalties of up to $1,000 a day.

The controversial law was applied in a transportation dispute in June by ordering striking construction workers, backed by a majority of the province's labor movement, to complete a series of public works to leave construction at a standstill.

The proposed second session would cope with a strike by 700 members of the Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers' union and the provincial government said last week that if the panel's construction of a $120 million second mill.

The strikers, seeking a first-year raise of 35 cents an hour and a second-year boost of eight per cent, have been offered 27 cents and 9½ per cent.

Police Public Relations Advocated

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Canadian police forces should learn from examples of violence in United States cities and not wait to cause tension, the Canadian Association of Police Chiefs was told Tuesday.

Detroit Police Commissioner Patrick Murphy told the association's annual conference that Canadian police forces have a chance to get ahead of their problems and they should not let that chance slip away as the U.S. police have done and the British are doing.

Communication is the key, he said, especially with the poor, the disorganized minority groups, the drug addict, youth and unemployed. Police, he said, should be trained to be versed in large-city crime.

He said police should be sent into the community to act—not in law and labor to people's problems.

Commissioner Murphy also urged that there be more recruiting of policemen from racial minority groups to match the composition of the community.

In Detroit, black officers who were weak in some areas of qualification and advantages because of their color in facing the problems of the black community.

He said many U.S. police departments still regard community relations as a frill, an outlook that appeared to be matched in Canada.

Any Municipality Can Get Mortgage Money for Condominiums

TORONTO (CP) — First-mortgage financing of condominium housing, so far largely confined to the Metropolitan Toronto area, is available for any municipality with an acceptable plan, Trade and Development Minister Stanley Haidasz said Tuesday.

Mr. Haidasz said in an interview first-mortgage financing is available for multiple units and for single-family dwellings that come within loan guidelines established by Ontario Housing Corp.

Gradual adoption of a policy of first-mortgage financing by Ontario is a break-through in the province's determination to house the two-thirds of the population of the province not in the Metropolitan Toronto area, he said.

"We can provide housing for the people in Toronto between $7,500 and $12,000, able to invest very, committed the province to to serve enough for the down payment on a house of their own.

One guideline which makes a proposal acceptable to the province call for one, two, three and four-bedroom dwellings—also suite apartment units or town houses—at prices ranging from $13,300 to $18,900, making possible down payments between $900 and $2,600.

One such proposal, accepted by Ontario in an announcement Monday, compares the province to $30 million in first-mortgage financing over the next three years in the borough of East York. Another, announced last $74 million to finance another 1,700 units in Scarborough.

Since March, when Ontario made its initial first-mortgage agreement, the province has now committed to $128 million financing for almost 28,000 condominium units.

"Builders had reached the point where they couldn't get financing from private sources and if they did they had to build expensive dwellings which required down payments beyond the reach of most people," Mr. Haidasz said.

The province has made $60 million available for the program.

Mr. Haidasz said the province is financing at only a point or three per cent above its own borrowing rate, and that means the cash flow from the projects this year will be about $21 million, going to $66 million in 1971-72 fiscal years.

"And the annual cash flow will rise as more condominium projects are approved and are started," he said.

"We know that 25 per cent of Ontario's apartments are able to carry a mortgage and retire it in principal, but they are blocked by high down payments.

"We can give them mortgages for 95 per cent of the dwelling cost, payable over 35 years, with interest now at 9¼ per cent."

Condominiums give the owner an equity position which the rent trade as his need for better accommodation grows, something he can't have through apartment rents.

Mr. Haidasz said if reputable first condominium housing will be considered from other municipalities he is sure that the land for the demand has been created from larger urban areas.

"If builders in other municipalities want to make a proposal, we will take a look at it, but we don't want to get involved in financing housing that is not saleable. We don't want our money committed to buildings that become only shelters, with a few of the units sold and the rest rented because no one wants to buy condominiums."

Tax Rebates Should Be Claimed

TORONTO (CP) — A government official said Tuesday that many tenants are not aware they should claim their municipal tax rebate within 30 days of moving.

And if they don't make the claim within six months they stand to lose the rebate, said William McLean, program manager of the Ontario department of municipal affairs rebates division.

Jim Harwood, Jerry Hill, Wes May, Don Holoway, Bob Wannamaker, Lyle Hall, Neil Campbell, Paul Goodfellow and Rusty Gervin were other vote-getters in the sportsmanship category.

CHICAGO (AP) — Kenny Wharram, 27, former all-star winger stricken with a heart ailment a year ago, notified Chicago Black Hawks of his retirement from professional hockey Tuesday. Wharram, a Black Hawk regular since the 1956-57 National Hockey League season, missed the entire 1957-58 season after skating the first day of the Hawks' pre-season practice last September. A routine medical examination disclosed a heart condition which placed Wharram in a hospital for intensive care for six weeks. He remained in the hospital until just prior to last Christmas. Wharram played a total of 766 games for the Hawks, scoring 353 goals, 361 assists and 836 points.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Centre Pit Martin of Chicago Black Hawks predicts contract troubles and possible player walkouts in National Hockey League training camps this fall if veterans do not get more money. "The juniors are getting a lot of money, and they aren't even proven National Leaguers," Martin said in reference to junior draft choices Bip Dale Tallon and Gil Perreault. "If they get it then we veterans should get some too." Tallon is reported to have a $20,000 contract with Vancouver Canucks.

Phoenix general manager Bob Wellwood said the appointment will mean that Erickson, who played for the Roadrunners as a defenceman, will retire as an active player. Quinte Lacrosse Differences Forgotten

Quinte District Lacrosse players will be getting together under much more amicable circumstances than usual for the league banquet, Saturday, September 13.

Arrangements were made last night, in a meeting at the Belleville Arena to hold a banquet for players, executives and referees at George's Restaurant in Campbellford.

Presentation of trophies and election of officers will be part of the program, which gets under way at 7 p.m.

Golden Mile Kids Get Boot

Unbreakable Tie!

Spectacular goalscoring was concentrated to the 1-1 deadlock between Bergy's Rails-Pizzeria and Belleville United peewee A league minor soccer action. The game was declared a draw after ten minutes of extra time.

Bergy's went ahead in the early stages of the game on a goal by Allan Rutherford but the game was tied on a penalty shot by Martin Thistel in the later part of the second half.

Golden Mile Tykes left little to luck as they poured across 13 runs, while limiting Harvey's to only four tallies. The win evens their best-of-five minor baseball final at one win apiece, with one game tied.

Peter Hall and Glen Andrews worked for the win ners, walking four batters and fanning 14. They supplied much of their own support as Andrews banged a triple and two singles, while Hall doubled and tripled. Danny Duffy and Jay Bretherick had the other hits for the winners.

For the losers, it was Mike Burke and Andy Lapenzis splitting the mound duties. Tony Simard collected three singles, while Burke slammed a double and single. Terry Kingman, Pat Burke and Ed Stuart each had one safety.

A stormy meeting of the league executive, over the question of player eligibility, has apparently caused the resignation of one top minor executive, as well as eliminating the Golden Mile mosquitoes from Cup competition.

Despite the use of two ineligible players, the Golden Mile team will be allowed to maintain the league title which they captured during the regular season. They were however, forced to forfeit a 3-0 playoff victory.

A protest by the Belleville United 'team, which Golden Mile had eliminated in Cup play, resulted in the discovery of the two over - age competitors.

"There was no dishonesty intended", said minor soccer president Bill Hockley. "The boys just made a mistake when filling out the year of birth on the forms at the start of the year."

Hockley was forced to cast the deciding vote, on whether to forfeit or re - play the Golden Mile - United playoff match, and decided that the former policy was fairest to all concerned, he said.

Former Giant Puts Some Beef in Eskimos' Ground Game

EDMONTON (CP) — For the first time this year, Edmonton Eskimos showed a respectable running game as they outpaced British Columbia Lions 30-9 in a Western Football Conference game Tuesday night.

The Eskimos picked up 179 yards along the ground, only 13 yards fewer than they had gained rushing in their first six games—five of which they lost.

A.J. Ka Piscatilley, formerly with New York Giants of the National Football League, was mainly responsible for the change.

He gained 89 yards on 14 carries, many of them in key situations, many of them in his own territory.

Terry Swarn, who carried six times for 94 yards, scored both Eskimo touchdowns, one on a 56-yard pass-and-run play and the other on a 38-yard running play. On each occasion his tremendous speed made the scores possible.

Dave Cutler converted the touchdowns and kicked field goals of 14 and 43 yards to complete the Eskimo scoring.

B.C. got a touchdown from quarterback Paul Brothers from seven yard out, a convert and a single from Ted Gerela and a single by Ken Phillips.

The win moved Edmonton into fourth place in the WFC with four points, two ahead of last-place Winnipeg Blue Bombers and two behind Calgary Stampeders.

The first and third quarters were scoreless. Edmonton held a 16-9 lead at half time then clinched the game with 12 points in 13 seconds in the fourth quarter.

On Swarn's first touchdown he took a short pass over the middle from quarterback Don Trull, followed a key block by Mike Eben, then hot-footed it into the end zone without a B.C. defender getting close to him.

His last-quarter score was an individual effort around the right side of the Edmonton line that past the B.C.'s defensive backs. It came on the first play from scrimmage following a 30-yard interception of a Carroll Williams pass and only 15 seconds after Cutler had kicked his 43-yard field goal.

"We finally got some good offensive blocking which allowed the wide stuff to go," he said after the game. "I think that with the people we now have we will be able to run outside and off tackle."

Jauch also said that the defence, which picked off four B.C. passes, played an outstanding game.

"We took a stack defence. The last time we played B.C. they ran wild. This time we had the linebackers up close which meant we had to let Brothers pass, but that we could stop Jim Sweeney and Dr. Whitfield from running."

Swarn caught three passes for 74 yards and leads the CFL in receptions with 28. Tom Neiles caught two and is second in the CFL with 26.

Over-all, Edmonton had a net offence of 338 yards, 179 rushing and 159 passing while B.C. totalled 342 yards, 88 rushing and 254 passing.

Edmonton had 18 first downs and the Lions 12.

TORONTO (CP) — Jake Gaudaur, Canadian Football League commissioner, said Tuesday the earliest possible date a decision could be made on a London, Ont., franchise application would be next February. A group of London businessmen announced plans Monday to seek a CFL franchise for the 1972 season. A London application would have to gain approval of all the EFC members plus at least three from the Western Conference. Gaudaur said he has not yet received any letter from the London group. "All that has taken place so far is a conversation between myself and someone from London." He said there has never been any formal application for a franchise from the London area, although there have been inquiries. "But most of these people have been discouraged when they find that it costs at least $850,000 and up to $1 million a year to operate a CFL team. "And that means they need an average of 22,000 at each game so they need a stadium with a seating capacity of at least 35,000." The London group's plans call for a new stadium with seating capacity of 30,000 at a cost of $3 million.

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonaut flanker Bobby Taylor and defensive halfback Dick Thorston were in hospital Tuesday for knee surgery that will keep them sidelined at least a month; Taylor's original injury occurred in Toronto's first season game against Montreal Alouettes Aug. 4; Thorston twisted his knee in a game against Winnipeg Blue Bombers Aug. 26.

CHOOSE FROM THREE TYPES OF STANCES

There are three basic types of stances.

The square stance is one in which the feet are equi-distant from the intended line of the shot. This stance is designed for all long shots, but the driver on down to about the 4-iron, and will most consistently produce straight flights.

The open stance is one in which the left foot is withdrawn farther than the right from the intended line. The right foot does not move—the left is withdrawn. This stance is generally used for shorter shots with the higher irons, or when a golfer wishes to produce a left-to-right shot.

CORK: Stars and Stripes Forever

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — America's yachts gave way in only one of the 11 classes on the third day of racing Tuesday at the Canadian Olympic-training Regatta Kingston, bowing to a Canadian boat in the International 14s.

The lineup in the over-all standings remained unchanged on the basis of nationality—with Americans on top in nine classes and Britons leading in the other two—but there were a few changes among the individual leaders.

The strong contingent of more than 170 American yachts looked certain to win the lion's share of the honors.

More than 670 yachts were competing for North American, Canadian or Canadian-American Open championships during the six days of sailing through Friday.

Strongest sailors to date among the Americans have been three-time winners Carl Van Duyne of Annapolis, Md., in the Finn class; G. S. (Bud) Friedrichs Jr. of New Orleans in the Dragons and Bud Melges of Zenda, Wis., in the Solings.

Mort Lund, Goldcrest of Chicago in the lightning class and Alan Hoit of Seattle in the Stars each were double winners after the first two races in their classes, which left a total of five leads.

Tuesday's win in the 14s by John Robertson, 41, an insurance adjuster from Burlington, Ont., shot him to fourth place in the Finn class; G. S. (Bud) Friedrichs Jr. of New Orleans in the Dragons and Bud Melges of Zenda, Wis., in the Solings.

Alou's Timing Perfect for Pirates

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Pittsburgh Pirates were beginning to wonder if they'd ever win again.

Then third baseman Matty Alou, a starting five-drive hitter who had 200 games in his blood a season, lashed his first homer of the year Tuesday night—a two-run blast in the sixth inning—which snapped a 5-5 tie and Willie Stargell followed with another shot with a man on, sending the Pirates to an 8-6 triumph over the Montreal Expos.

The victims, who had lost six game National League East edge over the New York Mets, who won 12 innings before subduing St. Louis Cardinals 4-3.

The Chicago Cubs dropped to third place, two games back, after absorbing a 3-2 defeat in 11 innings at the hands of the red-hot Philadelphia Phillies.

In other NL games, San Francisco Giants stopped Cincinnati Reds 8-5, Los Angeles Dodgers swept a pair from Atlanta Braves, 4-3, 3-2 and San Diego Padres 3-2 in 10 innings.

Bob Veale, 9-14, hurled six hitless innings before Bob Bailey homered in the seventh for the Expos. Montreal tagged the left-hander for two more runs, knocking Veale out but John Lamb baited the rally.

Alou, a .313 career hitter, lifted his 1970 average to .306, adding a pair of singles. The homer was his first in 1,061 at bats. His last coming on June 4 of last year.

That was a real big one for us," said Mets' skipper Gil Hodges, "Matty had his six of their last eight games.

Gibson gave up 11 hits, the last to Garrett to the 12th. The Mets' third baseman then stole second and went to third on shortstop Bud Harrelson's error before Jones' winning fly ball.

The fourth-place Cards dropped seven games behind Pittsburgh.

Terry Harmon's two-out pinch single in the 12th inning lifted the Phillies to their fifth straight victory and Philadelphia, in 10th place, remained 7½ games behind the Pirates.

Don Money's two-run homer in the eighth inning had tied it for the Phils off the Cubs' Ken Holtzman. Ron Santo had a two-run shot for the Cubs in the sixth.

Pinch hitter John Stephenson drilled a two-run double in the eighth inning, sending San Francisco to its fifth straight victory.

The Reds, who have lost four of five, were stopped by Gaylord Perry, 16-12. Bobby Bonds added a homer for the Giants.

Los Angeles got to within 10 games of the West Division leader behind the pitching of Ray Lamb and Joe Moeller and the slugging of Willie Davis and Jim Lefebvre.

Reliever Lamb capped his fifth victory without a loss in the opener with four scoreless innings and Lefebvre cracked a two-run homer.

In the nightcap Moeller, 7-6, scattered five hits and Davis ripped a two-run homer. Orlando Cepeda socked homers in each game for the Braves as Atlanta fell to its sixth straight loss.

Twins See More Daylight After Bunker's Annual Win

Wally Bunker, Kansas City Royals righthander, hurled a three-hitter Tuesday night for his first victory in 11 months, as the Royals shut out California Angels 4-0.

Combined with Minnesota Twins 6-0, 7-1 sweep of a doubleheader with Milwaukee Brewers, the loss dropped California 11½ games and left them 4½ behind the American League's West Division leading Twins.

Elsewhere, New York Yankees trimmed Baltimore Orioles 4-3, Detroit Tigers outlasted Boston Red Sox 10-9, Oakland Athletics edged Chicago White Sox 6-5 and Cleveland Indians topped Washington Senators 4-3.

Bunker, plagued by arm trouble this season, was 6-8 and carried a hefty 5.53 earned run average into his win when he took the mound against the Angels.

California quickly jinxed the hexes with none on in the first inning, but Bunker weaved his way out of the jam and was virtually home free after that.

Kansas City bunched five hits and scored all of its runs in the seventh. Ike-Agent Ed Kirkpatrick and Paul Schaal played prominent roles—Kirkpatrick with three hits.

Bunker drove in a run on a fielder's choice and the RBI, like the victory, was his first of the season.

Bunker's last victory was on Oct. 2, 1969, exactly 11 months ago today.

The Twins rode Harmon Killebrew's big bat to their sweep over Milwaukee. Killebrew exploded a pair of three-run homers—one in each game, and drove in seven runs.

Japanese Veterinary Won't Tell How He Preserved Wife's Body 12 Years

TOKYO (Reuters) — A 75-year-old Japanese veterinarian who for 11 years has preserved the body of his Argentine wife in a Mother-combination of Western science and oriental secrets refuses to disclose his secret.

Dr. Keisaburo Miyamoto claims to have developed a method of preserving human bodies indefinitely.

"Scientists hate me," he says. "So why should I tell other medical groups of the method it has taken me 30 years to develop?"

But the doctor, who now lives in the village of Tono, northeast of Tokyo, did drop a hint or two about his method to Japanese scientists.

"You should not confuse physics with chemistry," he says.

"The idea is to fix the cells with cerebrum (a metallic chemical element) with the addition of other elements, depending on that part of the body you want to set."

An earlier report from Argentina quoted him as saying some years ago that the method involves crystalizing the blood and keeping the pores of the body open.

Miyamoto married an Argentine girl at Buenos Aires in 1932. His wife died in July, 1946, at the age of 46, and in her will instructed her husband to use his preserving method on her, following his earlier experiments with animals.

Miyamoto says he began work on the body 11 hours after her death.

"It took me one year to treat the body. I hardly slept at night during the first month," He removed no organs.

Today, he claims, the weight of his body is still the same, the eyes are gleaming and the skin looks as fresh as if she were still alive.

"It will never get moldy. If the skin ever became discolored, I could quickly remedy it."

In May, 1956, Miyamoto returned to Japan for the first time in more than 30 years to pay his respects to his ancestors' graves. He left his wife's body in his locked home in Baurio, Argentina.

Ill health has since prevented him from returning to Argentina.

His wife's body, he says, is still "sleeping in bed" in Rosario with a mummified dog and a doll she loved in her bedside. He used to wash her regularly with soap and water.

Schools Outdated

SARNIA (CP) — The province's superintendent of school curriculum says schools are outdated because they do not provide a sense of acceptance.

J. E. Crossley told a workshop meeting of Lambton County yesterday Monday Ontario's schools are organized like corporations: "lowest planning and the rationalization of programs."

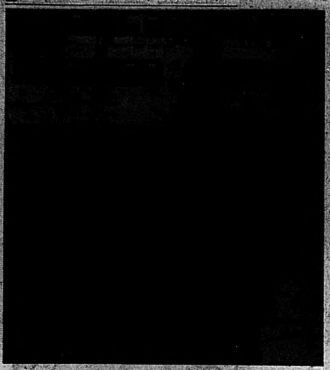
"The plans thus formed are so complex that it is difficult to change them," he said. "Students have less chance to alter those programs than before, to adapt to their own needs and interests, to make continuous progress."

He said schools must organize themselves as the ideal family would, around acceptance and goal interpersonal relationships, while still emphasizing "don't hurt the other guy."

Rail Probe Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission opens hearings into the causes of three midsummer railway accidents Sept. 24, it was announced Tuesday.

Along with enquiries into the specific accidents, the commission will invite evidence on railway maintenance and operating practices and all matters and things likely to cause or prevent railway derailments and collisions between trains."



On Aug. 12 the commission announced the enquiries would be held, expressing concern about an apparent increase in the frequency of accidents.

The three specific accidents to be investigated are a CPR freight train derailment at Oshawa, Ont., a CNR freight derailment at Port Hope, Ont., and a CNR collision near Strathroy involving a passenger train and a track motor car.

LATE COMMEMORATION

PRINCE ALBERT, South Africa (AP) — Hanale le Roux, 78, has received a medal for war services—50 years late. Le Roux served as a dispatch rider in 1914 during the First World War. The war records office mailed him a Bronze Star on Feb. 12, 1951. It made an extensive tour of post offices and arrived this year.

A Boost to Morale

Questions And Answers

By The Ontario Motor League

QUESTION: We are going to be spending a few days vacation in the Bonthbay Harbor area of Maine. Can you give us any information about this place?

ANSWER: A picturesque old seaport, Bonthbay Harbor is in the center of one of the most delightful resort regions in Maine. Fishing craft lie at anchor along the wharves that follow the winding lines of the quaint village streets. Visitors may note shipbuilding plants and board many of the lobster and fishing boats for a first-hand glimpse at the workings of Bonthbay's industry.

The landlocked harbor is seldom rough and is well marked. During the summer and through October, river and ocean cruises, lasting from a few hours to an entire day, and deep sea fishing boats are available at Bonthbay Harbor. There are trips to Bath Factories, Christmas Cove, Pemaquid Island, Wiscasset, Oven's Mouth, Pemaquid and Monhegan Island.

Bonthbay Playhouse Museum, in Bonthbay Playhouse, about 9½ miles north on State 27, presents an extensive collection of theatrical memorabilia, with emphasis on Edwin Booth, America's foremost Shakespearean actor. Exhibits include costumes, jewelry, portraits, prints, rare playbills and other items associated with great actors. Open July 1 through Labor Day, Monday 10 to 1.30, Tuesday through Saturday and holidays 10 a.m. to close of evening performance; free.

Monhegan Island, 9 miles off the coast, is reached by daily cruises in the summer. The island, home of many artists, has the highest cliffs on the New England coast. Cruises leave Bonthbay Harbor for a full day's trip with three hours on the island, daily, July through Labor Day.

Old motoring manuals carried advice that would seem ridiculous today, says the Ontario Motor League. For example, if you ran out of gas, a 1909 manual advised: "If your engine is warm, you can nearly always get home on kerosene or alcohol or bad whiskey."

Around the same time, when the average motorist knew more about oats than gasoline, this advice was offered: "Never fill your gas tank with a lighted cigar or lamp in the immediate neighborhood."

The do-it-yourself craze of our modern era is not new. In the owner's guide for the 1933 chain driven Cadillac you were instructed to concoct your own chain lubrication in the following manner: "Take about four pounds of beef tallow, about one pound of flake graphite and about one pound of heavy lubricating oil. Heat and stir. When thoroughly mixed, immediately put the cleaned chain in the hot oil."

However there was one "don't" stressed in almost every motorist's guide, which hasn't lost any of its importance: "Don't forget to fill the gasoline tank before starting."

COKE SHORTAGE

Britain faces a 700,000-ton shortage of coke next winter under its anti-pollution program. Unless a furnace has been specially equipped it may not burn regular coal which gives off smoke. The right control of the burning of untreated coal has paid off in cleaner cities.

Hall of Canadian Aviation History Campaign Is Gaining National Support

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Construction of the $1.6 million Hall of Canadian Aviation History, just west of CFB Trenton, should begin in the spring of 1960.

If all goes according to plan, the dramatic pyramid structure will be finished by the end of '62 according to Wing Cmdr. Trevor Atherton, information officer at Canadian Forces Headquarters, who is attached to the project.

Interior plans are scheduled for fitting on the site during 1972, with the official opening of the Hall of Canadian Aviation in the September centennial.

Enthusiasm for the project has been centred in the Quinte region for more than two years but it has assumed national proportions in the last few months.

A fund - raising blitz was kicked off in Toronto last week to subscribe money for the museum-memorial.

Campaign structure has been completed with its headquarters shifting from Toronto to Ottawa. It is hoped that the move will give the campaign a broader national appeal, according to Major Thom.

Managing a national campaign from Trenton had its difficulties but that was not the principal problem, it is. "It was held up primarily by corporate slowdowns in the last year . . . there is no fight," Major Thom said.

Originally the campaign was to be a memorial to the RCAF and the memorial fund was incorporated with an Ontario charter in February, 1958.

Campaign chairman initially was Col. Thomas Duff and the aging war hero — people were not anxious to contribute to a memorial.

In September of the same year, Duff, Abbott, and Associates, a Montreal-based consultants firm was engaged to devise the best money-raising approaches.

Consultants recommended by mid 1959 that the complex be more than a memorial, that it have a more dynamic function.

In November of 1958, the memorial was given the additional purpose of being a Hall of Canadian Aviation History.

The revised plan clearly been a boost, for one of the biggest single contributors to the museum-memorial project is now the aviation industry itself.

Phillip Garratt, chairman of the Hall of Aviation's Trustee committee, has had long service in the field of aviation, as owner of both Canadian Vickers and Garratt-Massey Aircraft firms.

The corporate campaign is well-organized but its success depends on the generosity of the citizenry. Now the campaign is "ready to move again" — and so is the fund.

Impetus was given to the campaign by the support of Air Marshal Larry Breadner, who became president of the Hall's board of directors in November, 1958.

Architect for the complex is Victor Prus of Toronto, a man who has already acquired a considerable international reputation.

He won a national competition for a centennial project at Quinte College, consisting of two theatres and a conservatory of music and worked with an award-winning design for a pavilion at Expo 67.

Design of the Hall of Aviation History was determined by a competition organized by the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada.

Ninety-nine designs were received by May 1958 and on August 25, the Prus concept was selected.

The building is a mound rising as a symbol of man's effort to fly, according to the architect.

Contained within the structure will be a large meeting room, an interdenominational chapel, an RCAF memorial, and a hall of aviation history.

The RAF Association is particularly interested in the memorial aspect, as is the organization known as Women of the RCAF.

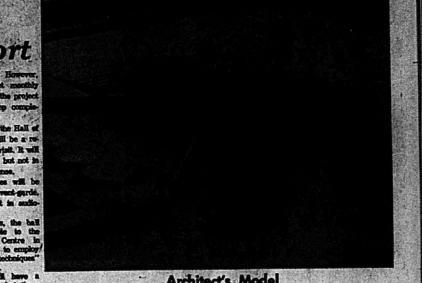
Both groups are campaigning for the centre. The RCAF Association has declared the Trenton development its national project.

The association will be raising money for the museum - memorial across Canada in September and October with individual wing heads.

Women of the RCAF have already secured $1,500 toward the scheme, through dinners and the sale of such items as souvenir spoons.

A nation - wide marchathon by Royal Canadian Air Cadets in September is also expected to be a big money winner.

The corporate and industrial section, of the campaign, which had the most lucrative results, accounting for most of the over $500,000 already received in cash and pledges.



Substantial contribution has been made by the Federal Government, which donated 35 acres of land as location for the museum-memorial complex.

Furthermore, Ottawa will maintain the building once it Ontario reserves present for a full-day's program starting with a parade at 10 a.m. and opening ceremonies at 1 p.m.

Events include a 6,000-yard contest, tug-o-war and various athletic contests.

Do-It-Yourself Park To Open on Weekend

TYENDINAGA — The Bay of Quinte Mohawks can add another feather in their community hat Monday and that's the public is invited to join in the ceremony.

Scene of the event is the Mohawk Recreation Park — a play-and-picnic area overlooking the Bay of Quinte shoreline just west of Deseronto.

The site is also a startling example of how willing hands make light work of cost factors in the construction of a park.

Just two years ago, the area was a bush-covered 12 acres chosen by some of the most historic Indian grounds in the province.

Its transformation has been due in the main to what Chief Ellsworth Hill calls an "all-round effort."

Mohawks—the chief among them — pitched in with time and keen enjoyment to clear and shape the park's landscape. The result of such labor donations was a financial saving.

For the project, about $5,000 in federal grants were available. Without the volunteered aid from various persons, the finished project might well have cost four times that amount, says Chief Hill.

"It shows that people working together can accomplish quite a bit," he said.

The park's opening is being spread over two days.

Saturday is children's day — with a large - scale picnic planned on the site.

Sunday brings the official opening, with federal government members from six other Ontario reserves present for a full-day's program starting with a parade at 10 a.m. and opening ceremonies at 1 p.m.

Events include a 6,000-yard contest, tug-o-war and various athletic contests.

Belleville Man Napanee Officer

Ronald Hall of Belleville has started a new career as constable for the Napanee Police Department.

Mr. Hall, 23, was educated at Queen Alexandra Public School and Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School. He is married and has lived in Belleville all his life.

"I have always wanted to get into police work. It will be a good future and there should never be a dull moment," said Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall worked two years for Bell Cleaners as a driver and comes from there to his new position in Napanee. He also worked as a driver for Coca-Cola in Belleville for three years.

"The best part of the job I think I'll like is helping people. I like to meet people and that's a big part of this job."

Rodeo Clowns Do A Big Job

PICTON (Staff) — Rodeo clowns Bill Hawkins and Boer Wiens agree that their profession gives a man more than one opportunity to "die laughing." Dressed in their colorful and ridiculous costumes these two men with the 4-B Ranch Rodeo, one of the coming attractions at Picton fair.

The clowns are quick to explain that being "funny" is not their real vocation. They're acting across the arena during a rodeo performance. Bill and Boer provide important protection for the bull riders who climb aboard the crossbred Brahmas used by the rodeo in fair time competition.

"The cross bred Brahma bull is probably the most irascible of all the world's domesticated animals. He is the only animal in rodeo regarded as a potential killer," says one of the clowns in a serious voice. He adds that although the bulls may appear docile on pasture or in holding pens, separated from the herd and turned out of the chutes they fight with everything they have — their skidding hooves, horns and tremendous weight. Despite their ponderous appearance, these bulls can move with the agility of cats. They have no fear of a man on horseback and will attack him without he a Station. Mounted pickup men are ready to lift a rider from the back of a bull if he is unable to dismount safely.

Bill calls as "all-round effort."

Mohawks—the chief among them — pitched in with time and keen enjoyment to clear and shape the park's landscape. The result of such labor donations was a financial saving.

For the project, about $5,000 in federal grants were available. Without the volunteered aid from various persons, the finished project might well have cost four times that amount, says Chief Hill.

Macdonald Is Rumored Cadieux's Successor As Defence Minister

OTTAWA — Donald Macdonald, MP for Rosedale, re-elected for the defence ministry post in a Cabinet shuffle due later this month, it is strongly rumored.

Authoritative sources here say Mr. Macdonald will replace Leo Cadieux, who is to be named ambassador to France.

Mr. Macdonald has been president of the Privy Council and Government Leader in the Commons since shortly after the 1958 general election.

They describe him as straightforward, honest and conscientious in the advice of professional military men. His predecessor, Paul Hellyer, earned opposition sympathetic within the forces because of vacillation.

Mr. Cadieux is the rumored appointment of Mr. Macdonald if decision is mined. Some officers fear the close relationship with the minister that they enjoyed under Mr. Cadieux will be lost under his successor. Others welcome the appointment of a forceful young minister with close ties to Mr. Trudeau, hoping he will be a powerful advocate for the armed forces within the cabinet.

Mr. Macdonald, 38, will come to the job at a difficult time. The defence budget is frozen at $1.8 billion until the end of 1973, with the result that the overall strength of the forces is being cut back to 52,000 from 98,000 and a number of bases are being closed.

The general mood, among both officers and men, is one of uncertainty as to their personal futures and the future of the services. Many officers believe the government is reducing military expenditures to the point of ineffectiveness.

Mr. Macdonald's job, authorities predict, will be to restore confidence and clarify the forces' future role.

He will be required to make an early decision on a replacement for the aging Arrow aircraft, now used for anti-submarine work, regarded as something of a Canadian specialty.

Hillier Home Totally Destroyed

HILLIER (Staff) — A Hillier township family was left homeless Monday afternoon when fire swept their farm home causing an estimated $25,000 damage. The two-storey stucco house occupied by Lawrence Closson and his family was totally destroyed despite the efforts of the Wellington fire department.

None of the Clossons' belongings could be saved and the family's dog perished in the flames.

A caretaker at Wellington Consolidated school Mr. Closson was at work when the blaze broke out in the woodshed of his home. The alarm was called in by his brother and neighbor, Earl Closson.

A spokesman for the Wellington fire department said yesterday that the cause of the fire is unknown. The loss was partially covered by insurance. The Clossons are now living in a mobile home on the property of Hillier resident R. Haggarty.

Marmora Fair Set for Monday

The 1976 Marmora Fall Fair, held annually on Labor Day, has been in the planning stages since last year, with advance meetings held recently by officers, directors and committees of the agricultural society.

Booths have had a new coat of paint, and several improvements have been made in the prize list, now off the press. Revisions especially noted are in the children's section, and with better prizes this year, more entries are expected. There have also been improvements and changes in the women's entries.

The midway is by Cooper and Spencer of Orono, and the stage program emceed by Keith Tompkins, will feature the Wildwood Boys from Cobourg. Local talent competing during the afternoon and evening will be eligible for good prizes.

The fair will be officially opened at 1 p.m., Monday, by officials of the municipality, although a full house is expected Sunday for the races by annual betting.

Monday's program will include road, chariot, and pony races, horse drawing contests of heavy, light and pony. The 4-H Club, with 28 members, one of the largest in Hastings County, had 31 entries at last year's fair, and intends to again have first class exhibits of beef and dairy calves for Achievement Day.

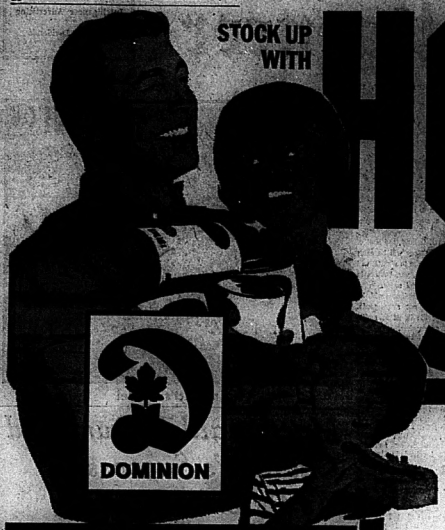
William Moreton Passes Exam

William Moreton, chief clerk in the Belleville public works department has been successful in passing his first year's examination in a three - year correspondence course for municipal clerks and treasurers through Queen's University.

Twenty - seven persons throughout Ontario are taking the course sponsored by the clerk's and treasurer's association. Mr. Moreton was one of 17 who received "B" standing in the first year exams.

Decoration Day Parade



MARMORA — Annual Decoration Day parade by the Stage Branch Legion, Branch 277, Marmora, began at legion hall. Major Percy Gray, president, led the parade, and Jim Rathwell was in charge of five sets of colors. Army, Navy and Air Force Kilty Band, Duke of Edinburgh Branch, Belleville, followed. In command of the legionnaires and women's auxiliary.

Rev. G. W. Kemp, new minister of the Free Methodist Church, led prayers and gave a short talk at Marmora Protestant Cemetery, and Rev. Father T. G. Sonnier, at Sacred Heart Cemetery. Poppies were placed at each veteran's marker, and flowers deposited at the Legion Plot. The Lament was played by the band major at each cemetery, followed by two minutes' silence.

TV to Emphasize Social Messages

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The approaches of television season may go into the books as the year when the medium tried hard to take social enlightenment with entertainment.

Producers of the series spoke forcefully of "relevance" and brag about the use of meaningful themes.

Narrative and drug abuse by the young are such popular ingredients in scripts that they threaten to become dreaded clichés. Pushers are the new villains and the terrible consequences of addiction are unabashed.

Marcus Welby, M.D. will open its season with a story about venereal disease—"pulling no punches," says star Robert Young. It comes at a time when health authorities are alarmed about soaring VD rates.

Racial tensions and the chasm between ethnic and age groups as well as ecological destruction are under the microscope.

Even situation comedies will use such themes. Headmaster, in a school setting, has stories about drugs, rejection by parents and one episode about a disgusted boy thinking of suicide.

NBC began the second season of its First Tuesday with a two-hour September edition that ranged leisurely from a revealing Shenandoah description of Liberia to a report on a Hollywood starlet. Tina Louise, who now is a teacher of yoga.

Generally the program was low key, and it still has a tendency to linger overlong on some subjects which don't hold up too well. That was particularly true of a report on a Missouri farm family which lives next to a Minuteman missile site.

There was some turbulence film showing life in the William Kissant home where their infant adoptees are growing up. Shown was bathing time in the kitchen sink, feeding time with help from neighbors, and there were some awesome statistics including 6 gallons of milk a month, 60 diapers a week.

Marmora

MARMORA — Jim (Doc) Thompson was taken to Peterborough Civic Hospital after falling and breaking his hip last Friday. The accident occurred at home.

Mrs. Fern Richardson has returned from Belleville General Hospital and is convalescing at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Richardson, 34 Tracey St., Belleville.

Prior to the departure in August of Rev. and Mrs. Douglas Miller for their new post at Wooler, Mrs. Granville Mashkyben entertained at a tea in honor of Mrs. Miller.

Coffin Show

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Italian morticians have opened the first national exhibition of the latest fashions in coffins. Officials said the exhibits include square, circular and rocket-shaped coffins as well as traditional rectangular designs.

Theatre Guild Preens Playhouse

It's spring cleaning in the fall for members of the Belleville Theatre Guild who are in charge of the community center's playhouse. They're hoping to have the gaily painted home back in business by Christmas.

Extensive renovations, now nearly within sight, have been applied, but more involved than they anticipated when they cleaned the "crew" room in preparation for the guild's opening season.

But the job isn't done yet and the delays incurred by people on vacation and firms setting the pattern of the season's activities.

"It's a big drive," Mr. Kenshen said about the clean-up and the repairs. We've still a long way to go."

Once the downstairs section is completed it will become a more important segment of theatrical activities.

"It should become a centre for traditional theatre people," Mr. Kenshen said.

The guild's summer theatre would allow the use of space in theatre goers on a membership basis. Also the dressing and addition of various lighting and sound equipment during the guild's productions.

Wrong Uniform

LONDON (AP) — Vicky Vernon, who gave up nursing to become a stripper, developed a routine in which she pared off a nurse's uniform and gauges the temperature of the audience. A spokesman for the Royal College of Nursing said today: "A nurse's uniform is made for a special purpose and this is not it."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Forgive these initial remarks: "Everybody is obese!" What's food but poison for another? We're not all built the same.

All evidently likely to repeat! I subscribe to, Think of the jokes laughed with ago, but the fact that they pursued and survived is reason enough to believe that there is substance in those sayings.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Don't you agree that we are all different and should live our lives according to how we are built? For example, when I get a headache I have my wife massage my neck and it goes away. But a friend of mine says she knows a better way! Why not just take an aspirin like he does? I don't mind, except that it upsets my stomach for days.

Another friend of mine gets up at five o'clock three mornings a week so he can get in a round of golf before he goes to the office. He loves it, but it would kill me.

Then there's the fellow in my office who is always turning up the air - conditioner so I almost freeze. I like it warm. I've given you only a few examples. I'm sure there are a million of them. Mr. F.

Comment: More than a million. Each one of the billion of us is different. Let's consider just one of the examples you brought up: getting up early to play golf. There may be a physical as well as mental or emotional reason why you and your friend differ.

As you have said, we live "according to how we are built." You may have been born naturally lazy. And to exercise requires physical activity to fulfill his needs.

There are three main body types. Where do you fit in? Ectomorph (the asthenic type); mesomorph (the athletic type); endomorph (the pyknic or leptosomatic type).

If you are an ectomorph, you are the lean, hungry type, tall and wiry, with small, thin bones, thin chest, long hands, flat muscles and fine calves. You do not need much exercise because you always look thin no matter how much you eat or exert yourself.

If you are a mesomorph you are a natural candidate for the exercise club. You are athletic. You have a square body and prominent hand muscles. You have large bones, you have broad shoulders broad. You have a well - developed and strong chest, broad calf and thigh muscles.

If you are an endomorph, you are usually endowed with a philosophy of physical inactivity. You are the type who specializes in subjecting your unwilling muscles to exercise only when you have to exercise your muscles to exercise. You have a large, soft body, a thick neck, and prominent fatty breasts. Your arms and legs are short, your trunk long. Your thighs and calves are fat and heavy.

Few of us really stand back and take an objective look at ourselves to learn which body type we approximate. If we did, more of us would understand why some of us hate physical exercise, why others are physically lazy. Why some can take an aspirin while others can't. Why some like it cold, others hot.

To end on the same thought we began with: "What's food for me is poison for another." (Guest bon (ton.)

For Mr. R.: Some doctors believe (and I agree) that it's more important to follow the doctor's directions and take his prescribed medicines regularly—than to worry excessively about diet in the treatment of gout.

• • •

For Mrs. C.: Some degree of osteoarthritis is found in most people after 40. Usually it is not as disabling as rheumatoid arthritis.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Old Days Full of Guile

The rise of the "consumer movement" in recent years is no doubt a healthy and healthful development; in our complex and specialized society, the consumer needs a lot more protection than he did in the simple economy of the past.

But it is a nostalgic mistake to imagine that commercial life was more honest and decent a century ago; the "good old days" were full of guile, duplicity and misrepresentation that would make a modern merchant look down to his heels.

In connection with the 100th anniversary of Barnum's circus this summer — its birthplace was a Wisconsin town not far from Racine — I reread M. R. Werner's old biography of P. T. Barnum, who began his career in the New England country store business around 1830.

"Deception is a common practice" in that business, his biographer informs us. "Barnum wrote that often he relied upon bundles of rags brought to the store by country women in exchange for goods, and found that what were ostensibly good linen and cotton rags contained in their midst extra weight in the shape of stone graves or old iron. Farmers regularly brought their load of oats, corn and rye into town short of their stated weight."

Barnum had a job in a country store and said of it: "Our cottons were sold for wool, our wool for cotton for silk and linen; in fact nearly everything was different from what it purported. The consumers cheated us in their labels; we cheated the fashionmen with our goods. Each party expected to be cheated, and almost always gratified that expectation."

It is no wonder, then, that Barnum felt that "humbug" was the chief ingredient of success. "Success in business," he wrote, "depends on the ability to deceive men with their own consent."

If commercial dishonesty was so rampant in his day, why was it tolerated, when so much less is under attack today? My opinion is that the impersonality of modern fraud is what infuriates the public. In the past, it was face to face, and the customer knew who to go to and who to blame in the personal transaction. Today even though the merchandiser is far more honest and scrupulous, the growth of the large, impersonal corporation has frustrated the customer in his attempt to track down the source of his dissatisfaction. "Consumer legislation" is the psychological vengeance for this trend.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For September 2

Your birthday today: This coming year includes many incidents of sudden and unexpected change. Be ready to move with developing situations. Earning should improve somewhat, depending the way you meet the challenges. Social activity (including romantic interest) fills every idle moment. Today's natives are self-sufficient, able to do many things well, particularly that related to commerce.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): In a relatively quiet day, do little beyond your usual routines. Do something extra, such as establishing a new and good habit.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You have to push a bit harder, but it's worth the effort. Allow others time to come to conclusions of their own, while you steadily do your share of the chores.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Temptations to scatter energy on pleasure beset you. Creative projects thrive better. This evening go visiting or look up memories from long ago.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Peacemaking settlement of old topics are stressed today. Re-examine recent history and see where you strayed from the most productive line of effort — if you have.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Keep busy, no matter what the distraction or the invitation to loaf. Determine the full details of your work to avoid confusion later.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Very little of importance is going on. Get rid of useless possessions. Pick up the pieces in any of your recent acts has perplexed anybody.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Put off any major beginnings aside from this, the day is excellent for nearly everything. Your personal affairs are more amenable to improvement.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Convert unsuitable materials to different uses. Your friends in charity will be able to use possessions that are of no further use to you. Neglected work should be finished now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): This rather normal day has opportunities for self-expression, self - improvement. Find time for your favorite hobbies, particularly in competitive situations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Put in a complete day of regular work, in good humor. Make a list of changes and corrections and quietly attend to them. Good news calls for a celebration this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 19): Congenial association help out in all important sectors. Lay out schemes and schedules, think of alternatives if present plans prove unfeasible.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Different versions of the most important today than major decisions. Speculation is to be avoided altogether. Budget paper work of all sorts are really handled.

Hostile Environment

The close proximity of a contemporary building to this early 20th-century house in Ottawa is an example of what the developers of the Canadian Inventory of Historic Buildings call a hostile environment. Chances are the house won't survive the non-residential development taking place around it. (CP Photo)

Universities Need to Change Goal

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean-Luc Pepin, federal minister of industry and commerce, told the fifth conference of the Inter-national Association of Universities that a more humanistic approach is needed in university education.

Mr. Pepin said universities today produce excellent people "but their humanism does not seem in tune with society.

"We must integrate all these people into a more humanistic approach. There is a great gap between cultured people and those who are not."

Persons with artistic tendencies and those with commercial leanings should be in the same channel of humanism. They share similar talents although they pursue different goals, he said.

Earlier Tuesday, delegates to the week-long conference discussed the central issues of international university co-operation and the needs of contemporary society.

A delegate from Ghana said university people must avoid "the danger of living in an ivory tower." University administrators must become increasingly aware of the public mood and the practical needs of society.

The senior economics and social ministers from the eight countries were invited to the conference because of the greater participation in the economic field.

Yoshiro Sawaya, president of Waseda Shigaku University in Tokyo, said a willingness to allow students to participate in administration at all levels has been somewhat stifled "because society seems to be asking too much."

Salvador Lopez, president of the University of the Philippines, said his university was among the first in the world to grant student participation at the administrative level "but we don't think any university in the world should be made if they will lead to a lower standard."

MAINTAIN UNIFORM

OROMOCTO, N.B. (CP) — The traditional RCMP uniform, including Stetson hat, breeches, boots and spurs, has become largely a ceremonial dress, used in formal parades or on duty in national parks or at the Parliament Buildings in Ottawa.

But here and elsewhere in New Brunswick where the RCMP perform a number of community police duties the mounties perform many chores including directing traffic while wearing the traditional uniform. The custom has the approval of headquarters in Ottawa.

U.S. Thinks Egypt Broke Truce Terms

Syria Backs Iraq

From AP-Reuters

The split in the Arab world over the U.S. peace plan hardened again when Syria today joined Iraq in threatening military intervention to defend Arab guerrillas against the Jordanian army.

Iraq, with forces in Jordan, and Syria oppose the peace plan along with the Palestinian Arab guerrillas. Jordan, Egypt and Israel accepted it—but in Israel's case with reservations.

Today, the governing Socialist Baath party of Syria issued a statement in Damascus saying:

"All of Syria's potential has been placed at the disposal of the guerrilla leadership" in Amman, the Jordanian capital.

"Syria cannot remain idle to ward attempts to liquidate the Palestinian revolution," the statement broadcast over the state-controlled Damascus radio said.

The Syrian threat is apparently meant to stop King Hussein of Jordan from cracking down on guerrillas following Tuesday's heavy fighting in Amman which was sparked by an unsuccessful attempt on the king's life.

Washington Hunting Way to Please All

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The United States struggled today to keep alive the Middle East truce, threatened by a crisis over what are regarded here as clear Egyptian violations of the agreement.

The Nixon Administration, having tried private diplomacy and appeals to Egypt and the Soviet Union to heed the terms of the ceasefire, is carefully weighing its next move.

Neither Bomb Nor Truncheon Way to True Peace - - Agnew

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew Wednesday told the American Legion national convention that when the American people are faced with a choice they will "choose the policeman's truncheon over the anarchist's bomb, but true peace lies neither in bomb nor in truncheon.

"It lies in that pattern of mutual respect and forbearance that is the essence of a civilized society."

The legion delegates gave quick approval Wednesday to resolutions that would demand mandatory imprisonment or the death sentence for fire bombing, sniping and sabotage; call for expulsion of college students joining in disruptive activity; ban chapters of the Students for a Democratic Society from all campuses; prohibit mail-order firearms sales to unlicensed individuals, and commend J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, for his work against "New Left terrorism and anarchism."

A public statement is expected soon from the state department, possibly today, on evidence gathered by high-flying U-2 spy planes and purported to show that some 30 to 40 Soviet-made SAM-2 missiles have been moved into the 26-mile ceasefire zone on the west bank of the canal since just before the truce began Aug. 7.

American officials hope that State Secretary William Rogers and his aides can find words that will satisfy Israel's demands for open acknowledgement of Egyptian violations and yet not provoke Cairo into a storm that could wreck the sluggish peace talks in New York.

The statement, if it is, hope, will nudge Israel into returning to the indirect talks under the auspices of U.N. envoy Gunnar Jarring.

While officials in Washington were obviously concerned about the latest turn of events, one report from the western White House in San Clemente, Calif., indicated that Nixon felt the situation was serious but not critical.

The United States is believed of violations to both Egypt and Russia several times over the last few weeks, but to have responded with Egypt, stoutly denying any wrongdoing.

In the face of continued denial, it was thought that if all else failed the U.S. probably would feel it necessary to step up its own arms flow in Israel to maintain the balance of power and restore some measure of Israeli faith in America's word and support.

Stanfield Won't Let Rift Grow

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield warned Wednesday night that he has "no intention" of allowing a rift to develop in his Conservative party.

Interviewed in Edmonton, by CBC-TV, Mr. Stanfield admitted the party was having difficulty in getting "our message across," but said he will not allow a split in the party over his leadership.

Mr. Stanfield's statement came on the heels of a report that six Western Conservative MPs plan to tell their leader that the party has a better chance of winning the next election if he steps own.

The report was denied by Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot).

Drugs 'Way of Life' For Young Executives

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Drug usage is so widespread among both white and blue-collar workers in the United States that it does little good to fire them, two researchers say. Their replacements may have a similar problem.

"Drugs are often a way of life for young executives," Carol Kurtis, a New York drug expert, told a workshop for representatives of 80 San Francisco area firms Wednesday.

She and Dr. Stephen Pittel of San Francisco's Mount Zion Hospital staff has done three years of drug research in the Haight-Ashbury district, said companies must set up programs to help employees.

Attending the seminar were representatives of such corporations as Pacific Gas and Electric Co., Bank of America, Pacific Telephone and South Pacific.

"Any company that hires a large number of young employees, and has a high turnover rate, will have this problem," Miss Kurtis said.

Miss Kurtis said her work in New York with 80 major corporations and further research throughout the eastern United States revealed a 20-per-cent impairment of employee efficiency because of the use of such drugs as marijuana, LSD, heroin, amphetamines and barbiturates as well as nicotine and alcohol.

Two Moon Flights Scrubbed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The decision to eliminate two Apollo moon missions means that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will have to make a series of readjustments in its space program. Four lunar flights remain.

First, NASA will take out of circulation two giant Saturn V moon rockets.

These launch vehicles, costing $185 million each, will become a part of "a national resource of heavy lift rocket capability," NASA Administrator Thomas O. Paine told a news conference Wednesday.

Secondly, many astronauts-including six who would have taken a moon flight on the Apollo 15 and 19 missions, now cancelled for budgetary reasons —will have to be reassigned.

"The astronauts have been very unhappy, along with the scientific community, about the reductions in flights over the past several years," said Dale Myers, associate administrator for manned space flight.

"Many of these men have dedicated themselves to development of the space shuttle."

There are 49 on the astronaut rolls. The U.S. has launched 36 of its astronauts on space trips —some two or three times, and one, James Lovell, four times.

NASA also must revise its list of moon landing sites.

"We still need to get to the lunar highlands, and rill areas, and we still must get a wide variety geologically to make sure of our passive seismic network," said Dr. John W. Find-lay, chairman of the lunar and planetary mission board.

Instead of the Apollo 15 spacecraft with its limited lunar stay and lunar orbit capability, an advanced version including a lunar rover vehicle will be used, and thus another Apollo 15 size must be selected, Findlay said.

Quebec GP President Defends Medicare Plan

MONTREAL (CP) — Dr. Gerald Hamel, president of the Quebec Federation of General Practitioners, accentuated a split in the province's medical profession Wednesday by publicly defending the withdrawal clause of the Quebec government's medical care insurance legislation.

Dr. Hamel told a news conference he did not oppose the Health Insurance Act provision for doctors who opt out of the plan, despite violent objections to it by the 4,000 member Quebec Federation of Medical Specialists.

He said the legislation, which says the doctors withdrawing from the plan would not be reimbursed in any circumstances by the Quebec Health Insurance Board, is similar to another act in effect for four years.

The Medical Assistance Act for welfare recipients, Dr. Hamel said, contains the same provision for withdrawal and has always been acceptable to the specialists.

More than 1,400 of the specialists, however, voted at a meeting last week 96.5 per cent in favor of striking if necessary in support of their demands for amendments to the legislation.

Premier Robert Bourassa later stated emphatically that the withdrawal clause in the act will not be changed.

Provincial Grants Would Ease Milk Plant Closures

BY ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

The Ontario government has begun a program of paying grants to dairy farmers who ship milk to milk plants to go out of business.

The scheme, called the provincial milk industry rationalization program, is designed to help the smaller and less efficient dairies to close down their plants to 561 or concentrate their volumes, went into effect on Sept. 1.

The plan permits the Milk Commission of Ontario to make grants of up to $100,000 over the next three years. Industry figures show that Canadian Dairies, for example, centralized milk plants and contracted milk plants and processors.

Study groups have said that the problems of the industrial milk board's profits are not only through consolidation of dairying but through the use of more efficient transportation.

However, consolidation means fewer and larger butter plants in the Quinte district is not entirely new.

At one time during the boy day of the cheese industry there were 2,300 factories (Belleville, Trenton, Picton, Colborne) producing cheese and practically every farm community in the Quinte district had its own plant.

Distance between the plants was dictated by the distance milk could be hauled by horses and wagon.

Fires and mechanization gradually reduced the number of plants, but the real trend toward consolidation did not really itself just after World War II.

Then the federal government offered small-operating grants to assist in enlarging and updating plants from two or more factories combine their operations.

Many of the Quinte area plants took advantage of the plan to install refrigeration equipment, to purchase new equipment for larger operations.

This program was discontinued about 20 years ago, but since then ARDA grants have been made available for dairy plant improvements.

The advent of motorized transportation permitted haulage for greater distances with the result that updating plants were phased out or no longer.

Over the last count, only 12 cheese factories remain in Hastings county.

Only the name has been true of butter making plants.

Not too many years ago there were creameries in Madoc, Tweed, Picton and Bancroft.

Now creameries at Belleville and Stirling handle all the whey cream from area farmers. Creameries at Havelock and Napanee have also closed.

But government dairy officials say the trend is toward consolidation and consolidation, not toward elimination.

Smaller cheese factories are being encouraged to close down and concentrate their production and to send milk to larger plants rather than make cheese every second day.

In view of the heavy capital investment involved, experts say it would take 20 years to create a minimum of 10 hours a day.

Further consolidation of butter plants is also being urged.

However, the provincial government's assistance of its plant consolidation program does not apply to Harold West at Belleville Creameries.

"I hadn't heard anything about it," he said.

The same was true for Arnold Shannon, general manager at the Ontario Milk Marketing Board cheese division office at Belleville.

Bank Robbery Suspect Arrested Near Cloyne

KALADAR (Staff) — A man wanted in connection with an $11,000 bank holdup is in custody today — after police surprised him at coffee in a summer cottage north of here yesterday.

Theodore Earl Ramsay, 44, of no fixed address is back in Niagara Falls to face a charge of armed robbery of that town's Royal Bank of Canada branch July 21.

An OPP spokesman said Ramsay was sitting in the cottage drinking coffee when police, armed with shotguns, burst in and arrested him.

They seized a loaded .22-calibre rifle, an automatic pistol and a revolver, said the officer.

Mervin Brenton, 49, of no fixed address, was arrested in London, Ont., 48 hours after the robbery and is awaiting trial.

Beware of Silo Gases

Hastings Agricultural Representative Douglas Tipper has issued a warning to county farmers about the dangers of "silo filler's disease.

Mr. Tipper says every year there are a few cases of farm operators falling victim to this disease caused by a gas which, under special circumstances, forms in the silo.

The gas is formed with the fermentation of grass with a high nitrogen base and is actually a combination of nitrogen oxide and carbon dioxide.

Special circumstances are such as crops stunted due to hail, drought or some other causes. Other circumstances are things like a shut-down in silo filling for a few days or in some cases just over night.

The two things to watch for that are most readily detected are yellow brown fumes in the silo and bleach like odors around the silo. These should serve as warnings if by any chance trouble has occurred.

Helicopter Goes East

TRENTON (Staff) — The H-21 Search and Rescue helicopter, a familiar sight in Quinte skies, is no longer based at CFB Trenton.

It left Trenton at the end of August for CFB Valcartier, Quebec.

However, the Search and Rescue division of Squadron 424 will remain here, operating its two specially-equipped Dakotas.

Removal of chopper from Trenton was "part of a base consolidation program" designed to cut costs.

Local Search and Rescue personnel report that the helicopter did not have a great deal of Lake Ontario service. Furthermore, there are Coast Guard stations at both Petawawa and Toronto.

"Slack will be taken up by CH-113A 'Voyageur' helicopters from Mobile Command's 450 Squadron, CFB Uplands," a Canadian forces headquarters spokesman said today.

The local Search and Rescue Squadron may also requisition helicopters from the Coast Guard on Georgian Bay and the army at Petawawa.

USAF choppers may also be commissioned.

The role of 424 Squadron has changed," Capt. C. W. Crowell, CFB Trenton's base public affairs officer said this morning.

Capt. Crowell said that it is now mainly involved in searches than with rescues, stressing that "its job is now mainly to seek lost planes and boats."

Search capability of the squadron has been augmented substantially this year. On June 23, five Buffalo aircraft were transferred to 424 from St. Hubert, Quebec.

Furthermore, the Trenton Search and Rescue detail still has a para-rescue unit to be dropped from any of its aircraft in a lifesaving role.

Squadron 424 directs search and rescue operations throughout Ontario and Quebec and its area of responsibility touches the Arctic seaboard.

Brownsville—Texas, That Is, Extends Welcome to Canadians

Deep in the heart of Texas there's a coo - woman publicity campaign going on to familiarize Americans with Canada.

The knowledge gap, frequently deplored by Canadians, is being narrowed through the efforts of Lois Humphery, tourist hostess for the city of Brownsville, Texas.

Now in Belleville to sell her city as a winter tourist haven, Miss Humphery believes promotion is a two - way effort. Through her column in the Brownsville Times she publicizes Canada and the cities and towns that are home to Texas winter visitors.

"I love Canada," says Miss Humphery, and proves it by refusing to blame us for the cold fronts that bring light frost to her city twice a winter.

"We say the Canadians come down to Brownsville so fast they forget to close the door and that lets the cold air in," says Miss Humphery. "In truth, the cold air originates in Minnesota, but the people from there are so touchy about it we blame the good - natured Canadians, who only laugh at the charge."

Texas hospitality, personified by Miss Humphery, is responsible for Brownsville's becoming a favorite summer residence for Canadians.

As tourist hostess, she runs what a Belleville couple describes as the "best-organized winter visitors' club at the most economical rate of any in the United States".

Of the 1,200 members of the winter residents' club, 25 per cent are Canadians, from every province except Nfld. Brunswick and Quebec.

The lead an active life, with art and ballet classes, fishing, swimming, golf, games and dancing.

"Brownsville isn't like Florida, where people go to sit in the sun in rocking chairs," says Miss Humphery. "We don't rock, we swing, with all kinds of dancing, including square dancing, going on everyday."

The Brownsville civic centre is turned over to winter visitors one day a week for their activities.

The city is 2,000 miles from Belleville, in the Rio Grande Valley a short distance from the Gulf of Mexico. A bridge across the river links it with Matamoros, Mexico, the agricultural, mining and banking centre of its section of the Latin-American country.

The climate is sub-tropical, making the valley the centre of red grapefruit growing in the United States. Brownsville is also the shrimp capital of the world, with the largest shrimp fleet in the United States based on its waterfront.

Because the economy of the city of 55,000 is not based primarily on tourism, rates are more moderate than in most southern resorts. Apartment rents are about the same as in Belleville, and accommodation in mobile home villages is even cheaper.

And no winter visitor need feel lonely. At an all-Canadian picnic last year for winter residents in the Rio Grande Valley, 973 people showed up.

Ground Crews Play Vital Role

Quinte Skies Were Stage for Canadian Air Show Preview

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON (Staff) — Dress rehearsal, took place here Wednesday for the 22nd Canadian International Air Show, opening its four-day run at the Canadian National Exhibition this afternoon.

The performance over the Bay of Quinte near CFB Trenton was not advertised as a public attraction for reasons of traffic control. However, it did have a substantial audience.

High ground at Baker Island at CFB Trenton was a favored spot for reviewing the show. Here, CIAS officials got a glimpse of what to expect at the Ex today through Sunday.

Canadian Armed Forces and families also lined the island to see and hear a display of military exercise that is a great source of pride.

"Morale sure got a boost today, it is great," one NCO said as five supersonic CF-101s from Air Defence Command raced toward the sun.

Enthusiasm abounded — some base employees even soaked the huge red and white water tower for 33 minutes of remarkable aviation sightseeing over the sail-dotted Quinte waterway.

Parked cars, many with Belleville housewives and toddlers, lined both the Redneersville and Old Orchard Roads.

"No one told us to come out here but we were not going to miss it," said Mrs. Allan Carkner of Belleville, who took her children over to watch the spectacle.

Canadian Armed Forces presented a broad cross-section of operational hardware. The 28 participating planes were drawn from bases west to Cold Lake, Alta. and east to Shearwater N.S.

Leading off the Canadian Forces display are five supersonic CF-101 Voodoos from Air Defence Command that put on a booming demonstration of formation flying and aerobatic skill.

Air Transport Command, based at Trenton, features one of its Boeing 707s in formation with a French-built Falcon two - engined executive jet followed up by two veterans, a Hercules and an Otter.

Air show crowds see representatives from Canada's Atlantic coastal patrols: the anti - submarine Argus, the Sea King helicopter and the Tracker.

Buffalo, Caribou, and veteran Dakota aircraft join three types of helicopters in a presentation from the Search and Rescue centres scattered across the land.

Finale of the colorful Canadian presentation is a dazzling six - minute performance by five CF-5s. The majority of these planes are going into mothballs at CFB Trenton until the Department of National Defence has defined their role.

This year's airshow will not just be a fly-past rather it is, largely, a display of operational expertise. Jet-assisted takeoffs, package drops, on the water helicopter landings are all featured.

The Royal Air Force is practising its roaring Vulcan bombers at the CNE this year — the massive wedge-shaped plane has become a traditional Ex crowd pleaser.

A controversial visitor to this year's International Air Show will be a gargantuan Lockheed 7S. The largest plane in the world, it is part of a USAF squadron in Texas.

The United States will also be represented by its Thunderbirds aerobatic team. American presentations will join the British and Canadian portions of the international spectacle as they pass by the Canadian National Exhibition crowds today.

Kraft Mill Controversy

Whitney Disagrees On Tax Increase Argument

Norris Whitney, MPP Prince Edward — Lennox, says he can't accept charges that location of a giant Canadian International Paper Company paper mill in Prince Edward County would create burdens on local taxpayers.

Such arguments are "hitting the wrong angle" in the current public controversy centring on the project, said Mr. Whitney.

The MPP made the statement last night — replying to arguments he said were made at an anti-pollution meeting debating the mill at Wellington Monday night and in a letter to the editor in Tuesday's Intelligencer, warning of local tax costs if the mill were built.

Mr. Whitney said concern over pollution had his "sympathy and backing until we get the answers."

But, he added, the "statement that this (the mill) would create extra taxation appears to be utterly ridiculous.

The project, if located in Prince Edward County, would add about $70 million to county assessment.

Last year, said Mr. Whitney, the total equalized assessment for the whole county was $117,500,000.

Further new assessment would be created by homebuilding to house workers at the plant, he concluded.

Garage Fire Guts Building

Members of the Belleville Fire Department battled flames in a barn owned by C. E. Argue at 338 Charles Street yesterday afternoon for an hour and 15 minutes before being able to put it out.

Fire Chief Leo Colhane said this morning that firemen were called at 2:42 to fight the blaze in a storage barn behind Mr. Argue's home.

It contained garden tools and equipment, mowers, and other articles that were all lost when the flames gutted the building.

Chief Colhane said the fire started at the outside rear of the structure. The fire is still under investigation. Damage estimates were unavailable.

On Pilgrimage

Two Belleville men are among eight Canadians and a Bermudian making an eight-day, 127-mile walking pilgrimage to Saint-Marie among the Hurons this year.

Taking part in the 16th annual walk is pilgrimage organizer Geoffrey Roulet, a graduate student at the University of Waterloo and Brett Mann, both of Belleville.

The pilgrimage is sponsored by the Guild of St. Jean de la Lande, founded by Christopher Wilson, formerly an Albert College teacher. He is now a lecturer at St. Lawrence College of Applied Arts and Technology in Cornwal.

Equipment Bought For Bath Station

Ontario Hydro has announced equipment contracts totalling more than $2¼ million for its new 2,225,000-kilowatt Lennox generating station, about 22 miles west of Kingston.

Eight condenser circulating water pumps valued at $450,000 will supply cooling water for steam powering the station's four turbine units, the pumps will each be capable of driving 72,000 gallons of lake water per minute through the steam condensers. When completely installed in 1977, they will be the station's main pumps.

Included in the contract awards were four main boiler feed pumps costing $800,000. These pumps will supply boilers at the 3,900-million station with water from a closed loop circulating system. Each capable of handling 6,740 gallons per minute, the pumps should be operational by 1977 with the first unit scheduled for installation sometime in 1974.

The largest single order calls for delivery of eight standby boiler feed pumps. Rated at 5,500 horsepower, they will have a 2,205 gallon per minute capacity and be available at peak load, and for emergencies.

Lennox generating station located near Bath, is Hydro's first oil - fired power plant. Preliminary work has already started on the site. All four units are scheduled to be in operation by 1977.

Stirling Area Manhunt Focus

Provincial police today were keeping the Stirling area under surveillance as the search continues for three escapees from the Joyceville prison farm.

Still being sought after their Tuesday night flight from the medium security unit near Kingston were Russell Weldon, 42, of Bloorsfield; Douglas Eugene Scott, of Hybla, near Bancroft, and Douglas Clayton Whitney of Agincourt.

The manhunt switched to Stirling about 9 p.m. Wednesday after a woman reported seeing three men walking in a field at the north end of the village near Highway 7.

Police civilians were rushed to the scene from Belleville and Madoc but no trace of the men was found.

Provincial police in Belleville said today the area was still being patrolled.

Prison authorities said the fugitives are not considered dangerous and were not believed armed.

Weldon was serving eight years for manslaughter and Scott three years for burglary. Whitney was serving 10 years for robbery.

Canadian Scientist Casts Doubt On Theories of Mankind's Age

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Man's pre-history is being re-written again.

More than three decades ago archeologist Raymond Dart of South Africa produced the skull of a missing link he named Australopithecus Africanus. The female skull, affectionately dubbed "Mrs. Ples," was found in 1936 at Sterkfontein Caves in Transvaal province, now a classic pilgrimage site for archeologists.

Dart's interpretation for the discovery placed the dawn of man about one million years ago in the plains of Africa. It provided humankind with a meat-eating, hunting ancestor instead of the herbivorous ape man previously theorized.

The significance of Mrs. Ples was pooh-poohed by some scientists but Dart's theories were strengthened by more discoveries elsewhere in South Africa.

Then Dr. L. S. B. Leakey overflew into the County Centre.

A first this year at Picton Fair is a van distributing information on drugs operated by the Alcohol Research Foundation. The Smithfield Experimental Station will also bring a van "telling it like it is" about alfalfa weevil.

Students visiting the fairgrounds will have an opportunity to demonstrate their artistic abilities in a billboard painting competition. This "young peoples' project goes hand - in - hand with plans to produce a puppet show.

The Prince Edward Farmers' Union will lead a "corny" touch to the program of events with their corn - on - the - cob concession advertising one of the county's larger crops.

Fair board directors expect the number of cattle entries will increase this year since the opening of classes for Ayshires and Herefords. The black and white show remains one of the highlights of the three - day county fair.

Members of the fair board are working in the County Centre and the Crystal Palace this week to put the show on the road with new ideas presented with enthusiasm and originality.

Dart's interpretation for the shifted scientific attention to Tanzania's (Olduvai) gorge. He unearthed the remains of a human ancestor similar to Mrs. Ples which he called Australopithecus Boisei.

A wider pattern started emerging of inter-related species of dawn-age hunters who settled over large areas of Africa and developing over millions of years to become modern man.

Dr. H. B. S. Cooke, geology professor at Dalhousie University in Halifax, after five years of investigation in Kenya and Tanzania, says man may be more than twice as old as Dart and Leakey supposed.

Passing through Johannesburg on his way back to Canada Cooke said the Mrs. Ples skull is probably closer to 1.5 million than one million years old. Using a date technique based on comparative deduction, Cooke put roughly the same age on all South African fossils unearthed at Transvaal cave sites.

Paleontologists previously were unable to use the conventional potassium-argon dating technique on the South African fossils because the caves where they were found lacked volcanic deposits.

Cooke bracketed the time period in which various creatures existed by dating the East African sites and comparing their contents with those of undated South African finds.

"We are now at the point where we can produce a time scale for East Africa for 10 million years," he said.

East African elephant fossils dated at two million to 2.5 million years coincided with elephant remains found near Mrs. Ples.

Pig fossils unearthed in South Africa's Makapansgat showed similarities to finds in East Africa which dated back 2.5 million years. Other East African fossils suggested that ancestors of certain South African creatures existed about five million years ago.

The animal fossils and those of the human evolutionary line are often found together, and man's place in time is estimated from the known age of the animal remains.

"The Transvaal and South African human-type skulls represent different parts of a similar population-it" said a spokesman for Wiesenbrand University's archeology department, where Cooke taught before going to Halifax.

"The picture now developing is of a steady development from some time after 10 million BC to a new type of man who appeared over a wide area of Africa between two million and one million BC. The significance of Cooke's new findings is that they set the date of prehistoric man's emergence much further back than previously thought."

Cooke stressed that his conclusions are tentative at this stage and research is continuing. "In another two years I might have a different story to tell," he said.

Ontario Won't Try to Stop Rock Festival

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said Wednesday the provinces will not attempt to prevent a rock festival at Rock Hill despite the promoters' refusal to provide funds for police expenses.

Earlier Wednesday an injunction to stop the weekend event was denied by Mr. Justice C.D. Stewart of the Ontario Supreme Court.

He told officials of Adanac Township, site of the festival, that the injunction would have been granted had the attorney-general's office requested it on grounds that the promoters had failed to deposit $27,426 for policing.

Mr. Wishart said after the decision that the injunction was an action by the township "and we were not party to it."

The township had sought the injunction on the basis of a local anti-noise bylaw, which Mr. Justice Stewart said was too limited a reason.

Festival Called Joni's Triumph

LONDON (CP) — The leading British pop newspaper has termed the Isle of Wight festival "Joni's triumph" in praise of Saskatoon-born Joni Mitchell's performance during the five-day extravaganza.

Melody Maker, in it's front-page story this week, says the folk-singer "overcame her considerable nervousness and stunned the crowd with a set full of powerfully beautiful songs, leading to an ovation after several encores."

A number of other Canadians entertained at the festival last weekend including Leonard Cohen of Montreal, Tal Yarmisky of Toronto, a member of the group Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. He had accompanied Mrs. Mitchell to the island.

The newspaper says Young was set to make a guest appearance on Saturday night, but left quickly, "upset by the festival's overall atmosphere."

Yarmisky jumped on stage to join John Sebastian, a colleague in the defunct Loving Spoonful on a surprise reunion called "a nostalgic night."

The newspaper praised the lead guitar work of Yarmisky with Sebastian, and later with American singer Kris Kristofferson.

Cohen, supported by The Band, played a couple of new tunes early Monday morning in a set which also included "a shocking treatment of Lady Midnight, one of his most ca-reening songs."

Murder Charged

BRANTFORD (CP) — Margaret Day, 37, of Brantford, was arraigned Tuesday by her son-in-law on charges of murder in the Aug. 9 death of her seven-month-old daughter Lisa.

The infant died of shock in hospital after receiving burns to her head, shoulders and back. Mrs. Day was remanded until Thursday without bail.

Lawyers Want Provinces to Guarantee Privacy

HALIFAX (CP) — A resolution calling on each province to pass legislation giving its citizens a right of privacy was adopted Wednesday by the civil liberties committee of the Canadian Bar Association.

The committee, one of nearly a dozen which met simultaneously, said the right of a citizen to privacy and to exert some control over information passed on about him by investigators and credit agencies should be protected by law.

The 1,200 delegates were scheduled to attend committee meetings again this morning but would take part in a session of the general meeting this afternoon.

The civil liberties committee said the provinces would be asked to pass right of privacy legislation, violation of which could be challenged in the courts. Only British Columbia now has such legislation.

Changes proposed by the resolution would permit a citizen to inspect any files agencies hold on him, challenge incorrect information and require that it be corrected and know the source of inaccurate information. He could sue anyone who had supplied false information.

The resolution was harnessed put in chief justice legislation during an adjournment as members of the committee tried to reconcile the wide range of views which turned up when the committee first tackled the problem.

One delegate had said citizens would end up crawling like dogs to protect their reputations from credit agencies and information-gathering centres. Another said the concern about legislation to protect privacy was a sign of the "whining, gutless society we live in."

Justice minister John Turner had told a news conference earlier that the government has been exploring the complicated matter of what he called "data surveillance"—including the files of credit agencies.

He said citizens have a right to know what their credit files contain and said such files apparently include a "good deal of hearsay evidence" from neighbors and associates.

"I think any legislation ought to ensure there are safety valves."

Mr. Turner said it would take a year or two to come up with any concrete proposals because there are not yet enough facts on the problems or the solutions.

In one of the few mentions of the news media, Phillip Ketchum, an Edmonton lawyer, said legal action for damages against a newspaper or television station is rarely worthwhile because damage awards tend to be low.

He said in a case where there is unwarranted invasion of privacy, there should be punitive damages.

In criminal law, the truth is not necessarily a defence in an action for libel or defamation, said Mr. Ketcham. But it is in civil law where damages are sought.

He suggested civil law be "leveled up" so that truth would only be a defence where it could be shown the contested statement involved some public interest.

Maurice Shumiatcher, a prominent Regina lawyer, said remedies exist under present legislation and ought to be fully explored. He said it could be serious if the press had to weigh each truthful statement to determine whether its publication was "in the public interest just to protect someone's "notable ties."

GO Buses Start

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario department of highways, preparing to start the ban extension of the GO transit system next Tuesday, said Wednesday the service will require a subsidy of about $350,000 annually.

The east and west bus service will join Oshawa and Hamilton with existing GO transit rail facilities and Pickering and Oakville. A northern service will join Newmarket, Aurora, Oak Ridges and Richmond Hill to the Toronto Transit Commission subway, the Gray Coach Toronto depot and the GO transit rail service at Union Station.

There will be a rush-hour express service between Barrie and Toronto, using Highway 400.

The service involves a provincial capital expenditure of about $3 million, including 15 45-passenger air-conditioned buses to be operated by Gray Coach as agent for the province.

Lawrence Defends Planned Quarry Controls

TORONTO (CP) — Allan Lawrence, minister of mines and northern affairs, Wednesday defended his stand concerning the sand, gravel and quarry industry along the Niagara Escarpment.

In a statement, Mr. Lawrence outlined in general terms the legislation he has promised to introduce this fall to control the industry.

Gravel pits will not be permitted on the face of the escarpment, he said, or in areas where overburden or glacial drift covers the face.

He warned that operators in the protected zone will be closed if they do not obtain provincial operating permits by the Sept. 27 deadline.

Mr. Lawrence called the recommendations on which the legislation was to be based a "sensible compromise." They would transfer control of the operation of the pits to the department of mines. Pit operators would be required to make payments out of profits to ensure that adequate funds would be available for rehabilitation.

The most controversial recommendations would give the department of mines control over locations of pits and quarries in municipalities that do not have official plans.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID BROWN

BROWN — DITOMASO

On August 22, at 4.30 p.m., Antoinetta DiTomaso, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John DiTomaso of Belleville was married to David Alan Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Brown of Midland, at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville. Father James MacGillivray conducted the ceremony and Dorothy Grant played the organ.

The bride, given in marriage by her father chose a floor - length princess styled gown of light peau de soie. Alecon lace outlined the high neckline and front of the gown and trimmed the lily point sleeves. Her cathedral length veil of illusion was trimmed with matching Alencon lace. Her bouquet consisted of roses and carnations mingled with fern.

Maid of honor Gail Hamilton of London, Ont., wore a floor - length gown of pastel print cut similar to that of the bride. The hot pink velvet ribbon around the high waistline matched the ribbon in her hair. She carried a bouquet of hot pink baby 'mums.

Antoinetta DiTomaso and Maddalena Iacenza, cousins of the bride who were bridesmaids were gowns identical to that of the maid of honor. Leanne DiTomaso, the junior bridesmaid and Pamela Brown the flower girl wore floor-length gowns of pink crepe highlighted with hot pink ribbon around the waist and matching ribbons in their hair. Pamela carried a basket of flowers.

David Fullerton, the bridegroom's cousin was the best man while the ushers were Paul Delaney and Dominic DiTomaso, the bride's brother.

For the reception held in Club Canary, the bride's mother wore a turquoise dress and cost ensemble of cotton lace with navy blue accessories and a corsage of baby yellow orchids. The bridegroom's mother chose a dress and coat ensemble of mint green with matching accessories and a corsage of orange delight roses.

The newlyweds left for their wedding trip to Quebec City and New England State. The bride's going-away outfit consisted of a dress and coat of beige crepe with black trim and black accessories. She wore a corsage of baby red roses. Upon return they will reside in Belleville.

MR. AND MRS. G. D. ANDERSON

ANDERSON — KERR

Emmanuel Baptist Church, Rollins Dr., was the setting for the wedding on Saturday, August 22, 1970, when Marcey Linda Kerr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Blake Kerr of Belleville, became the bride of George Douglas Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas A. Anderson, Beacons field, P.Q.

Before a background of yellow gladiolus, mums, daisies and pink and blue pinochi's 'mums, Rev. J. Arthur Sheil performed the ceremony and Mr. Wm. Connor presided at the church organ.

Miss Susan Anderson, sister of the groom was maid of honor. She wore a Victorian model gown of petal pink and white floral stripe with voile, trimmed with matching petal pink ruffles of vale lace, fashioned with a high neckline edged with lace; long, full, deep-cuffed sleeves, fitted bodice having a wide pink sash forming a butterfly bow with streamers at the back. She wore a petal pink mohair picture hat trimmed with matching vale lace.

Miss Barbara Anderson, sister of the groom was bridesmaid and her gown was similar to that of the maid of honor but in azure blue. They carried baskets of pink and blue daisy 'mums, baby breath and pink sweetheart roses.

The groom was attended by Mr. Bert Peinter of Ottawa. The ushers were Robert Kerr, brother of the bride, and Wylie Spicer of Ottawa.

For the reception at the Pinnacle Room, Hotel Quinte, the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a holiday pink polyester crepe dress with matching stole and accessories and a corsage of white gardenia. Assisting her was the bridegroom's mother wearing an aqua Swiss cotton dress with matching hat and finger accessories. She wore a corsage of yellow roses.

For the wedding trip, the bride chose an orange - tex linen dress trimmed with white accessories and a corsage of miniature white carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will reside in Ottawa.

Marmora Couple Mark 50th Wedding Anniversary

MARMORA — A reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gunter, Marmora, to mark their 50th wedding anniversary, was held in the senior citizen's clubroom in the Memorial Building, on Saturday afternoon. Besides their many friends in Marmora, close relatives who attended were Mrs. Gunter's brother, Ewart Carson, of Otter, and sister, Mrs. Wilfred Cavano of Oshawa; Mr. Gunter's sister from Frankford, Mrs. Harry Moran, and several nieces and nephews from Peterborough, Toronto and Otawa. A brother, Earl Gunter, of Winnipeg, sent greetings.

There were messages also from Prime Minister Trudeau, Governor - General and Mrs. Roland Michener, John Diefenbaker, Robert Stanfield, Harry Moore, MP, and Clarke T. Rollins, MPP. Members of Marmora's senior citizens club, of which Mrs. Gunter is a past president, turned out in full strength for the event, and added to the countless gifts and cards already on display.

The celebration was arranged by their niece, Sharon, Mrs. Lyle Carson of Weston, and Mrs. Ewart Carson of Ottawa. Anniversary cake and refreshments were served by nieces, Mrs. Sandra Keeley of Ottawa, Beth Baker of Gilmour and Nancy and Kathie Rowell of Whitby. Pouring tea were Mrs. Carson of Ottawa, Mrs. James Carson of Toronto, and Mrs. Morin.

Mr. and Mrs. Gunter, born in Frankford, Ontario, and Thurso, P.Q., respectively, met in Ottawa where Harold was stationed during World War I. They were married on August 31, 1920, by Rev. G. A. Grey, in Toronto, where they lived for the first thirteen years of their marriage. Then they took up residence in Peterborough (with C.G.E.) for the next ten years before moving to Ottawa in the early '40's where Mr. Gunter was employed with the Bureau of Statistics, and later, the Department of Munitions and Supply.

They have had a cottage at Limerick Lake, 20 miles north of Madoc, for the last forty years. Their summers and weekends are spent there, where they continue their bridge games - both are very keen players - and fishing trips.

On retirement nine years ago, they decided that Marmora was the ideal location for them. "We like this little village and the people here; it is only a jaunt to the cottage, and nieces and nephews who visit frequently from Toronto and Ottawa, call our home the 'half - way house'", said Mrs. Gunter.

Joan Drewery One of Full-Time Women Announcers in Ottawa

"I can never get used to this 24-hour system," she says, shaking rather as if she might not make it for the next break.

She does, however, every time.

Mrs. Drewery, 42, is one of two full-time women announcers employed by the CBC English-language network, a statistic that falls to drive her into a frenzy of militancy defending her sex.

"Earl Cameron saying 'Now here is the news from Canada' sounds quite a bit different from me saying 'Now here is the news from Canada.' People miss that sound of heavy male authority."

She recalls that in 1967, during a four-month stint as announcer during the summer, there was a complaint after she had read the radio news one Saturday morning. But so far during her present stint which started in February, reaction has been all favorable.

"I could trying to sound ultra-ultra feminine or aggressive," she says.

Broadcasting was not quite what Joan Drewery had in mind when, as a child, she looked forward to an acting career. Since her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Jackson, were amateur actors steeped in productions in the Ottawa area, she would tag along with them to watch rehearsals.

"I took journalism at Carleton, but I was still more interested in acting," she says. So after graduation she accepted a scholarship to act at Wellesley, the girls' college in Boston which had a summer theatre.

With visions of being a starving actress in New York," she then headed off to the big city. But six months later she became disenchanted and returned home where she married John Drewery, now a CBC parliamentary reporter.

In 1963 Joan went to Germany for three years where she was stationed in the army. There she accepted an offer to do a weekly woman's program on a CBC affiliate station based at Canadian troops in Europe.

An interview with singer Vera Lynn eventually was broadcast in Canada on Trans-Canada Matinee, so she continued sending tapes to that show for some time.

Radio work, writing and acting have, along with raising five children, taken up most of Mrs. Drewery's time since her return home.

But starting in September she will appear with radio personality Max Ferguson in a half-hour network television show to be broadcast weekdays by the CBC.

It's a sort-of informal chat show in the forenoon, of a household," Mrs. Drewery says.

"I play myself. Joan Drewery, Johnny will be on occasionally, particularly if he's back from a trip or something, and maybe the children will be on at Christmas. Max will play my brother who lives in this house with my family.

"It will be all conversation and everything will be completely out of Max's or my experiences, expressing our own opinions."

Family Honors Couple On 40th Anniversary

RYLSTONE — Mr. and Mrs. Fred Husband (formerly Gladys Mae Spencer of Ryliston) were honored on their 40th wedding anniversary at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Thomson, Rylstone, on Saturday, September 26 children and grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Spencer were present with their families.

Mr. and Mrs. Husband were married in the manse at the home of his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Husband on February 3, 1930 by Rev. H. W. Foley. Their attendants Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Spencer (brother and sister - in - law of Mrs. Husband) and Mrs. Husband's sister Mrs. Ellis Jones (nee Winnie Spencer) who played wedding music were present at the ruby anniversary. Mrs. Husband's only living aunt Mrs. Percy Mowbry of Spring brook was also present with her husband.

Master of ceremonies was Wilfred Spencer, who gave a short speech describing the wedding 40 years ago. Six little girls, great nieces of Mrs. Husband presented her with a decorated shower tray, a bridge tea and a plastic holder. Allliversary cards and gifts of cash were also received by the couple of honor. Everyone enjoyed a smorgasbord.

The celebration was organized by Mrs. Husband's nieces, Mrs. Clarence Thomson and Mrs. Philip Sheaff, assisted by other members of their family. Robert Spencer provided bagpipe music. Guests were present from Napanee, Belleville, Orono, Peterborough, Campbellford, Spring and Rylstone.

Teenager Sorry for One Bad Mistake

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I am 14, and live fast, right, because I'm very height and looks. I am often mistaken for 17 or 18. My problem is that I have been caught smoking, and also I went to a party. There was beer, and I had a few too many! I guess, because I became rather bold and a little too happy.

The very next day I was sorry and promised I'd never do it again. I wrote a letter to my girl friend and told her about it, and now my mother has found the letter.

I have been punished enough by my own conscience and I will probably be punished by my parents again. I'm terrified of my father and my mother is always crying and nagging. What shall I do about my great mistake? — Terrified.

Dear Terrified: I'm sorry, little girl. You aren't the first to experiment with liquor — by your dismay. Remember this: it is illegal for anyone to buy a minor any alcoholic beverage. Both you and the person who served you the beer were breaking the law.

Even though you are tall, you are yet older than life in experience or judgment. Confine your dating to people around your own age and you will cut down on the chances of trouble.

Take your punishment, learn from what you have done, and absorb a little discipline to prevent the same thing from happening again.

* * *

Dear Doris: I do not wish to change my entire name, but only to add a name after the first name.

Please tell me what all is involved, the fees and shots I am only 17 would I have to wait a few years? — No Middle Name.

Dear No Middle: It's different with adults and minors. You can just go right ahead and add whatever label you fancy.

The only time there might be trouble about this would be if a person were trying to use a new name in order to deceive other people and defraud them.

* * *

Dear Doris: This widower I go with takes along his daughter on our dates. The daughter is separated from her husband. I don't mind his baby - sitting for her little girl but I do feel it is out of place to take her along with us all the time.

I just she reminds me and she will miss finding someone for herself by going with her father - very much. — Confused.

Dear Confused: Dating doesn't usually call for taking the baby sitter along, question! Surely this is a temporary state of affairs, while she is going through her own kind of trouble!

If your attachment is serious, the daughter will eventually be your daughter - in - law. Try not to make the relationship rankled since the time to build good feelings is right now. Better out with it so the boy friend: Ask for a compromise. How about arranging for every other date to be a twosome?

* * *

(Don't just muddle along. Do something about what's troubling you. A letter to Doris can put you on the way to more Successful living.)

TOO TIRED TO LOVE?

Many marriages are wrecked or blighted by a simple hidden cause. Fatigue is easy to blame. But the real problem may be deeper. Dr. Marion Hilliard, who was chief of obstetrics and gynecology at Woman's College Hospital in Toronto, discusses the problem frankly in the September issue of Reader's Digest. She offers specific help and tells how to take the initiative in creating an "atmosphere of love". Pick up your copy of Reader's Digest today.

Ann Landers

Ann Suggests Gift Should Be Opened

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I make great chocolate chip cookies. The world's best. Everybody raves over them.

Last night I baked a batch to take over to a friend's house. She had a back operation and asked for my famous chocolate chip cookies.

After I had packed the cookies in a tin and tied a ribbon around it, my husband said, "Save me a "sample." I told him to wait till we get to Marie's home — that he would get a "sample" there.

Well, Ann Landers, do you know Marie never opened the box! My husband kept nudging me all evening, whispering, ("P-s-s-t . . . remind her about the cookies.") I ignored his request and now he is mad at me. I say he should be mad at HER. Isn't it rude not to open such a gift in the presence of the giver? If you print your reply I will send you my famous recipe for chocolate chip cookies. Thanks in advance. — SHAKER HEIGHTS.

* * *

DEAR SHAKER: Here is your letter but please do NOT send your recipe. I haven't fully recovered from my mocha loaf trouble. My sister in Ottawa has just started to speak to me again.

I agree, the lady with the back surgery should have opened the box in your presence, but next time, bake a double batch of cookies — so you'll have enough for your own family as well as your friends.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your answer to the woman who was afraid to ride with her 79-year-old friend was fine — as far as it went. But it didn't go far enough.

I've been in the insurance business for nearly 40 years. Our records show the best risks are those in the over-65 group. The worst risks are single boys between 16 and 25. Married drivers under 25 have fewer accidents than single people. The accident rate declines steadily with age. Why? Because there is no substitute for experience.

Another point worth mentioning: the accident rate for women is about half that for men. I don't know the reason but the records prove it. So, please, Ann, praise the women drivers and the old folks in your column. They are the safest drivers of all. — MANHATTAN, KANSAS.

* * *

DEAR MAN: Your statistics are interesting, but your logic leaves something to be desired. Your statement, "There is no substitute for experience," does not hold up when it comes to driving. Some drivers don't get better, they just get older. The safest drivers, according to the National Safety Council, are those who were taught properly, preferably by a professional. And the behavioral experts point out that the drivers with the best safety records have predictable personality patterns. They are considerate of others, just plain polite and emotionally stable.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I went to my boyfriend's house Saturday night to watch TV with him. Nobody was home. I accidentally burned a cigarette hole in the sofa. I placed a note on the spot saying I was sorry. I also said I couldn't afford to have it fixed because I'm not working. (I'm only 15).

Today Fred told me his mother is mad and doesn't want to come to the house any more. How can I get her to like me? — SAD EYES.

DEAR S.E.: A 15-year-old girl who goes to a boy's house when no one is at home and burns a hole in the sofa has finished herself with his mother. You did three things wrong. (Name the four.) See if you can figure them out — and resolve not to make the same mistakes again, Toots.

Barbecue Recipes For Holiday Weekend

By MARY MOORE

At Fort Lazaard Woods Restaurant Area in Montreal outside our trailer I saw Herbie searching on the ground for something. "What have you lost?" "Nothing, I am hunting for some wire to baste these chickens in the rotisserie."

All Marianne could produce was some strong cord which would not do so we decided to barbecue the chickens directly on the grill. Hundreds of barbecuers and campers will be caught short of wire for rotisseries and might welcome the following for a Labor Day cookout.

BARBECUED CHICKEN

Amounts are for 8 chicken quarters.

Barbecue Sauce:

½ cup tomato catsup
¼ tsp. Tabasco sauce
1 tbsp. vinegar
2 tbsps. brown sugar
1 tsp. dry mustard
1 tsp. salt
1 medium-sized mild onion finely chopped
2 tbsps. butter or margarine

Simmer together for 5 min.

(NOTE: If you have time, marinate chicken pieces in this sauce ½ hr. to 3 hrs. turning 2 or 3 times.) Have barbecue fire ready with glowing coals — no flames. Place chicken pieces on grill and broil slowly, brushing both sides often with sauce. Allow about 35-40 min. or 20 min. per side.

BARBECUED BEEF BURGERS FOR SPECIALISTS

Buy minced round steak and flatten by hand on a wet pastry board to ¼" thickness, or do this with a wet rolling pin. Cut it into 4"-squares or rounds. Sprinkle each with salt, pepper and Worcestershire sauce. Top each with a slice of process cheese to fit. Cover that with second square or round of minced beef. Pat to make them firm. If this is done before cooking (which I recommend) lift with broad spatula to heavy wax paper and refrigerate individually until mealtime arrives. Brush both sides with melted butter. Transfer to greased grill over glowing coals — or greased heavy frying pan. Broil quickly — allowing only 1½ min. per side for you want them to be tender and juicy. Serve each in warm buttered split hamburg buns with thin slice of Spanish onion and, if desired, relish.

I recommend these highly because they are so easy for they may be prepared in advance and are popular with men, women and children.

Points for Parents

By MARY BEYRON

Father: "Whee! Here we go round and round."

Becky: "Do it again Daddy."

Father: "We'll have a good romp tomorrow afternoon, but now I'll read a bedtime story. It's Betty's turn to pick the story tonight."

Boisterous play at bedtime is too exciting for pre-school children. A quiet game or a reading session will be more conducive to relaxation.

Report on Labor

WASHINGTON (AP) — A United States Senate committee, saying job discrimination is more pervasive against women than racial minorities, urges new federal powers aimed at expediting equal opportunity for all.

The labor and public welfare committee's report Monday said the Civil Rights Act of 1964 had been widely violated by employers paying women less than men for the same work.

The report backed the committee's earlier endorsement of a bill which would give the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission authority to issue cease-and-desist orders against all types of employment discrimination.

The committee cited statistics for 1968 showing that male professional and technical workers averaged $10,152 while women in the same jobs got $6,051.

Estimate of Voters' Mood Should Decide Leadership - - Lewis

TORONTO (CP) — Delegates date they feel is best able to judge the mood of the province at the Ontario New Democratic Party convention in October will choose as their leader the candi- Wednesday.

Mr. Lewis, legislature member for Scarborough West and candidate for the leadership post vacated by Donald Mac-Donald, told a news conference he differs with Walker Pitman, his major competitor, in interpretation of the restlessness of the electorate.

This gives the convention delegates a real choice in deciding on a leader and makes the lead-ership campaign something more than a personality contest, he said.

At an earlier news conference, a spokesman for Mr. Pitman said that policy positions stated by the two leading candidates are unlikely to influence delegates since the party itself, not the leader, makes NDP policy.

The leadership campaign is a personality contest in that the delegates will be looking for the one Wednesday to release the party's positions, state its policies most persuasively and lead the NDP caucus in putting party policy into effect, said John Brewin, co-chairman for the Pitman committee.

Mr. Brewin and Fred Young, legislature members for York-view, held their own conference Wednesday to raise the names of prominent party members who have stated support for Mr. Pitman.

Mr. Lewis held a news conference to discuss the first nine weeks of his campaign which began immediately after Mr. MacDonald announced his pending retirement last June. The 14 NDP caucus members who sup-port Mr. Lewis were present.

Mr. Pitman has the support of only four caucus members, but he has Mr. MacDonald's quiet backing.

Mr. Lewis admitted Wednesday that Mr. MacDonald wanted Mr. Pitman to contest the leadership and asked him to do so.

The two candidates meet publicly in Kitchener Sept. 11, Hamilton Sept. 17, Windsor Sept. 21, Sudbury Sept. 25, Ottawa Sept. 28 and on the opening day of the convention in Toronto Oct. 2.

Horner Denies He Opposes Stanfield

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says in an Ottawa story that six Progressive Conservative members of Parliament Stand to tell Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield that the party has a better chance of winning the next federal election if he steps down as leader.

The newspaper says the MPs will urge Mr. Stanfield to retire before to a leadership convention to be held before the ad of 1971.

Th paper says Jack Horner, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Crowfoot, says he is not involved "in the latest rumors" about Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield.

In a telephone interview Wednesday from his home at Pollockville, Alta., Mr. Horner said "there is no foundation" in a report that six Conservative members of Parliament intend to tell Mr. Stanfield that the party has a better chance of winning the next federal election if he steps down as leader.

"I don't know anything about it . . . my name should certainly not be included . . . I don't know how these things start but if the press never is invited to another Conservative agriculture meeting, they'll know the reason why."

New Brunswick to Vote Oct. 26

FREDERICTON (CP) — New Brunswick will go to the polls Monday, Oct. 26, for their fourth provincial election in 18 years.

The general election call, automatically superseding two interim predictions that had been set for Oct. 13, was made by Premier Louis J. Robichaud Wednesday following a two-hour meeting of the Liberal Party caucus.

He told reporters there was no key issue that influenced him to call the election but it was important at the outset of the 1970s that the government programs and policies be placed before the electorate.

The last provincial election was Oct. 23, 1967.

Ontario Welfare Rates Up

TORONTO (CP) — Prescott and Russel counties, with a population of 42,546, had 5% per cent of its citizens on welfare in March this year, highest percentage in Ontario.

Welfare roles in the districts east of Ottawa contained 2,200 names, up from 1,906 in the same month in 1969, when 4½ per cent was on welfare.

Only a few of Ontario municipalities with populations of more than 30,000 were able to hold welfare rates at the same level as in 1969.

None had lower rates. Tables released Wednesday by the department of social and family services showed that 114,958 persons in Ontario were on welfare, up from 108,223 in March, 1969, a 14.6 per cent increase.

Actual dollar expenditures however, rose 21.6 per cent, to $8,570,945 in March, 1970, from $4,583,220 a year earlier.

Most spectacular increases in expenditures between March, 1969, and March, 1970, were 118.8 per cent in Waterloo, 106.6 per cent in Kitchener, 90 per cent in St. Thomas and 80.1 per cent in North Bay.

Greatest concentration of welfare cases was in Metropolitan Toronto where the rolls in March contained 42,302 names, an increase of 16.5 per cent over March, 1969.

Police Computer Next Year

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A $20 million computer centre that will give Canadian policemen information within seconds will be in operation within a year, the Canadian Association of Police Chiefs was told Tuesday.

Chief Superintendent A. C. Potter, assistant director of the RCMP's Canadian Police Information Centre, said the first phase of the program to help control mobile criminals is nearing completion.

Part of the program will include filing of more than two million names with the computer banks in Ottawa for immediate access across the country.

In the first stage of the computer's development, lists of stolen cars and wanted persons will be maintained. Within five years, the computer will have millions of names, criminal records and fingerprint identifications.

30 Strike At GE Plant

PETERBOROUG H(CP) — A walkout by about 30 workers protesting time-allowance cuts forced the shutdown Wednesday of the structural steel plant of Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd.

None of the other operations of the company, which employs about 3,000 was affected. Talks were started immediately between management and Local 524, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, to resolve the dispute.

Peter How, union business agent, said the workers are protesting the company's recent application of a work-incentive program which has resulted in reductions in time allowances for some jobs.

They also are opposed to a downgrading of job classification which they claim violates an agreement negotiated last March.

Carbon Monoxide Kills Camper

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — Beverley Lorraine Webber, 21, of Toronto was found dead today in a car where she had gone to get warm after sharing a small tent with her husband on a camping trip in nearby Balsam Lake Provincial Park.

Her husband, John David Anthony Webber, told police his wife complained of the cold during the night and had moved into their car where she fell asleep with the motor running.

Police said the woman apparently died of carbon monoxide poisoning from a leaky exhaust.

Lindsay is about 30 miles northeast of Peterborough.

Bombers Postpone Calgary Explosion for Three Quarters

WINNIPEG (CP) — Quarterback Jerry Keeling threw four touchdown passes to big Herman Harrison as Calgary Stampeders crushed Winnipeg Blue Bombers 35-8 in Western Football Conference action Wednesday night.

The Stampeders moved into a second-place tie with British Columbia Lions in the league standings, but it ruined the show for a record Winnipeg crowd.

Winnipeg had stayed in the fight for three quarters and the 29,853 fans loved it. Then mistakes that have plagued the Bombers for most of their early season games again took their toll.

Trailing 15-8 late in the game, the Bombers were threatening after Fred Brule returned a Calgary kickoff 85 yards to the Stampeder 24.

The Blue Bombers moved into Calgary's three-yard line but were called for illegal procedure, moving them back to the eight-yard line and third down.

The Bombers decided to gamble. Quarterback Wally Gabler came under tremendous pressure from the blitzing Calgary linebackers and fumbled. The ball was picked up by Calgary's Dick Soderman and the big defensive end rambled 19 yards before being stopped at the Winnipeg eight.

A play later Keeling threw a touchdown strike to Harrison to put the Stampeders ahead 22-8.

Soderman again made a key play when he intercepted a pass that led to Harrison's fourth score with just two minutes and 33 seconds remaining.

Bombers then had a first-quarter lead when Gabler passed to John Scott for a 6-yard scoring play on the Bombers' first play from scrimmage. Gene Lakulak converted and added a single a few minutes later.

Larry Robinson, who converted all the Calgary touchdowns, got a single off the kick-off when Brule was tackled in the end zone to complete the Stampeder scoring.

The third quarter turned into a defensive battle until Keeling started hitting on short passes to Harrison, Dave Cranmer and Gerry Shaw.

The combination brought the Stampeders 72 yards in the Winnipeg 18 just as the third quarter ended. Two plays later Keeling connected with Harrison to move his club ahead 15-8.

The running game was taken away from both clubs by good defensive efforts. Winnipeg made just 96 yards in rushing and Calgary 93.

But the big difference was in passing as Keeling completed 24 of 44 attempts for 310 yards. Gabler and Ron Johnson were good on only eight of 34 for 121 yards.

Scoring Leaders

Teenage sensation Ivan MacMillan added to his kicking laurels Wednesday night, but the big story in Ottawa was that, for the second straight game, the Rough Riders, got three touchdowns from one of their backfielders.

Hugh Oldham scored three times as Ottawa upset Montreal Alouettes 31-7 in Eastern Football Conference play. The Als were the only undefeated team in th Canadian Football League before Wednesday's games at Ottawa.

Rookie Terry Wellesley of Belleville scored three times to down in the last Ottawa game, a 30-33 loss to British Columbia Lions.

MacMillan, 18, of nearby Alexandria, Ont., kicked seven points, including a field goal, and four converts, to give him a league-leading 36 points.

Oldham's touchdowns moved him into a second-place tie with Als' Terry Evanshen, each with 30 points.

Oldham Had Better Games, But Riders Could Care Less

OTTAWA (CP) — Flanker Hugh Oldham says he has had better games but Ottawa Rough Riders will gladly settle for his three-touchdown performance Wednesday night that lead them to a 31-7 romp over Montreal Alouettes in an Eastern Football Conference game.

Riders now share second place with Toronto Argonauts and Hamilton Tiger-Cats. Each has four points. The loss was Montreal's first in four games but still left them atop the EFC standings.

Oldham was a one-man gang in the first half. He caught six passes in all from quarterback Gary Wood, three of them for scores.

The 26-year-old rookie from the Continental League grabbed touchdown passes of six, 35 and 75 yards.

"I caught four touchdown passes for Sacramento one night," he recalled after the game. "I think I went over 300 yards that night."

Wood, a former New York Giant—also in his first year in Canadian ball, said:

"Anyone could have thrown to him tonight. Hugh did a great job."

Fullback Jim Mankins got Ottawa's other touchdown on a four-yard run. Kicking specialist Ivan MacMillan booted four converts and a 30-yard field goal.

Tony Passander, Montreal second-string quarterback, engineered the only points for the Als, passing 35 yards to Terry Evanshen for a touchdown.

George Springate, a Liberal member of the Quebec national assembly, got the convert. But his two field goal attempts were blocked by Riders.

Sonny Wade, Montreal's first-string quarterback, had a miserable night. Four of his throws were intercepted, two of them when Montreal was threatening in deep Ottawa territory.

Montreal also fumbled three times and coach Sam Etcheverry sat in the corner of a quiet Alouette dressing room and told reporters:

"If you keep making mistakes, you can't hope to control the ball. We kept making mistakes.

"They didn't really move the ball much against us except on the long pass and then only to one guy (Oldham)."

Canadian Yachtsmen Salvage First in International 14's

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Two American yachtsmen posted their straight wins Wednesday and Americans again won 19 of the 11 classes at Canadian Olympic-trials at Regatta Kingston.

Canada was first in the International 14's, but had yet to get a first place in the over-all standings.

The two Britons, Peter Bateman in the Fireball class and Reg White in the Tornado-Catamarans, were forced to share their over-all leads with Americans for the first time.

Americans led in the over-all standings in the other nine classes and at least two United States yachtsmen looked a sure bet to take home trophies.

"I've never done it before and I don't know anyone who has, but you should ask some of the older sailors about that," he said.

The 34-year-old ensign, a silver medalist at the 1967 Pan-American Games, now has to place fourth or better in only one of his two remaining races to take the Canadian open championship.

Henry Sprague of Newport Beach, Calif., came second to remain in second place over-all.

Denmark's Henning Wind, world Finn champion in 1968, failed to finish because of a loose rudder screw, but remained third over-all.

Hans Fogh of Toronto came second in the Soling class for the second consecutive day. But that still was not good enough to beat Dave Miller of Vancouver from the second spot over-all. Miller sailed third Wednesday.

Allan Holt of Seattle and Bruce Goldsmith of Chicago each had three straight wins in the Lightning class, the Stars and Lightnings.

Also-rans on Rowing Agenda

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Today is losers' day at the last World Rowing Championships.

Wednesday's winners have a secure place in Saturday's semi-finals—and Sunday's finals in some cases—so today's program is for the also-rans.

It's called the repechages and it's for crews who failed to qualify Wednesday, giving them a second chance at glory.

Particularly eager for today's events are the eight-cored shells of West Germany, Australia and Russia, the gold, silver and bronze winners respectively in the 1968 Olympic Games in Mexico.

They failed to qualify Wednesday, with Russia coming second to East Germany in one heat—the same heat in which West Germany came third—and Australia coming second to New Zealand, ahead of Austria, in another.

Hungary, Norway and the United States were 1-2-3 in the other heat of the eights.

In the coxed fours, the event which drew the largest entry list on the program, there are four repechages. First and second boats in each go through to the semi-finals with the others eliminated.

Already in are Holland, West Germany, Switzerland, East Germany.

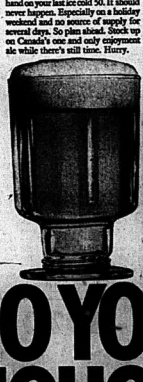
Coxless pairs will have three repechage heats of an original 16-boat entry list. First, second and third of each repechage go into the semi-finals to join Russia, Holland and East Germany who won their heats.

In the single sculls, oarsmen from Sweden, Britain, Italy, Argentina, West Germany and Norway are in the semi-finals. There will be one repechage to choose the three to row against them.

There are three repechages slated for the coxed pairs category. East germany, Russia and Rumania are in, to be joined by the top three in each repechage.

In the fours without coxswain, Switzerland, East Germany and Yugoslavia made it. To join them will be the top three from each of three second-chance heats.

European crews dominated opening day of the four-day regatta which continues today, skips Friday and winds up Saturday and Sunday.



The eights, last event on the program, highlighted the first day.

East Germany turned in the fastest heat with a time of 5:52.39, the fastest an eight has covered the 2,000 metres since the West German crew turned a 5:50.39 in th world championship at Lucerne in 1962.

World rowing officials do not consider world records because of different lanes in current and wind from course to course.

New Zealand had a 5:54.66 heat and Hungary was timed in 5:56.37.

A long weekend is something every 50 drinker should plan ahead for. Just think how you'd feel if you reached into your refrigerator and closed your hand on your last ice cold 50. It should never happen. Especially on a holiday weekend and a source of supply for several days. So plan ahead. Stock up on Canada's one and only enjoyment ale while there's still time. Hurry.

Seaver Ends Slump for Climbing Mets

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago Cubs and New York Mets have started taking a positive approach to the National League's East Division race—a most unhealthy situation for Pittsburgh Pirates, who are still in a rut.

The Cubs and Mets both closed in on the first place Pirates by winning Wednesday while Montreal Expos were tagging Pittsburgh with its seventh loss in the last eight starts.

Chicago exploded for a 17-3 romp over Philadelphia Phillies and moved within one game of the lead. The Cubs have won four of the last five.

The second place Mets won their third straight over St. Louis Cardinals with Tom Seaver ending a personal four-game losing streak, 7-3. That moved New York to within half game of the top.

The Pirates, meanwhile, frittered away a five-run lead, battled back to tie the score on Bob Robertson's pinch homer with two out in the ninth and finally bowed to Montreal 10-9 when John Boccabella unloaded a three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth.

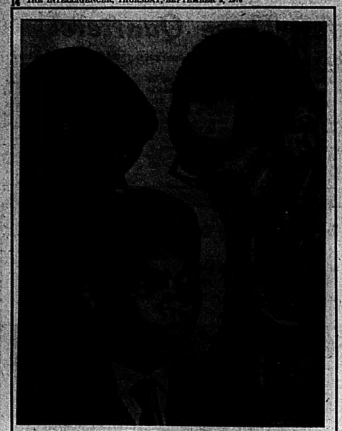
Other action National League action, Atlanta Braves topped Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3, Cincinnati Reds shut out San Francisco Giants 2-0 and Houston Astros stunned San Diego Padres 5-1.

Joe Pepitone and Randy Hundley both settled three-run homers and Clean Jhomet and pitcher Mik Pappas also contested as the Cubs routed Philadelphia.

Don Clendenon and Jones drove in two runs each and the Mets, usually stingy with runs when Seaver is pitching, gave their ace right-hander plenty of offense to work with against St. Louis.

Glenn Alley walloped an inside-the park grand slam homer to highlight a six-run Pittsburgh rally in the sixth inning, wiped out Montreal's early lead.

But the Expos battled back, picking up two runs in the bottom of the sixth and then batting home four more to take the lead with two out in the eighth. Boots Day's double and a single by Bobby Wine were the big hits in that rally.



The first two Pirates went down in the ninth, but Robertson tied the score with his pinch homer. Then in the bottom of the ninth reliever Joe Gibbon walked two men and Bruce Dal Canton came in to face Boccabella, who tagged his fifth homer of the year.

Hal King's first-inning grand slam accounted for all of Atlanta's runs and the Braves ended a six-game losing streak by whipping Los Angeles.

Gary Nolan used last-out help from Wayne Granger to nail down a three-hitter as Cincinnati ended San Francisco's five-game winning streak. Giants' ace Juan Marichal took the loss.

Jim Wynn's two-run homer in the first inning was enough to carry Houston's pair San Diego.

Promoters Jesse Hill, left, and State Sen. Leroy Johnson hover over defrocked world heavyweight champion Cassius Clay in a whispering conference before a scheduled news conference at Atlanta, Airport Tuesday morning. Clay Toys with Trio

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Former world heavyweight champion Cassius Clay toyed with two opponents Wednesday night then showed flashes of his old lightning fast form against a third as he returned to the fight ring for the first time in more than three years.

Clay entered the ring weighing 16 pounds more than his fighting weight of 211, but throughout eight rounds of exhibition boxing displayed the same graceful bobbing and weaving style that was his trademark when he was champ.

Clay was announced as winner of all three matches. His other opponents were Rufus Brassell of Lima, Ohio, and John Hudgins of Miami, Fla.

Boccabella Walks Down Hero's Lane

MONTREAL (CP) — A long white carpet, of towels traced a path from the door of the Montreal Expos' clubhouse to the locker of the hero of Wednesday night's National League victory over Pittsburgh Pirates.

When John Boccabella walked the carpet to his locker he found a bottle of wine awaiting him as a reward from his team-mates for his three-run homer in the ninth inning which gave the Expos a 10-7 victory over the East Division-leading Pirates.

Boccabella hit a 2-0 pitch off Pirates relief pitcher Bruce Dal Canton over the left field fence, scoring Jim Fairey and Bob Bailey ahead of him.

The homer was Boccabella's fifth of the year and boosted his batting average for the 1970 season to .285, an improvement over his 1969 batting average of last season.

"I have a lot better rhythm in my swing this year," said Boccabella, who spent hours with Expos special batging instructor Larry Doby during last fall's Expos instruction camp.

"Dal Canton got me out on a fast ball last time we were in Pittsburgh and I went up looking for a fastball again. I think the pitch came a bit inside, but I got a good piece of it."

The Expos jumped off to a 1-0 lead on a run-producing double by Bob Bailey in the first inning but the Pirates erased that deficit with a six-run rally in the sixth inning.

The Pirates used Gene Alley's bases-loaded, inside-the-park home run to key the uprising. It was Alley's first major-league grand-slam homer.

Montreal got two back in the bottom of the sixth and grabbed a 7-6 lead with four runs in the eighth.

A walk to Rusty Staub started the rally. Bailey singled and after George Brunet struck out Adolfo Phillips on a disputed play, Dave Giusti took over the mound for Pittsburgh.

A wild pitch advanced the runners and then John Bateman walked, loading the bases. Boots Day followed with a double, driving in two runs and Bobby Wine's single delivered the tying and go-ahead runs.

Montreal manager Gene Mauch was ejected from the game by plate umpire Paul Pryor in the eighth inning after vehemently protesting Phillips' strikeout in the eighth.

Senators Stymie Indian Strategy

Sam McDowell, one of the most feared pitchers in the major leagues, last yet to win 20 games in a season, an Cleveland Indian manager Alvin Dark decided to give his new southpaw a helping hand.

Dark devised a scheme, but as has happened so often with the best of plans, this one went awry and instead of picking up victory No. 20, McDowell came away with his ninth loss Wednesday night, dropping a 4-1 American League decision to Washington Senators.

The Senators foiled Dark's strategy and jolted Sudden Sam and botched, plays to stop the Indians while Dick Bosman limited Cleveland to four hits.

McDowell walked Washington slugger Frank Howard three times intentionally, twice as a leadoff hitter. The second time, Howard moved to third on infield hits by Rick Reichardt and Aurelio Rodrigues and scored on a wild pitch.

In the sixth inning, McDowell moved to first base with two on and one out and Howard the hitter. Dead Chance came on to pitch and Howard beat out an infield dribbler as first went unmanned, leading the batter to.

Two runs then scored when Reichardt bounced into a force-out as Wayne Comer scored from second on the late throw to McDowell at first base, trying for the double play. Chance pitched two-thirds of an inning and McDowell returned to finish the game on the mound.

"He's the only batter in the league I concede to," said McDowell of Howard.

In other American League games, New York Yankees edged Baltimore Orioles 3-2, Detroit Tigers split with Boston Red Sox, capping the day half of a doubleheader 6-4 before losing at night 5-1, Oakland Athletics trimmed Chicago White Sox 3-1, California Angels defeated Kansas City Royals 3-1 and the Milwaukee at Minnesota game was called by rain.

Horace Clarke drilled a bases-loaded double in the seventh inning, capping a two-out, three-run rally against 21-game winner Dave McNally, for the Yankees' victory. McNally had won nine straight.

Cal Koonce tossed a three-hitter and drove in a pair of runs with a single as the Red Sox slammed the Tigers in the nightcap. Reggie Jackson of Detroit became the 39th player in major league history to hit a homer in his first time at bat.

In the opener, the Tigers tied it with a pair of runs in the seventh and capitalized on George Scott's error for a pair of unearned runs in the eighth.

Campy Campaneris drilled a run-scoring two-out triple in the seventh inning, giving Oakland's John (Blue Moon) Odom the victory over the White Sox.

Alex Johnson drove in a pair of runs with run-scoring singles, helping Clyde Wright to his 20th victory as the Angels got to within four games of West Division leader, Minnesota Twins.

Johnson, who went 3 for 4, increased his batting average to .329, tying him with Cash Tresmekal and Reggie Smith of the Red Sox for the league lead.

McLain Has Second Thoughts

DETROIT (AP) — Denny McLain said Wednesday he is withdrawing a grievance request he made to the Major League Baseball Players Association over his suspension by Detroit Tigers for dunking two sports writers with ice water.

McLain said he filed an informal grievance last Friday in hopes of recovering from $1,500 to $4,000 he expects to lose because of the one-week suspension.

He decided to withdraw the complaint "for my personal reasons and because I don't think it would accomplish anything," McLain said. "I'm still losing considerable amount of money."

The temperamental pitcher was suspended by Jim Campbell, Detroit Tigers executive vice-president and general manager, last Friday, minutes after McLain doused the two writers, Watson Spoelstra of the Detroit News and Jim Hawkins of the Detroit Free Press, with buckets of ice water.

It was McLain's second suspension of the season. Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn suspended him from the beginning of the season to July 1 for associating with gamblers in 1967.

McConnell Not MVP, But Don't Tell Rollins

Fletcher Wayne McConnell might have been overlooked as most Commercial Softball League Most Valuable Player ballots, but Wednesday night the Rollins Construction right - hander conducted his own balloting.

McConnell, who has pitched in each of Rollins' 27 Commercial League games to date this season, threw a four-hitter at the Ellis Juniors, and had a three for - three night at the plate as the Rollins crowned their best-of-seven final league series with a 3-1 win.

To cap off a perfect night, McConnell scored what proved to be the winning run.

The winners scrounched for all three runs in the bottom of the seventh inning. Wes May singled to start the rally followed by McConnell's base hit to left field. A bunt by Brian Smith and an overthrow by Wayne McTaggart on the force play at third accounted for one run. Alex's single scored McConnell and Smith crossed home plate to end the scoring when Carl Boomhower blasted a double into deep right field.

The only excitement for the Ellis fans came in the ninth inning when Wayne McTaggart stole third on a double and scored on Dave Duvall's single. McTaggart also led the losers at bat with two hits, Dale Duvall and Ted Waite added singles.

The two teams meet again Friday night at 8 p.m. at the Alemite.

The winners were allowed ten hits and seven walks. The losers stranded eight baserunners, twice as many as Union Carbide.

Bill Barberstock powered two base home runs for the winners. Jack Hughes added three singles and Lou Smrke doubled.

Larry Towns, low gross winner of the Eastern Ontario Food Golf Tournament, checks his scorecard after posting a round of 76 on the Bay of Quinte course, yesterday. Towns used five bogeys and 13 pars to top the field of over 130 golfers.

Birdies Not on Menu

Fowl wasn't on the menu of the Eastern Ontario Food Golf Tournament winners as low gross winner Larry Towns failed to include a single birdie in his 76-stroke round.

Towns, who has been golfing since he was 14, was a model of consistency bogeying five holes and shooting par on the remaining 13 to win the tournament by one stroke.

A field of 135 golfers from food chains throughout Eastern Ontario competed on the Bay of Quinte course yesterday in the 13th year that the tournament has been held.

Towns survived a cold putter to record his five-over-par 76 and win the Wade Ryans Trophy for the low gross score.

The low net winner —was scratch golfer Gord Huddleston, who turned in a 77 to win the Peter Chown Trophy.

Bob McCoppen copped the Harry Martin Trophy as the low-scoring salesman in the tourney, while event chairman Bill Slade proved that he can organize a good golf game, as well as tournament, by winning the Tony Lowen Trophy for the top wholesale grocer in the competition.

Planners Meet Tonight On Hockey School Format

While most sport fans are still wondering about Arpanants and Alouettes, another segment of the sporting crowd is busy organizing for the upcoming hockey season.

A meeting will be held tonight at the Belleville Memorial Arena to formulate plans for a Hockey School for Albinos in the City of Belleville.

"The camp was a tremendous success last year," says Joe Cox, chairman of the hockey school committee. "We had 374 boys attend and if the response is the same this year, we'll be running over a two-week period."

The school, which starts September 29 is open to boys from 5-18 years of age and is aimed at promoting sportsmanship, teaching basic hockey skills and stressing the importance of skating.

It is hoped that Mo-Hawk stalwart Lionel Conacher will again organize the instructors, which last year included a number of former Belleville McFarlands, as well as some players with professional experience.

Each boy will get approximately ten hours ice time during the course of the school, learning the proper techniques of shooting, passing and stickhandling with a special emphasis on skating. The remainder of the time will be taken up with chalk talks and films.

It's basically the same type of camp that Kingston and some of the professional schools run," claims Cox, the difference is that most of them cost over $100 and we plan on charging about $7.50."

Tonight's organizational meeting gets under way at 8 p.m. and anyone interested in contributing their services is invited to attend.

Plane's Top City Tadpoles; Legionnaires Grab Peewee Crown

Two Belleville minor baseball championships were decided last night when Plane's Concrete downed Mahoney's Sunoco 8-5 in the Tadpole division and in the Peewee division Legion 99 over Cablevue 17-11.

Dale McTaggart went all the way on the mound for Plane's Concrete striking out ten and walking 12.

McTaggart also aided his own cause with a double and two singles, while Steve Meeks was good for three safeties. David Malkawa singled twice for the losers.

In the peewee game Bill Whalen was the winning pitcher striking out nine and walking 11. For the losers it was Mike McLelland allowing ten walks and seven[illegible] eight on strikes.

Rick Calkin with a homer and double and Brian Turner with two doubles and a single split the batting honors. Dave Hamilton, Roger Saddard and Rick Keegan each had two hits.

In the tyke division Golden Mile took a 3-1 lead in games in the best - of - five series by stopping Harvey's Hamburgers 4-2. Peter Hall beat Harvey's Andy Bowen on the opposing mounds.

Glen Andrews, Danny Duffy, Peter Hall and John Murphy each had a single for Golden Mile, while Terry Kingsman and Mike Burke collected the losers' only hits.

Queen's Edge Weese's For Berth in Finals

Women's Softball touched off some fall fireworks as the Derby Queens came up with a 16 - 6 victory over Weese's. The victory gave Dairy Queen their semi - final series three games to one.

Barb Breadner survived a 16 - bit attack by the losers to record the win. She walked two batters and set a pair down on strikes.

Nora Barberstock was the leading hitter for the losers. Dairy Queens, allowing six walks and striking out two batters.

Judy Pultz showed the way for the winners rapping three doubles and a single. Barb Breadner was good for a home run and two doubles and Cathy Brown contributed a homer and two singles to the attack.

Irma Barberstock was tops for Weese's with a round-tripper and two singles, while Valerie Brown added a homer and double.

Pulford Swapped to Kings

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League announced today they have traded veteran Bob Pulford to Los Angeles Kings for forwards Gerry Monahan and Brian Murphy.

In a statement released by a Leafs spokesman, general manager Jim Gregory said the trade deal not be conditional on Pulford's reporting to the Kings. It was a straight trade, he said, with no cash considerations involved.

Pulford, 34, scored 251 goals and 312 assists in 14 seasons with the Leafs. Last season he collected only 19 goals and 19 assists in 74 games.

Monahan, 23, started his professional hockey career in 1966-67 with Houston of the Central Hockey League.

He started last season with Detroit Red Wings of the NHL before being traded to the Kings in a six-player deal early this year.

He scored three goals last season with the Wings and none with the Kings.

Murphy, also 23, has played two seasons with the Springfield Kings, the Los Angeles farm club in the American Hockey League.

Pulford, whose name has been mentioned in numerous trade rumors in recent years, said he would talk with the Kings but has not yet decided whether he will continue in hockey or turn to other business opportunities.

Lombardi Dead at 57

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vince Lombardi, Washington Redskins coach and onetime ruler of a football world with Green Bay Packers, died today of cancer. He was 57.

Lombardi, the only man in the history of the National Football League playoffs to win three straight championships, had undergone two operations within a month in his battle with the disease.

The New York native arrived in Green Bay in 1959, one year after the Packers posted their worst record, 1-10-1. He forged a 7-5 season his first year, won the divisional championship in 1960, and then proceeded to capture NFL titles in 1961, 1962, 1965, 1966 and 1967.

Lombardi retired from coaching in 1968 to serve as general manager of the Packers but he was later to describe the one year off the field as the most miserable of his life.

He came to the Washington Redskins in February, 1969, as head coach, general manager, executive vice-president, and part owner—the latter post, he said, on of the prime reasons for switching from Green Bay.

In his initial season, he posted a 7-5-2 record to give the Redskins their first winning season in 14 years.

French Canadians Quit Youth Parley

OTTAWA (CP) — The tumultuous first national youth conference ever to travel and exchange ends today without half the French-Canadian contingent which planned a walkout after the Wednesday session.

About half of the 70 French-Canadian delegates said they would leave the three-day conference after its second day because of interference by government representatives and "incompetence" by conference organizers.

Denise Foisy, a 22-year-old delegate from Montreal's Alliance of Young Student Workers, said she would be "angry of the Quebec delegates out of the conference because organizers were interrupting things as they wanted to see them."

Mrs. Foisy said the real translation went more than just hoarse which are open in the summer. They need year-round facilities, and these people don't want to talk about these problems."

"This conference is just going through the motions of making recommendations to give money to the same old organizations like the YMCA."

She said the "old" organizations will decide money should be spent on hostels which are the "in" thing this year.

"Next year it will be something else. In 10 years they'll be discussing c o m m u n a l living, volunteer groups have accomplished around or commences for five years.

"These organizations just follow whatever is popular but they don't get down to the street level where things are really being done," she said.

The maverick French-Canadian group was joined by bearded, long-haired delegation calling themselves "Yrakins" who called for resolutions concerning drugs, drop-in centres and c o m m u n a l which are "more relevant" to most of the transient youth.

The conference, which threatened to break up as more disgruntled delegates expressed their complaints, regained momentum when Frank Clamplit, 24, of Seattle, Wash., told delegates to "give the conference a chance."

Mr. Clamplit, a former Students For a Democratic Society member, set a standing ovation when he said "we never get money in the U.S. for drop-in centres and drug centres. But your government is supplying this money and if they have ulterior motives, so what! Give it a chance anyway."

"You've got a helluva lot more freedom up here than we did in the States and whether or not the government is putting one over on you or not doesn't really matter," he said.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Privacy Essential for Peace

Thoughts at Large:

We look upon ourselves as the heirs of creation, and yet we know far more about the environmental requirements of moths, chickens or trees than we do about the proper needs of the human environment.

• • •

Until we can begin to agree on what we cannot do, we possibly agree on what we want, even when we may want pretty much the same things.

• • •

One of the greatest perils of population growth is that privacy is essential for community peace; violence erupts in slum areas not so much because the people are poor (so are rural people) as because their lives have little margin of privacy in any aspect.

• • •

I was pleased to hear Sen. Fred Harris on a TV interview recently suggest that the basic problems we face — war, race, hunger — are not basically political problems, but moral ones, and cannot be solved on the political level, no matter what laws we pass or how much we spend.

• • •

Interesting (and depressing) how the word "intimate" between persons of opposite sex has come to mean wholly sexual; but a truly "intimate" relationship is one in which persons reveal themselves to each other, in all their weakness, without fear; and this kind of intimacy is becoming rarer all the time.

• • •

Some heroism the fact that "there are no heroes anymore"; I happen to agree with Frank Manuel, the historian, who declared, "the Age of the Heroes, like the Age of the Gods, is dead. It is time that the Age of Men began."

Of all the discoveries of science in our time, the biggest and most important is still awaiting us (and it won't be made by a scientist), and that is the discovery of how to integrate science with society so that human needs are served by, and not subordinated to, our technological apparatus.

"Survival of the fittest" is a treacherous doctrine if taken by a simple - minded way; for the ultimate survivor may be the cockroach not the Caesar.

Most children are trained to try to be better than somebody else, which can cripple them as much as it can challenge them; few are taught that the only competition worth the candle is to try to be better than yourself of yesterday.

With all the flag-flying being done today, let me recommend another pamphlet called "Patriotism Today," published by the Claretian Fathers for 50 cents, as the best brief exposition of what "American-ism" really is and should be in its fullest and deepest dimensions. The first, and almost whole, task of a school is to stimulate curiosity; if it cannot do this, it cannot truly educate. It can only train, for an educated person remains curious his life long, while a merely trained one only performs rituals.

If we are to survive as a species, we must learn to live with ourselves and with our environment, and not merely with our fellow-men.

New Douglas Tri-jet

First of the McDonnell Douglas DC-10 tri-jets was formally introduced recently in Long Beach, Calif. Measuring 182 feet in length, it will accommodate up to 345 passengers. The plane is newest of the wide-bodied jetliners and the first of the tri-jets. (CP Photo)

Liberal Student Hits Party

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the Ontario Student Liberals criticized the provincial Liberal party Wednesday for its handling of election funds.

Alex J. Shepard said in a release that the Liberal party "actively seeks support from large American corporations," but hides such election contributions from voters by using a system of two bank accounts in each riding.

"One account is used to collect funds and the other to disburse them," he said. "Monies are continually transferred from one to the other.

"This evades the intent of the Elections Act which requires candidates to disclose their source of monies. In this case, the source is the other bank account."

Mr. Shepard said other political parties also use the two-account system.

Barring Gregory Under Fire

CANBERRA (Reuters) — An Opposition Labor party member of Parliament said Wednesday the refusal of the Australian government to grant a visa to comedian Dick Gregory was a "black day" for Australia.

The Australian government refused Tuesday to give Gregory a two-week visa to enter Australia Sept. 13. He was to have addressed rallies in connection with Australia's second anti-Vietnam moratorium campaign.

Immigration Minister Phillip Lynch said Wednesday the government is "not prepared to allow the entry to Australia of persons whose activities are stated to be contrary to the national interest."

B. Cohn, the member for South Australia, said Wednesday it appears that anyone who wants to enter Australia would have to support the government's policy on Vietnam "or he must not open his mouth."

Cohen added "The Pope will be here shortly. I understand he opposes war. Will his visa be revoked?"

Pollution Fines Will Be Raised

HALIFAX (CP) — Energy and Resources Minister George Kerr of Ontario said here Wednesday the province is considering legislation to help commercial fishermen and others who suffer loss of income from pollution.

Mr. Kerr told the comparative law section of the Canadian Bar Association that Ontario plans to raise the maximum fines for water pollutors to the same level as those imposed for breaches of Ontario's Air Pollution Control Act.

The maximum fine would be raised from $1,000 to $5,000 for a first offense.

Mr. Kerr said that because of problems resulting from mercury contamination the Ontario government is considering legislation to enable individuals to get final compensation from the province by assigning to the government their right to sue.

An amendment to the Ontario Water Resources Commission Act will also require a particular industry responsible for pollution to clean up areas of contamination where possible or compensate the government for the cleanup fee, he said.

Mr. Kerr said the amendments he will introduce at the next legislature session are based on the principle that industries have the responsibility to ensure that the materials or substances they use will not harm the environment.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Diabetes Comes In Two Varieties

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I've been told I have diabetes. I asked my doctor for a diet sheet. Not only am I not on a diet, but I don't even have to take insulin.

Isn't that peculiar? My only symptoms are that I'm extremely thirsty and pass a lot of urine. I feel fine otherwise.

He's not busy. I haven't bothered to ask him to explain. His prescribed pet of a powder that I'm supposed to sniff a few times a day. It's a giant nuisance, but he says it has nothing to do with the sugar in my blood. Could you please explain? — Mrs. F.

Comment: I'm guessing that you have the "other kind" of diabetes. This is called diabetes insipidus: it is entirely different from the more common type we call diabetes mellitus. In each kind of diabetes there may be predominant symptoms such as excessive thirst and excessive urination. But the similarity usually goes there.

In diabetes mellitus, the trouble lies in the hard-to-accreting apparatus in the pancreas, or in the sugar mobilization function of the liver, or some other difficulty in keeping the blood from becoming overloaded with sugar.

Such patients need to be put on a diet and may need insulin or some other medication to regulate the blood sugar so that it stays within normal limits. With good care, such diabetic patients can live normal lives.

But in the case of diabetes insipidus, the trouble doesn't originate in the pancreas, but in some intricate, little-known function of the pituitary gland. No special diet is necessary.

The medicine you are sniffing is probably an extract of posterior pituitary gland material. This can also be taken by hypodermic injection. It soon controls excessive thirst and urination.

Whether he's busy or not, Mrs. F., I think your doctor will be glad to take a minute or two to explain your condition. Patients often bend over too far backwards in trying to save the doctor time, and go on for months and years not really knowing what ails them. Just ask him, "What kind of diabetes have I got?"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 71 years old. I have a lot of gas and bloating after meals. Even when I am on a bland diet, I suffer after I eat. I have swallows. When the gas builds up I get pain between my shoulder blades. I tell my doctor about it, but I feel like otherwise. What kind of doctor would you suggest that I see? I haven't had an examination in many years. — Mrs. O.

Comment: If you have a family doctor, see him. If not, make an appointment with some internist. With your symptoms it is likely that examination will include a study of your gall bladder and heart (with electrocardiogram). If cases are negative, probably you will have X rays of your stomach and intestines, the floating and gas are suboptimum symptoms. The trick is to discover their origin.

• • •

For Mrs. A.: As your husband is not incapacitated by his emphysema and dreads the long drive by car, ask his doctor if a plane trip wouldn't be preferable.

Commercial planes are pressurized for breathing comfort. They also carry reserve supplies of oxygen if needed.

With few exceptions I've always believed that plane travel is better suited to heart and lung patients than long, enervating auto trips.

Ferry Near Shore Before Collision

VANCOUVER (CP) — The helmsman of the ferry Queen of Victoria testified Wednesday that the vessel was "very close to shave" on its own side of Active Pass just before its collision with the Russian freighter Sergey Yesenin Aug. 2.

Wilfred Van Sickle, 34, of Surrey, B.C., told a federal inquiry commission the westbound ferry was just reaching the western end of the channel when the freighter came into view from behind the point.

Asked by commission counsel Guy Major how close to shore the ferry was, he replied: "I would say we were very close to shore . . . the Gulfside about 75 locked to be a few hundred feet."

Gallano Island would be on the ferry's starboard side and normal navigation procedure would call for the vessel to keep the starboard side of the channel.

Earlier, the Sergey Yesenin's master, Capt. Nikolai Khasulov, testified that when the ferry was sighted it was on the Mayne Island side—the freighter's side—of the pass.

The collision killed three ferry passengers.

Earlier Wednesday, the Sergey Yesenin's radio operator, Oleg Gollkov, said he was not familiar with Canadian recommendations on what frequencies to monitor or to broadcast on while in Canadian coastal waters. But he said he was maintaining a listening watch on the 500 megacycle frequency required by international conventions on maritime safety.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For September 4

Your birthday today: The year ahead brings you the challenge and the opportunity to catch your equilibrium. A conservative approach to all problems is essential. You find a natural tendency to back away from drastic experiments, to bring new factors into balance. Romance and speculative ventures must fit into the odd moments of your time. Today's natives are nearly all marked for entanglement in unusual interests, unlikely events.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Let people come to you rather than force issues. Pleasure and the appeal of new experience leads you off your beaten track this evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Your inclination is to take the comfortable way out. Instead get a full day's work done along with the credit. Prepare for a change in personal habits.

Pumping Facilities Lacking

TORONTO (CP) — Lakes Ontario and Nipissing and the north-west shore of Georgian Bay are the only popular boating areas in the province where sewage pump-out facilities are inadequate, a water management official said today.

Provincial regulations requiring operators of commercial marinas to provide sewage pump-out services for pleasure craft went into effect Aug. 31.

Murray Cheetham, public relations director for the Ontario Water Resources Commission, said 120 of the 400 commercial marinas now have facilities in operation, and 12 more have indicated they are installing services.

There are another 430 marinas which are not considered commercial operations and which are not covered by the regulations.

Mr. Cheetham said experts indicate the coverage now is "quite good," and will be considered complete if 300 of the commercial establishments put pumping stations into operation.

The OWRC inspectors this week began visits to marinas to check whether government regulations are being obeyed. The OWRC hopes to persuade operators to make the installations without the necessity for stercer measures.

Work will continue this winter to find a solution to the problem on Lakes Ontario and Nipissing and in Georgian Bay. OWRC has a large trailer unit containing pump-out tanks which may help fill any blind spots, but it has been used up to now only in emergency situations in which marina facilities were inadequate for the traffic.

Universities Have Some Openings

TORONTO (CP) — Ten of Ontario's 14 universities still are accepting applications for first-year students although many of their professional schools are filled, spokesmen said today.

Toronto, York, McMaster, Guelph, Waterloo Lutheran, Ottawa, Carleton, Laurentian, Brock and Windsor still have places available.

Queen's, Trent and the University of Waterloo have no openings in first-year undergraduate programs and the University of Western Ontario says it is receiving so many applications for arts and science courses "except for some special reason."

Edward Davidson, director of admissions at the University of Toronto, said it has very few openings. Applications were still being accepted at the Erindale campus, but the downtown and Scarborough campuses were closed.

Medicine and nursing courses are filled at McMaster in Hamilton, but a spokesman said there is room for students in engineering.

Guelph University reports only a few spaces left in its four-year honor course in engineering. Its affiliate, Ontario Agricultural College, is filled.

A spokesman at Waterloo Lutheran said both the arts and business faculties are open.

Medicine, law, nursing, physical education and hospital administration are filled at the University of Ottawa, but applications are being accepted in some arts and science programs.

The university has waived its usual late application fee of $50 because of the postal strike.

Journalism and architecture are the only courses closed at Carleton University in Ottawa.

Laurentian University in Sudbury says applications will be received and processed until classes start. Of 1,000 first-year places, 600 are filled.

Brock University has filled 800 places of 850.

The University of Windsor has places in all courses except fine arts, dramatic arts and physical education.

York has openings in the arts program at Glendon College and in the faculties of science and liberal science at the main campus.

Postmen Will Get 55-cent Pay Raise

Government, Union Agree to Proposal

OTTAWA (CP) — The government and postal-union representatives signed a 2½-year work contract early today with lavish praise for the work of mediator Thomas O'Connor, a Toronto labor relations specialist who guided the protracted negotiations through their crucial, final stages.

The new contract, which must be ratified by the vote of 27,000 postal workers, provides an increase of 55 cents an hour spread over 30 months.

Retroactive to last Oct. 1, when the previous agreement expired, it runs to March 31, 1972.

The government says the increase works out to a rate of 6.8 per cent a year. The unions say it is more like 7.3 per cent.

Based on the present average hourly wage of $3.06, a 55-cent increase amounts to about 7.2 per cent.

The settlement, which went through a dramatic series of rejections and approvals Thursday, breaches the government's six-per-cent guide for wage and salary increases this year.

Spokesmen for both the government and the unions had high praise for Mr. O'Connor's work as mediator since he was appointed Aug. 18.

William Houle, co-chairman of the Council of Postal Unions, said Mr. O'Connor had the right approach.

"Not the big technocrat approach—he was the man for the job."

Mr. Houle added that there is no doubt postal workers will accept the contract. The voting would take about three weeks, he said, "but I have every confidence it will be approved."

Jean Gruslin, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said today ratification will take several weeks because 27,000 copies of the agreement must be printed to be sent to members. A voting date hasn't been set.

"We want everybody to be well aware of what they are voting for," Mr. Gruslin said.

The contract had been negotiated against strong pressure from the government side, Mr. Houle said.

"I can't say that I'm happy with it but it's the best we can do," he added.

Negotiator Cecil Harper, representing the federal treasury board, said he believed much of the credit for success should go to Mr. O'Connor.

He said he hopes the post office and its employees will find an easier method of handling disputes in the future.

Agreement in the post office dispute foreshadows return to regularity in familiar routines, even myths — like the dog-that-bites-the-postman caper. He and Jo, a two-year-old German shepherd are the best of buddies, and the pet happily awaits his daily visits. Mr. Campbell, president of the city Letter Carriers Union branch, also had some happy words about the end of the postal deadlock. (For story, see Page 2.)

Israel Wants Bases Moved

TEL AVIV (CP)—Amid speculation that it is prepared to withdraw from peace negotiations if the ceasefire status quo is not restored by Egypt, Israel called on the United States today to make the Egyptians remove their missiles placed in the Suez canal truce zone since Aug. 7.

Reliable Israeli sources said the United States had offered to supply Israel anti-missile, electronic equipment and weapons if there was no demand for withdrawal of the missiles. The sources said the Israelis rejected this as "inadequate."

Israel said Thursday night that Washington's call for the Egyptians and Russians to stop violating the ceasefire is not enough.

Premier Golda Meir, speaking after a top-level cabinet meeting, urged Washington "demand from the Russians and the Egyptians keep their obligations and maintain the standstill on the canal, and restore the position to what it was when the ceasefire came into effect."

NDP Will Choose Between Styles

TORONTO (CP) — Differences in style and personality appear to be the only choice so far offered to delegates who must choose between Stephen Lewis, 32, and Walter Pitman, 41, as the new leader of the provincial New Democratic Party next month.

There are some New Democrats who argue that style and personality are enough for a leader to sell the party's ideas to the voters. The NDP claims that its membership and not the elected representatives decide policy.

But it is difficult to believe that in the pragmatic world of politics about 1,500 convention delegates will be satisfied with nothing more.

In any case, a campaign featuring only the exploitation of Mr. Lewis's quick-silver brilliance and Mr. Pitman's reasoned intelligence does not appear to be creating the excitement and interest retiring leader Donald MacDonald said a leadership contest should stimulate.

Cambodian Regime Is Losing

By JOHN T. WHEELER

PHNOM PENH (AP) — In the two months since U.S. troops pulled out of Cambodia, Gen. Lon Nol's government has steadily lost ground in its war against the Communists.

Washington has granted Phnom Penh $40 million in military aid and has committed limited U.S. air power to back up government troops in the field. But this has not halted much less reversed, the deteriorating military and political situation.

The overriding impression is that the government's strategy of abandoning more than half the country to Communist control to ensure the defence of the capital and the country's heartland is not working well.

The Communists have made no serious attempt to attack Phnom Penh, but the city's defences are not particularly strong. The capital is particularly wide open to rocket and mortar attacks from across the Mekong River to the east.

Four of Cambodia's seven major highways have been closed almost continuously for three or more months.

On the northern front, fishing areas populated mainly by ethnic Vietnamese have provided more or less willing recruits and transportation workers in the Communists, especially after the Cambodians slaughtered many Vietnamese living in Cambodia during the early days of the war. One source said the fishing villages had provided the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong "with about the equivalent of a new division."

Ten Communist Divisions Move

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Up to 10 Communist divisions now are in Cambodia or moving down the Ho Chi Minh trail through Laos with orders from Hanoi to launch a major new offensive in South Vietnam, senior Communist diplomatic sources report.

American military observers in Saigon said they could not confirm or deny the report.

Stanfield Will Demand Unanimous Endorsement

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield will demand, and get, a unanimous vote of confidence at a party caucus here Wednesday, party sources said Thursday.

The sources said Mr. Stanfield may not even have to make the demand, however.

He may simply ask that any Conservative MPs who have complaints about his leadership stand up and express them.

"Nobody is likely to even whisper a complaint," a friend of Mr. Stanfield said.

Reports of disenchantment with Mr. Stanfield's leadership have been frequent since an unannounced meeting in Saskatoon last weekend of some Conservative prairie MPs.

Mr. Stanfield has said such secret meetings have no place in the party and that he will deal firmly with the situation.

Mr. Stanfield took firm action earlier this year when 17 Conservative MPs flouted his approving the government's official language bill and voted against the legislation.

Mr. Stanfield told the party caucus that he would not stand such opposition within the party, especially on a matter so important to national unity.

When the bill came up for third and final reading in the Commons, not a single Conservative MP opposed it.

Pesticide Pollution Virtually Unrelieved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government's flurry of action against pesticides has failed to reduce significantly the amount of chemicals polluting the environment, and the bans it has ordered aren't likely to be effective for at least a year.

The agriculture department, during the last 10 months, has announced cancellation of suspension of a number of the registered uses for DDT and two of the chemical nerve-system pesticides containing one form of the poisonous metal mercury, and the herbicide 2,4,5-T, which has been shown to cause birth defects in animals.

The actions, however, left intact registered uses that account for 75 per cent of domestic applications of DDT and 2,4,5-T.

And government officials concede that because of legal loopholes and possibly lengthy appeals by manufacturers, some retail sales of the pesticides for uses officially banned will continue until at least next year and perhaps for two to three years.

The House of Representatives government operations committee accused the department last year of "almost incredible failure to regulate pesticides."

Quebec Commission Wants Doctors Placed on Salaries

QUEBEC (CP) — A Quebec royal commission on health and welfare has submitted a report to the government calling for radical reforms in almost every area of the province's health services.

Recommending early legislative action, the 1,000-page document, made public Thursday, presents 250 proposals aimed at improving the general health of Quebecers and providing efficient, accessible medical services.

It is the result of more than three years of study by the 10-man royal commission.

The commission, which says the sky-rocketing medical costs in the province are concentrated in expensive and relatively inefficient hospitals, includes among its recommendations:

—Abandonment of the fee-payment system for doctors and introduction of a salary system to remove what the commission considers the current emphasis on volume and to improve quality in medical service.

—Sharp cuts in government expenditures on health, including an immediate halt to construction of new hospitals and establishment of a tax to support health services.

—Decentralization of health administration in the province, with the creation of three regional offices to co-ordinate personnel and institutions in the Quebec City, Montreal and Sherbrooke areas.

—Integration of medical education into the general education system.

The report says Quebec ranks lowest among provinces and countries of similar economic stature in terms of hospital facilities available per capita and the degree to which these facilities are used.

Inefficiencies in the province's hospital system would push total costs to more than $2 billion a year by 1976, an amount the government could not afford. Quebec hospitals had been $334 million in debt at the end of 1967.

Radical measures, including evaluation procedures on professional competence, general efficiency of the hospital system and availability and accessibility of health care, are suggested to cut costs.

Postal

offers new hope for the future of collective bargaining.

The first real signs of agreement between the parties in the year-long struggle appeared Wednesday night, sources said.

Mr. O'Connor presented a proposal for settlement which was accepted by the union and which he believed would be accepted by the government.

The proposal was rejected at a cabinet meeting Thursday and a new set of government-designated recommendations was presented to the unions.

The unions rejected the new recommendations. With few alterations, the government then decided to accept the original O'Connor proposal, informants say.

Under terms of the contract, postal workers get a 28-cent-an-hour increase, retroactive to Oct. 1, 1968, and an additional 10 cents an hour retroactive to April 1 this year. The workers will get a lump-sum payment of $375.

A further 14 cents an hour raises effect Sept. 30 and the remaining 11 cents is added next March 29.

The mediation talks broke three deadlines—two of them set by Prime Minister Trudeau —as well as the government's strict-no-wage guideline proclaimed last June as a weapon against inflation.

Mr. Trudeau had set Monday as a deadline for reaching agreement but extended this to Tuesday as the talks continued.

Mr. O'Connor set last Sunday as his personal deadline.

The postal workers also received a formal letter from Postmaster-General Eric Kierans assuring them they will not be laid off because of advancing technology. The letter was attached to the contract.

Provisions for afternoon and night-shift workers were raised to 18 cents an hour from 15 cents and letter carriers now will be paid overtime on a daily, instead of weekly, basis.

In addition, the government now will pay a straight 50 per cent of each postal employee's medical care premiums. Formulas for employer contributions to the premiums has varied among provinces.

Postal workers must be given 48 hours notice of any shift change or be paid time and a half for the first eight hours after a change.

Delay Irks Hees

Post Office Settlement Welcomed in Belleville

Belleville postal workers are expected to vote in favor of this week's move to formally ratify last night's industrial dispute over post office disputes.

Harold Hees, president of the Letter Carriers Union Belleville branch, today anticipated no problems in speedy acceptance of the modified agreement reached in Ottawa.

Meantime, in Ottawa, George Hees, MP, Prince Edward-Hastings, castigated the government for "stubborn stupidity" by holding to its six-per-cent wage guideline and needlessly prolonging the dispute.

The government, he said, had been forced to "ignominiously" back down on its guideline policy.

Mr. Hees said as usual in Belleville today — a service that has been humidified six times during the long dispute. Postal workers staged five day-long walkouts and, in turn were laid off one day by the post office as unsuccessful negotiations dragged on.

Mr. Campbell said the settlement marked a victory ending a "long, hard year."

Mr. Hees has consistently had backed their negotiations throughout the deadlock and therefore expected no problems when the agreement was presented for ratification to the city's 68 letter carriers and inside postal workers.

"Strong acceptance is expected," he said.

Mr. Hees said the government had abandoned its six-per-cent guideline after a year of "needless delay."

The guideline, he said, had been made obsolete six months ago by other industrial settlements which have averaged nine per cent in wage increases.

"The stubborn stupidity of the government in trying to impose a guideline which here no relationship to reality, has cost the country many millions of dollars in lost postal revenue and will many times that amount in postal business which will be lost for all time to come," he said.

Many businesses intend to continue courier services which operated efficiently and at reasonable cost, during the succession of postal breakdowns, he said.

The government made itself look ridiculous by attempting to force an "obtuse-ly unfair" settlement on the postal workers, "finally having to back down ignominiously on the advice of the mediator," said Mr. Hees.

If the government takes as long a time to decide on measures to stimulate the economy from a present standstill, Canada's future will be headed for the highest levels this country has ever seen," said Mr. Hees.

Arena Tenders Opened, To Meet Again Today

Members of the city's recreation and arena committee were scheduled to meet at noon today to consider tenders received yesterday for Belleville's proposed new arena and skating rink.

Bids tenders were opened Thursday afternoon at city hall with one bid being received for the construction structure, along with individual quotations for seven of the 10 sub trades involved.

Carr-Braint Construction of Belleville submitted the only tender for the complete arena structure. The bid was for $280,900.

Sub trades on which no individual bids were received were site preparation, carpentry and painting.

Tenders were called on both the complete structure and on individual trades with the view to paring costs as much as possible.

Tenders will be checked by city engineer Wilbur Purcell before any recommendation goes to city council for approval.

Estimated damage to the McFarland vehicle was $2,500 while the truck driven by Mr. Vivide sustained, $4,000 damage to the collision.

Can Cottage Be Home?

WOOLER—(Staff) — Should a private home be built in a cottage subdivision?

This was one of the questions asked at Murray township council last night.

«Representation was made by Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Potts of Wilson Island on the Trent River in the upper portion of Murray township.

The Potts operate a marina on the island and wish to reside there on a year-round basis, in large part because the area is an active snow-go biking resort.

They have bought a lot in a cottage subdivision adjacent to their business for the purpose of building a permanent home.

The cottage development, built by Stirling Lumber, has Ontario Municipal Board approval for cottages only.

Angus Gunter, township treasurer reported that many people have bought cottages in the area wit hthe intention of talking up full-time residence.

Legal advice will be sought by Murray township before it decides on the Potts' request.

Loyalist Bus Service For Belleville, Trenton

Loyalist College will be served by regular bus runs from Trenton starting Sept. 14.

The service will be operated by Rathbun Bus Service Ltd., of Trenton.

Transportation will be provided to and from the campus Monday through Friday for day students, the college announced today. Several evening students will operate four evenings a week — Monday through Thursday.

The Belleville timetable provides for two bus runs—leaving the city bus terminal at 7.50 a.m. and 8.30 a.m. for day students and at 6 p.m. and 8.10 p.m. for evening students.

Belleville buses will proceed from the Dundas Street East terminal, along Pinnacle West Bridge and West Dundas Streets to Highway 2 and the Main stop will be the Four Corners while the buses will pick up passengers along the regular route.

The buses will connect with regular bus route schedules in Belleville.

The Trenton bus will leave Rathbun's Trenton terminal at 7.55 a.m. Monday through Friday and at 6.05 and 7.35 p.m. Monday through Thursday evenings, picking up passengers along Highway 2.

Return buses will run to both communities at the end of day and evening classes.

Round trip fares will be 30 cents in Belleville and $1 for the Trenton service.

All buses will be identified as servicing Loyalist College.

H. J. Bartlett, Loyalist liaison extension officer who worked out details of the new service with bus operator Grant Rathbun, said the move was a "big step forward", in bringing the college closer to the communities it serves.

"Our objective is to make Loyalist accessible to the largest number of students possible," he said.

Meanwhile, college officials reported they were also making evening bus service available on a trial basis from Picton and Campbellford via Brighton.

Israel

overcome, an apparent reference to Washington's corroboration of Israel's complaints that Egypt had violated the cease-fire.

Mrs. Meir advanced the date of her visit to the United States to the second half of this month amid indications she will discuss the Egyptian violations with President Nixon. Originally, she had planned to make the visit in October to observe the 25th anniversary celebrations of the United Nations.

Israeli political sources said Israel probably would suspend its participation in the peace talks pending clarification of what steps Washington intended to take to restore the ceasefire agreement.

Informed sources in Washington said the United States has asked Egypt not only to stop the reported violations but to restore in the ceasefire zone conditions which existed before the cease fire took effect.

Although it wants the missiles removed, the United States appears to be avoiding moves which could lead to a major confrontation with Cairo and Moscow, wreck the peace talks or shatter the fragile truce.

Mrs. Meir also denied that there had been a cabinet crisis, but observers said the cabinet made a secret decision Thursday which may mean a suspension of the negotiations in New York.

Reports of a crisis were sparked by Defence Minister Defence Minister Moshe Dayan and a majority of the cabinet over the cease fire violations and how to react to them.

Dayan said Thursday that he is not leaving the cabinet.

Dayan said he approved of a cabinet plan to give the United States time to get the missiles removed through diplomatic means. But he warned that Israel is capable of "taking military steps, if needed."

Israeli sources said their government would not mind, its peace talks delegate, Ambassador Yosef Tekoah, back in New York until it got satisfaction from the United States.

Egypt's influential national Hassanin Heykal, said today the Cairo government believes a political settlement in the Middle East is possible providing it takes into account all international, military and economic problems in the area.

Elsewhere in the Middle East:

King Hussein of Jordan sought to ease tension between his army and the Palestinian Arab guerrillas with a broadcast appealing for an end to extremism and for unity in the struggle against Israel.

Amman was quiet Thursday after nearly a week of clashes between the guerrillas and the army and an attempt to assassinate the king.

Scrap Yard Curbs In Murray Bylaw

WOOLER (Staff' — Control of scrap yards and salvage shops was the subject of considerable attention at Thursday's session of Murray township council.

Second reading was given to a bylaw for the licensing of such premises.

When approved, vendors of waste material will be required to pay a $20 annual fee to operate.

There are three large scrap dealers in the township now, one near the Murray township office.

Operators must locate their businesses at least 200 feet from the Queen's Highway and enclose them with an eight-foot high wall or fence, the proposed bylaw states.

Entrance and egress from those yards must be through gates finished in the same material as the fencing and must be kept closed when vehicles are not passing through them.

Another requisite of the bylaw is that owners of such establishments must be of sound character. Judgment of their character is to be made by the township fathers.

Infraction of the bylaw will be met by a potential $300 fine.

At present there is no county by - law concerning scrap and salvage companies, but Murray township council feels this is ineffective.

"It just is not being enforced," Edgar Gowler, township treasurer said.

Racking Up Business

Gerry O'Shaughnessy, proprietor of the Red Shark, a specialty clothing shop for men, hangs up some clothing articles in preparations for his first customers.

High Style Men's Store For All Ages

The building numbered 301½ Front Street is small in width and is decorated with a carved shark.

Tuesday the building will officially open its doors to the public under the name of The Red Shark. The store will sell young men's specialty clothing.

Inside the store is decorated in the tradition of an old sailing ship with an extensive amount of nautical items across the ceiling. Wooden grass-thing shield the lights in the ceiling.

Along the racks are a wide variety of men's specialty clothes for dress, sport andcasual wear. There are jackets, suits and leather garments.

The store is owned by Gerry O'Shaughnessy, a man who has been in men's specialty clothing for 20 years. This is the first store of his own.

The clothing in the store, Mr. O'Shaughnessy explained, is for the "new generation".

But the new generation does not stop at 21 of ages, at least as far as Mr. O'Shaughnessy is concerned.

"The kids of today are young ones of 45," he said. "Fashion is irrespective of age."

And he has designed his store and ordered his goods with that factor in mind. His inventory and dress sketches, he hopes, will be of all fashionable ages.

Mr. O'Shaughnessy's initial philosophical desire to open an establishment like the Red Shark was prompted by what he felt was a need for this type of store in Belleville.

The Red Shark derives its name from an idea by his son and the nautical design which pervades the building.

Joyceville Escapers Turn Themselves In

Two Quinte district men are back in custody today — after phoning Joyceville prison farm for rides back to the institution they fled Tuesday.

A companion of escapees, Douglas Clayton Whitney, 30, of Agincourt, is still at large. He is serving 10 years for robbery.

First phone calls to the prison came from Eugene Scott, 27, of Hybla, near Bancroft, who had been serving three years for burglary. Officials say Scott called prison authorities Thursday afternoon from a home less than two miles from Joyceville and asked for a ride back.

A few hours later Andrew Weldon, 42, of Bloomfield, surrendering eight years for manslaughter, called from a home a mile outside the prison.

Mrs. Preston Woods, a Joyceville area housewife, said Scott came to the door of her farm home and told her: "I'm going in to give myself up. I've had enough".

She and her husband invited him in and fed him fried eggs and potatoes while she called the prison.

Mrs. Woods recalled: "He kept watching the Joyceville prison authorities while he ate, and when they arrived he hurried in and got in the car and left his dessert".

Location of both men near the prison farm ended extra police citations for one Quinte community.

Wednesday night provincial police raided in Stirling after a woman reported seeing three men in a field at the north end of the village. No trace of the men was found, but police continued surveillance in the area yesterday.

McGill Students Sketching Here

Buildings and landscape scenes in the city and immediate district are to receive close scrutiny for the next few days from a party of architectural students from McGill University.

Approximately 75 of the Montreal university students will be in the city for the next two weeks as part of a field study course.

During their stay, the students will sketch buildings and landscapes using charcoals, crayons, watercolors or whatever. The group is in charge of Professor Stewart Wilson and Geraldine Trodden, one of the class instructors.

Thursday evening, Alderman Gerald Joyce, on behalf of Mayor J. Russell Scott, welcomed the group to the city in a brief ceremony at city hall. Professor Wilson and Mr. Tondino were presented with honorary citizenship papers. There was also a presentation of Nick Mika's book "Mosaic of Belleville" which will be placed in the McGill University Blackadder Library.

Students from the architectural class at McGill take similar field study trips each year but previously have been going to Ottawa and Kingston.

Asked by Alderman Joyce why Belleville was chosen this year, Professor Wilson said the decision for the change of venue had been his.

He said he felt the change from Ottawa and Kingston "would be interesting."

He received his training at Regina and Rockcliffe.

Uncomplicated Youth!

A Peterborough Examiner article reprinted on this page throws light on some of the problems of young people today and how authorities in that city are tackling them.

The same issue of the newspaper contains a report of a teenage gathering — the Kawartha Dance Marathon — which attracted 2,500 young people and evidently went off without a hitch. The girls looked their comely best and the boys, more casually dressed perhaps, were all on their best behavior.

As the report read: "The bands were good, the crowd was happy . . ." A reading of the musical offerings, however, reminds us somewhat of the generation gap, but anyway here it is: "Cobourg promoter Dave Tredee, 24 (sort of old, we should say!), had predicted his audience well and presented a well-balanced show ranging through heavy blues, hard rock, soft commercial rock and a touch of funk" (what's that?).

"Although billed as a dance marathon," the report went on, "dancing didn't really get underway until halfway through the night as most were content to crowd in front of the two stages or simply mill around and meet their friends."

All in all, as youth activities go, it was pretty square. There is a picture, incidentally, of the five-man centre called Project Youth at Keith Wightman school and several youth boards are going, presided over by some of the most clean-cut looking youngsters you could hope to find anywhere. Around them other young people look on.

We need some ideas for future drop-in centres in Belleville, and there are some good ones embodied in the account of what is being done in Peterborough.

Sport Not Enough

It seems abundantly clear in these days of involvement — good and bad — of pot, rock, long hair, violence, campus unrest, participatory democracy and all the rest of it, that sport is more and more taking a back seat as a counterbalance to school and studies and the mental grind generally.

In Ottawa recently Samuel Escobar, a Peruvian who is the Latin American travelling secretary of the International Fellowship of Evangelical Students, urged more participation and middle-class society for not providing for the physical vitality of young people. . . "and may I say, he added, "sports are not enough."

Mr. Escobar, 35, said sometimes a rioting mob where youth can "physically explode" and as it were find release, is the only community the young can find.

Well, let us say, Mr. Escobar could be right, although why young people find such pleasure in anarchy, risking their lives in the process, is beyond most of us. They might ponder these words of Irish author St. John Ervine penned more than two decades ago: "All changes for the better are made, first, in the minds of individuals. A case could, I think, be made for the belief that all changes for the worse start in the mind of the man who made. Is a weak and brainless thing, subject to panic and emotion, and easily dominated by empty eloquence."

How true those words are in terms of politics today. But to get back to the decline in sport and exercise as a panacea for release of tension, and a change in pace generally, this can have its comic overtones.

Consider the realm of sex. Cecil Jennings notes in The Globe and Mail that English actor Seymour Hicks touched on this subject — and on exercise — in a book of reminiscences published in 1922.

Wrote Hicks: "A famous doctor once told me that the only way a young man can defeat the clamor of his body for contact with the opposite sex is by constant and even violent exercise. Therefore devote certain hours or every day to gymnastics, boxing other than which might do is "put up a punch-ball in your bedroom."

Observes writer Jennings: "Unfortunately there are those for whom games simply will not be enough. . .." In this regard he and Mr. Escobar of Peru see eye to eye.

There is confirmation of this trend in the problems of some of our young people in Belleville. Some who are uninterested in sport say there are not enough outlets for the artistically or creatively-inclined. To this we would say that an interest and active participation in sport, and a bent for things artistic or creative, are by no means incompatible.

Calm as Students Return

Breakthrough in Fight to End School Segregation

WASHINGTON (CP) — The outward calm that accompanied the sweeping assault on the pillars of segregation in the school year opened throughout the United States South conveys a sense of victory that many observers consider premature.

Nevertheless, many of the facts and figures are impressive.

About 280,000 Negro children spent their first day in school with white classmates Monday as more than 200 southern school districts finally complied with federal court orders to desegregate.

The demonstration, 16 years after the U.S. Supreme Court's famed ruling against school segregation was hailed by the Nixon administration as a final breakthrough in the long battle.

Others, happily conceding the big battle was won, were not so sure that the war was over.

For a basic many of the southern schools that now are "integrated" have more token than real integration. In case after case the school population is 80 per cent or more white or black.

Additionally, while integration was fairly widespread in rural areas with white patrolmen, there was far less actual integration in predominantly Negro districts or in large urban areas where private, white-only schools have sprung up in recent years.

Thus in many cases the overall figures are deceptive.

Adding to the confusion that clouded the opening of the new school season was the announcement by the Supreme Court that it will commence Oct. 12 a showdown hearing on whether southern school officials must move children by bus out of their neighborhoods and take other steps to overcome years of state-enforced racial segregation.

The court, possibly in response to widespread criticism of the fact it went off on a long summer vacation without tackling a variety of segregation cases before it, suddenly announced Monday it would make a broad test of such measures the first order of business when it reconvenes.

Among the issues to be the subject of oral argument on the first working day of the new court are those covering a broad range of school desegregation questions.

They include the extent to which the U.S. Constitution requires busing and other measures to achieve racial balance where it does not exist by the predominantly white or black housing areas.

This will finally draw the court into the argument that had occupied the two sides of the segregation issue of late. That is, whether de facto segregation—by virtue of housing patterns, which occur in the U.S. North as well as the South —isn't just as offensive and unconstitutional as is de jure—by state law—segregation.

Many southern liberals suggest that, from a child's point of view, one is just as obnoxious as the other and that the law should cover both forms of segregation wherever they occur. Others argue that extending the law equally over North and South would make it so thin that it would not be effective anywhere.

Still, although much remains to be done to clarify such issues, there is a real sense of accomplishment in the absence of violence and quiet at Monday's reopening of schools in the South.

"What do you mean you haven't been receiving my post cards? I told you to write if you had any problems with the mail!"

Peterborough Tackles Youth Needs

Deanna Kaufman in the Peterborough Examiner

In the summer of 1969 Peterborough entered the world.

For the first time residents were confronted with the sight of long-haired young people dressed in faded blue jeans and T-shirts gathered on the downtown mall.

For the first time citizens began to think seriously of drugs in conjunction with their own teenagers—not parties replaced beer blasts in the minds of adults.

Peterborough, though isolated in the lakes and forests, no longer had to look to Toronto to read about the new sins of the young; they had suddenly burst upon the city.

So had they? Was the notoriety of the young who gather on the mall something new, or was this just an indication of a city that had seemingly little to offer its young people?

A director of one of the first organizations to respond to the needs of the city's youth thinks the problems existed before but that it was only in summer 1969 that Peterborough started to pay attention.

Although youths had been gathering in the parks before and a drug problem had been previously recognized, it was only last summer that the residents realized what was happening, said William Prest, executive director of the YMCA.

The question of why persons in their teens and early 20s are acting differently from the previous generation or even their older brothers and sisters, was considered by Rev. L. D. Snell, minister of George St. United Church and chairman of the management committee for Hard Quarters House, one of the special programs now under operation.

Mr. Snell proposed no definite answers but offered several theories as to why young people today seem more restless and unsure of themselves.

There is not much work for young people to do in terms of jobs, not even around the house, he said. Teenagers are not taught to think for themselves. Previous generations did not question what they were told but accepted what their elders said as truth.

Perhaps most important of all he said, young people today are part of the "unneeded generation."

"There is no compelling reason for teenagers to settle down; they don't feel needed. The work force can well do without them" he said.

Another problem for the young is the amount of time they are kept in school, Mr. Snell said.

"When you keep people in school for so long it seems like keeping plants in a hothouse too long. There is a point when maturity is reached and they should be out on their own, gaining experience in the real world with jobs and travel."

Peterborough had one drop-in centre operating last summer in the south part of the city at Kenner Collegiate and Vocational Institute. Other programs were non - existent besides the usual recreation programs and occasional dances. Entertainment remained largely one of hanging out in parks and at favorite stores that stayed open late.

Since the need in Peterborough was obviously greatest, it remained for the service organizations to recognize its existence and try to establish programs and better programs.

One of the first organizations to step in was the YMCA. Because it was natural for the youths who had gathered in Confederation Park during the summer to move across the street to the YMCA's youth centre when cold weather began, the Y had to decide what course it would take.

The Y had to make a decision if it were going to face the problem, or if it would shut its doors on a community need, Mr. Prest said.

The YMCA board of directors met and decided to open doors of the Y to the students and the drop-in centre was begun. Two rooms in the building were renovated with the help of the Rotary Club.

The drop - in centre operated throughout the winter months and when weather took participants outside to the parks and beaches, the drop-in centre staff followed to function as detached workers.

Also operating throughout the winter was a drop-in centre in the south part of Peterborough. Following the summer drop - in centre, Kenner CVI, the location was changed to Keith Wightman School where it still operates as Project Youth.

While the two centres gave young people a place to meet during the winter, the community agencies in Peterborough began to consider the need of programs in the city and looked forward to the summer of 1970 to see what should be done.

Girl Falsely Accused Of Theft in Store

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

Concerning our teenagers, as mother of a girl whom I am thankful to say has caused me or no one else any problems. I thank her over and over for being honest and trustworthy.

It burned me up when I heard of an episode which happened on Tuesday morning in a local chain store downtown. A woman customer accused my girl of stealing (which she has never done) and my daughter informed a clerk she did not steal it.

The manager believed my girl and nothing further came of it, but if I had to accuse someone of stealing when I couldn't prove it; I would certainly have apologized. As it was, I was called home from work to settle a case of near-hysteria.

If someone like that woman has nothing better to do than hate our teenagers, how can our kids grow into good citizens.

I say give our teenagers a chance instead of being so ready to condemn them.

Worst Drought in Memory

From The Times of London

CAPETOWN — The South African Army has been called in to help fight what agricultural leaders and economists regard to be the country's worst drought in memory.

The drought, which in some areas of Cape Province dates from 1962, is estimated to have cost South Africa at least $125-million to date in stock losses, subsidies for farmers and relief projects.

Farmers in some parts of the Cape are boarding up their farmhouses and leaving their stock to perish because they can no longer afford to buy fodder for them.

Official figures show that the worst affected area in the country has dropped in the past few years from 125,000 to 92,000.

Areas that have been declared drought stricken are in the districts of South-West Africa 106 of the Cape's 115 farming districts, most of the Orange Free State and parts of Natal.

The decision to call in the army follows an emergency meeting of farmers' unions and no figures are yet available on what the operation is likely to cost.

An army spokesman said troops would co-operate with South African railways officers in transporting supplies of fodder and roughage from all available sources to the worst hit areas.

Fodder is at a premium and the Government will have to subsidize farmers in outlying areas who can no longer afford fuel for their vehicles, let alone feed their animals.

No one knows how many of, for instance, South Africa's 28 million sheep have died in the drought, but economists say the lack of rain is having a worse number of farmers in the country has dropped in the past few years from 125,000 to 92,000).

Women's Lib and All That

Ottawa Journal

Getting out in the work force may be fine for the Friedans and Abzugs who work high up in the hierarchy of business works, or for the small percentage (of men and women) who have the training and ability to "make it" in their chosen field.

But does Women's Lib think it can hide from the girls the cold facts of what working means to most women: that a federal Labor Department report notes that four-fifths of the women in the Public Service are clerical workers, and that in 1966 only one-half of one per cent of all female public servants earned $10,000 a year or more?

And can it hide the fact that in the Soviet Union, where women have been "free" for more that 50 years, 95 per cent of all cleaners, sewage workers 80 per cent of the truck drivers are women?

Try to convince a contented housewife that a factory or a typewriter stool is more exciting than cooking, baking and so may, if she really gets her dander up, even refer to the words of Lib's Women's Lib archenemy, Dr. Edgar F. Berman, who said recently of the "new" woman:

"This spectre of a woman dominating as a Marine Corps sergeant . . . and about as direct as your automobile mechanic, is the enticement to destruction. This frenetic type of life, competing with men, is attractive to some women, but its sequelae do not bode Utopia . . . This is small oversight, the liberationists forget the term 'happiness' in their compunctions and goals."

It's hell for women in the kitchen all the time; but it's a bit of hell for them in the office and nothing further came of it, but if I had to accuse someone of stealing when I couldn't prove it; I would certainly have apologized. As it was, I was called home from work to settle a case of near-hysteria.

If someone like that woman has nothing better to do than hate our teenagers, how can our kids grow into good citizens.

Controversy Plagues Stanfield's Holiday

CAMROSE, Alta. (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said Thursday his 16-day tour of Alberta was conceived as a Canadian holiday which would be free from controversy.

But controversy has plagued the Progressive Conservative leader since a meeting last week in Saskatoon of several of the party's western MPs and supporters.

While the meeting was secret, published reports based on what were termed as overheard through closed doors said Mr. Stanfield's leadership was criticized and other reports indicated he had been asked to resign to allow the party to beat the Liberals in the next federal election.

Since publication of the reports, most of the MPs who attended have vigorously denied such strong stands were taken, while admitting there was concern within the party about its —and Mr. Stanfield's—image in Western Canada.

Mr. Stanfield has brushed aside any threat to his leadership as nonsense.

At a news conference, Mr. Stanfield said he was unhappy with the image of the party in the west.

Mr. Stanfield said there was no one solution to the problem and "it's no secret I haven't been satisfied with the impact we've been able to make in communicating and we've been working on this."

Mr. Stanfield said he was concerned that the Saskatoon meeting was not strictly confined to Western MPs. That, he said, would have made it a regional caucus meeting but being held the way it was made it easy for the media "to dig up a certain amount of speculation."

"And this ought to be avoided in a political party."

The Conservative leader said he does not see any split in the party and there always will be a certain lack of unanimity in many areas.

Mini Still Outselling Midi in Large Department Stores

TORONTO (CP) — The mini is still outselling midi and maxi fashions at Toronto's two largest department stores, buyers said Thursday.

Jamie Burton, at Simpsons said he won't stock midis until his customers get the store's youth-oriented Elevation 3 department, want them.

"I won't buy what my customers don't want, or I shouldn't be in business," he said.

"Midi dresses with vents have been coming along but that's the middle part of getting into the midi, that's not the same as having nothing but legs showing beneath a long skirt.

About 70 per cent of his section's costs are midi-length—an established trend — "But in dresses and skirts I would say 10 per cent midi, no more."

* * *

It's a slightly different story in The Room — the highest-priced clothing section in the store — said vice-president E. G. Burton.

"At The Room level there isn't anything but long and it's going very well," he said, adding that older people are now leading the way in fashion.

But he admitted the mini is still outselling longer lengths two-to-one when all departments are considered.

John Williams, head of all women's fashion departments at Eatons, said the situation is the same there.

Calf-Length Midis Shown In Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The accent was on calf-length midis at the official launching Wednesday of the federally-sponsored fashion slide show to promote Canadian products.

Midi dresses got the lesser share of the spotlight, although there were some in evidence in the slides projected on a screen at the Fashion Canada premiere. Midi coats were also much in evidence along with midi dresses. The lounge wear was maxi.

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin introduced the show for the benefit of the 150 manufacturers, reporters, and government officials gathered at the federal conference centre near the Parliament Buildings.

Mr. Pepin said the government is promoting the fashion industry because it not only employs 150,000 persons, but also brought in more than $2 billion in exports last year.

The aim of Fashion Canada is to get people to buy Canadian. All the products presented by it have been manufactured and designed in Canada.

The color slides show 124 fashion products that were selected by an eight-member committee from products sent in by manufacturers.

Two fully-automated projectors are used with an effective fade-in technique to cut out any pause between slides. The fashions are alternately described in French and English to a musical background. Action poses of the models help to give a sense of movement.

The slides now will be distributed to National Film Board offices across the country for showing to women's groups, service clubs, and other fashion-oriented groups. Canada's trade commissioners in the United States and abroad will also be provided with projectors and slides.

A distinctive black and gold Fashion Canada tag will hang on all fashions approved by Fashion Canada's evaluation committee. Top quality and workmanship were the necessary criteria for acceptance of articles.

The majority of those who attended the premiere were dressed conservatively and didn't seem too fashion-conscious but that was probably because most of them were government officials. A Montreal manufacturer, Harold Williams, looked like a peacock among the pigeons in his flamboyant red jacket, striped pants, black shirt and white satin bowtie.

Lissa Taylor, who heads the Fashion Canada program, projected a "Roaring 20's" look in her black midi dress with contrasting white collar and cuffs and her white cloche hat decked with a "choux". A cloche is a close-fitting bell-shaped hat and a choux is a flower shaped like a cabbage.

Many Families Spend Vacation on Farm

SYDENHAM, Ont. (CP) People who spend their vacations on a farm are looking for a lot of things—for quiet, clean air, a starry evening, vegetables fresh from the garden.

Mart Ann Segal of Toronto decided to try it when her six-year-old daughter Pia asked: "What's a calf?"

Hardy and Lillian Presler have been welcoming as many as 30 guests a summer into their farm home here, about 20 miles from Kingston. They charge $50 a week for adults, $30 for children.

Mrs. Presler says: "You're not going to make a living out of it. I think the money-value is low compared with the relationships and friends we make."

Their guests sleep in five bedrooms in the 19th century stone house with braided rugs on the floors and patchwork quilts on the beds. Six-year-old Pia Segal got up at 6:30 to "help" Mr. Presler take the cows out to the pasture. She saw pigs and ducks in the barn and fed the Presslars' pet rabbit. Everyone eats breakfast at 8 a.m.

People relax or sketch, they go swimming, sightseeing or sit on the porch and chat.

"You set the pace yourself," Mrs. Presler says.

The Preslars' daughters have acted as guides on local tours and shopping trips.

A guest has given the Preslars a painting of the farm. A Montreal couple invited the Preslar girls to stay with them and see the city. A New York family sent a wedding present to the oldest girl.

Mrs. Presler says they started taking guests after they had read some magazine articles on the subject and decided they might enjoy it.

Their farm is listed in a booklet published by the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and in a United States booklet.

Mrs. Presler says: "We're getting a very fine calibre of people. We've never had anything but one magazine with Mr. Trudeau's picture in it."

Successful Living

Elderly Mother Cause of Problems in Home

By DORIS CLARK

DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: My old mother lives with us. Our two children are married and away. We thought we were going to be free for a while and now wake up to the fact that we could have years of "baby sitting" ahead of us. We offered mother our home when she was more her old self, self-reliant and much more "on the ball".

She was always a good conversationalist but I we try to discuss any subject with her we 'end up baffled by her replies. If I go out with my husband for an hour or two she won't each the lunch I leave her. Because she is my mother I just can't push her around.

It was a real victory for me when I sat down and had a cup of tea in the afternoon. She doesn't approve, and shows it with a tight little smile. She was a good mother to us but she must have ruled us for years by fear of disapproval because I can't stand it yet. — What Is Right?

Dear What: Old habits die hard, and your mother's aging brain cannot take in the fact that you are now in the driver's seat. Since she is also acting the child, you had better assume your leadership more firmly. It may surprise you when she relaxes into a less struggling dependence. In one of her more...lucid moments, point out your right and need to go out with your husband from time to time. Deep down, she will know that this is fair.

Dear Doris: I'm a victim of muscular dystrophy, which I have had for 17 years now. My doctor has never fully explained this disease to me, and now I haven't seen him for a number of years to talk him about it.

Could you tell me how it will react on a person? I have felt my muscles seeming slowly to deteriorate, although I can still walk and use my arms and hands. To what extremes does it go? Will a person get completely helpless? Will the mind be affected? — Concerned.

Dear Concerned: The muscular dystrophies are a group of diseases characterized by a wasting away of muscles and loss of strength. In many cases the cause is not known.

For your peace of mind you need to understand what is happening to you and such knowledge would help you to handle the symptoms of your trouble. In all likelihood your doctor does not realize how much he has told you.

My advice is to pay a special visit to him now. Let him examine you again, discover how far the disease has progressed, and suggest the latest in treatment procedures. Ask him to explain it all to you.

• • •

Dear Doris: I met this guy Jack, when I was away on holidays at Christmas. He said he loved me but I told him I wasn't ready for love. P.S. we never did anything wrong.

Lately I've been seeing a lot of Bill and right now I like him very much. My dad is dead set against him because he has a bad reputation with girls. He has never tried anything with me.

Now Jack wants to come here and take me to a dance. I keep thinking maybe if I could see him again I'd know which one I liked best.

You see, I spend my "sleep hours" pondering over this. I sound like a 13 - year - old but I need advice.

I'm going to talk to my dad about Bill, as soon as I get up the courage (I'm scared of him). If I can get my dad to trust us. I think I'd want Bill for my escort. — Mixed Up.

Dear Mixed Up: If Jack comes 1300 miles to see you this fall, you can be he's pretty interested. It is only fair to level with him before he sets sail. It won't surprise him too much that you have been going out with someone else.

Meanwhile you'd better be honest with your parents about Bill. When there's smoke there's fire, and if he has a bad reputation some of it will "rub off" on you, one way or another.

(When writing in, allow Doris four weeks for private reply, which will be sent if a six - cent - stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.)

Kitchen Tested Recipes

A Variety of Delicious Tarts

By MARY MOORE

This is a readers' column with a difference.

Because I do my own baking I do not know just what the commercial bakeries and bakery chains are featuring. But the news leaks through to me by way of the requests in your letters.

Recently I have received a rash of requests for tarts with a cake-like filling, the kind called them Swiss Tarts; another Almond Rice Cakes. I dutifully sent out copies of this butter-filled tart but decided to test a new improved edition.

I was alone on a hot summer evening when they came from the oven. My next door neighbor was building a new back porch as since I needed a taster I took a plateful over to him. He ate three on the spot.

Tart experts will remember my General Brock High School Butter Tarts. These are equally good and more of a novelty. This is another recipe that I hope every member of this audience will make.

ALMOND BUTTER TARTS (sometimes called Swiss)

Pastry:

1¼ cups unsifted all - purpose flour
¼ tsp. salt
¼ cup shortening
2 tbsps. butter
2 to 2½ tbsps. cold water

Filling:

RASPBERRY or STRAWBERRY JAM (see below)
¼ cup butter
¼ cup sugar
2 eggs
½ tsp. almond extract
3 tbsps. ground rice (buy at supermarket)
½ tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
½ cup finely chopped blanched or unblanched almonds (perfectly buzzed in blender)

To make Pastry: cut shortening and butter into flour and salt until size of peas. Drizzle in water, tossing with fork. Press between palms into ball. Roll out on floured board to ⅛" thickness. Cut out with 2¾" cutter and line 24 2" tart or muffin tins.

To fill, into each spoon ½ - ¾ tsp. red jam—not too much.

To make Filling: In bowl cream butter and sugar until light. Beat in eggs and remaining ingredients. Apportion evenly into pastry-lined tart tins. This amount filled exactly 24. They were nearly full but do not worry. They do not overflow.

Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 10 min. Perfect.

Sterilized Husband Poses A Problem

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I thought I was strong enough to handle any problem that came my way but I was wrong. Please help me before I lose my mind.

My youngest child is eight. After he was born, my husband had an operation so we wouldn't have any more children. To make a long story short, I am six months pregnant. My mother-in-law insists the child is not my husband's. I KNOW this is utterly impossible. My doctor has told me this is a rare occurrence, but it has happened before. My husband

ANN LANDERS was upset, as you can imagine, but he accepted the doctor's explanation and we never discuss it.

The real problem is my mother-in-law. Whenever she gets her son alone she fills him up and starts new trouble. She tells him he is a big fool that I most certainly have a lover somewhere and he should not let me get away with it. She keeps repeating, "If the operation came undone why didn't your wife get pregnant before?" This is, of course, a hard question to answer.

I love my husband very much, and he loves me, but our marriage is becoming shaky because of these recurring doubts.

Surely, Ann, this has happened to other couples. Please check with your consultants and print something to help me. — FAITHFUL IN IDAHO.

DEAR FAITHFUL: If the spermatic cord were severed, a pregnancy could not possibly result. If the cords were tied, however, the tying might have come undone and conception could have occurred. As to why you did not become pregnant before, there are at least a dozen reasons — all valid. Your doctor can answer this question.

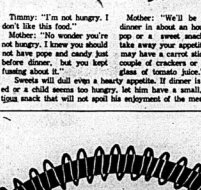
Aside from the medical aspects, there's a personal problem here which must be regarded as interference.

Your husband should be told promptly that he has accepted the doctor's word and not bring up the subject again.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a girl, 17, who needs your help.

Yesterday Mom was supposed to pick me up downtown. I waited for 30 minutes and she didn't come, so I took the bus. When I got home Mom was like a raving maniac. She screamed for an hour—"Where were you? Why weren't you where you were supposed to be? I rode around till I was dizzy. You're an idiot. From now on, get home on your own."



When I didn't answer her, she picked up my transistor radio and threw it against the wall.

The transistor fell apart but it still works. I had to tape it and glue it and use rubber bands to keep it together. I know it won't last long and I'll have to get it fixed or buy a new one. My mother says she will not pay for it because I made her mad and therefore it is my fault. I have a small savings account but I don't want to take anything out. What do you suggest? — POOR RECEPTION.

DEAR P.R.: The best solution, of course, is for your mother to do something about her temper. People who break things (especially things that don't belong to them) need some looking into. In the meantime, your mother should buy you a new transistor and apologize for having busted the old one.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Timmy: "I'm not hungry. I don't like this food."

Mother: "No wonder you're not hungry. I knew you should not have pope and candy just before dinner, but you kept fussing about it."

Sweets will dull even a hearty appetite. If dinner is delayed or a child seems too hungry, let him have a small, nutritious snack that will not spoil his enjoyment of the meal.

Quevec Elms Beat Beetle

OTTAWA (CP) — A new strain of elm tree, nursed along for 13 years by federal scientists, could eventually replace the stately American elms being decimated throughout North America by Dutch elm beetles.

The new strain, known as Quebec elm from its origins at l'Assomption, north of Montreal, resists the blight that eventually will wipe out the American elm.

A. B. Buckley, chief of horticulture at the Ottawa experimental farm, says the Quebec elm could be on the commercial market within a year.

Plant scientist C. E. Ouillet, who was in on the only development at l'Assomption experimental station and now works in Ottawa, says a posible danger is that the new strain's present immunity could break down in time.

One drawback, which the scientists believe can be cured, is the slow-growing quality of the new tree. It grows at about half the pace of the American elm's 15 feet in six years.

The strain was started from seeds and cuttings off hardy elms flourishing among slumps of dying trees.

They were bombarded with x-rays and produced mutations—offsprings with different cell structures—some of which were resistant to Dutch elm disease. The present Quebec elm emerged virtually immune to the disease.

Mr. Buckley believes new generations of the tree will grow faster and taller.

Trudeau Opposes Rivalry

BAIE-COMEAU, Que. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau Thursday attacked the persons in Canada who can conceive of federal-provincial relations only as a perpetual battle between the two levels of government.

Speaking to about 5,000 persons in this north-shore St. Lawrence River community, the prime minister denounced what he called "the Quebec sport in which there is too great a tendency to see nothing but a battle, not only between political parties but also between different capitals and political options."

Bail Bill Supported By Turner

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner met with a dozen top Canadian police leaders : re Thursday night to promote the federal government's new bail reform bill.

The policemen are attending the week-long annual convention of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police.

The bail reform bill was introduced just before the end of the last session of Parliament and will be dealt with at the next session.

Under the bill, policemen will have to make a decision on the street on whether to lock up a person for an offence or issue him an order to appear in court at a certain date.

The majority of chiefs at the convention have said privately they oppose much of the new legislation but that they agree with its intent.

Mr. Turner, a justice department spokesman said, will be urging more training for policemen on beats.

The chiefs apparently feel too much responsibility would be left with the officer making the arrest.

Following the meeting, Mr. Turner said there has been an excessive abuse of powers of arrest by Canadian policemen.

"When in doubt, arrest" is the motto of some policemen, he said.

"I think, after visiting the United Kingdom and the United States, that with this new legislation we will have the most progressive legislation in the Anglo-speaking world."

Football Fans Mourn Loss of All-time Great Coach

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nation of football fans, led by No. 1 fan President Nixon, mourned today the death of Vince Lombardi, the Washington Redskins coach considered by many the best the game had to offer.

The body of the 57-year-old Lombardi, who died Thursday, was to lie in a funeral home in the nation's capital for one day before being sent to New York, the city in which he was born.

Mass will be said in St. Patrick's Cathedral Monday by Terence Cardinal Cooke, Archbishop of New York. Burial will be at Mount Olivet, a cemetery in Middletown Township, near Red Bank, N.J.

President Nixon said Lombardi was tops in his field "because he was able to help others discover the best that was in themselves."

"Like the power sweep which the game has traditionalized, the powerful Vince Lombardi's personality swept the world of sports and made a lasting impact on the life of all it touched."

The Washington coach and executive vice-president died Thursday morning in Georgetown University Hospital after a two-month fight with cancer.

He entered the hospital June 30 and underwent an operation two days later in which doctors removed a tumor and a two-foot length of colon. He was readmitted for another operation a month later.

It was not until Wednesday, however, that the family publicly Lombardi suffered from "an extraordinarily virulent form of cancer."

He leaves the widow, a son, Vincent of St. Paul, Minn.; a daughter, his parents, two brothers, and a sister.

Lombardi became such a legendary, larger-than-life figure on the U.S. scene during the pro football boom of the 1960s that it's often forgotten he didn't achieve success until late in life.

He was an obscure assistant coach at age 45 and well-known only in football circles when Green Bay Packers signed him Jan. 28, 1959, to a five-year contract as head coach and general manager.

In the next decade, he reached such heights he was compared with such pro football coaching giants as George Halas and Paul Brown.

He took the Packers from a 1-10-1 record into contention his first season and, from then on, the Packers never finished below second-capturing six Western Division and five world championships, including an unprecedented three in a row from 1965-1967, and the first two AFL-NFL world championships in 1966-1967.

After a one-year retirement, he came to Washington last year and produced a 7-5-2 record during his first season, the first winning mark for the Redskins since 1955.

High Winds at CORK

The start of the Dragon class at CORK (Canadian Olympic Regatta Kingston) had to be held up an hour due to a weather front moving through Kingston causing winds to exceed 30 mph before the finish of yesterday's fourth day of racing. Here a group of dragons tack to the mark of the last leg of their race in high winds and heavy seas.

American Boats Make Shambles Of Kingston Yacht Races

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — American boats had sailed away with the championships in all but three of the 11 classes at the Canadian Olympic-training Regatta Kingston after Thursday's heats.

Although all classes were racing today, eight American yachts were unbeatable in their classes and United States entries had a good chance of taking top positions over-all in the other three events.

Only the two top Britons, Peter Bateman in the Fireball and Reg White in the Tornado catamarans, were in position to stop the American armada from making a clean sweep.

In the only other class where the top spot remained undecided, the O.K. Dinghy event, it was an all-American fight in the final race of the six-race series.

Otherwise, interest was centred on the continuing struggle for second and third positions in the over-all standings.

Bateman and White took advantage of heavier weather Thursday to regain sole possession of first place in their respective classes. Both have complained about unpredictable winds sweeping the courses on Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River.

Dennis Posey was the main threat for overall supremacy to White, 33, a six-time winner of Canadian championships.

Bateman won in a breeze over his nearest competitor, O. R. Rodgers, 18, of Tampa, Fla., in the fifth race.

Martin Herbert, 18, of Calgary and George McKim of Wilmington, N.C., were neck-and-neck in third position over-all with John Winsor of Vancouver less than one point behind.

In the O.K. Dinghy class, Craig Thomas of Bellevue, Wash., came back from a non-finish the previous day to win Thursday's heat.

Carl Van Duyne, 34, of Annapolis, Md., had the Canadian Open championship in the Finn class sewn up after Thursday's race. Thursday he sailed third after winning four straight.

Henry Sprague, 34, of Newport Beach, Calif., runner-up in the world Finn championship in Portugal early last month, had the No. 2 position over-all after winning Thursday's race.

Wind was fourth over-all and Phelan fifth going into the final heat, with 11 points separating them.

Norman Freeman, a 30-year-old lawyer from Ithaca, N.Y., was the new Canadian-American open champion in the Flying Dutchman class after Thursday's heat.

The Canadian open championship for Solings went to Bud Melges, 40, of Zenda, Wis. He won five straight races.

That left two Canadians, Hans Fogh of Toronto, and Dave Miller of Vancouver, in line for the runner-up spot, although Steve Robinson of Chicago also was well-placed.

Fogh was third and Miller fifth in Thursday's race. Alex Holt, 25, of Seattle, was going home with the Canadian open championship in the Star class.

He marked up his fourth straight victory Thursday as the wind gusted to 30 and 25 knots from about 15.

Bruce Goldsmith of Chicago sailed away with the Canadian-American open championship in the Lightnings. He too had four straight wins.

Augustin Diaz, a 16-year-old high school student from Miami, Fla., was the new North American open snipe champion after winning his fourth straight race. He sailed third in the first race of the series.

Terry Timm of Ann Arbor, Mich., was favored to be No. 1 over-all after the final rpas but has faced stiff competition from Argyle Campbell of Coronadel, Md., and Bent Poulsen of Oakville, Ont.

Poulsen was certain to represent Canada in the Snipes at the Pan-Am Games at Lake Call, Colombia, in 1971. The top Canadian at CORK goes to Colombia.

G. S. Friedrichs Jr., of New Orleans, who came to CORK because he wanted to sail against "hot-shot" Arthur Henry of Mercer Island, Wash., gave up only one of the first five races to Henry and took the North American open championship in the Dragons.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League traded two players to Toronto Maple Leafs to acquire veteran forward Bob Pulford on Thursday and now must convince him to continue playing. At Toronto, Pulford, 34, said: "Right now, I don't know whether I will play any more hockey." He's scheduled to be in Los Angeles today for meetings with president Jack Kent Cooke and general-manager-coach Larry Reagon of the Kings. The Kings sent 23-year-old forwards Garry Monahan and Brian Murphy to Toronto in the exchange which Maple Leafs general manager Jim Gregory said would not be conditional on Pulford's reporting to Los Angeles. Cooke said: "Pulford is the kind of player we've been dreaming about getting and not feeling too optimistic about our chances." Reagan added:

Cowan Second In U.S. Amateur

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tom Kite Jr. took a three-strokes lead in the second round of the U.S. Amateur golf championship Thursday with a three-under-par 67 for a 36-hole total of 136.

Defending champion Steve Melnyk of Jacksonville, Fla., shot a 68 and 1966 champ Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., shot a 70 for a second-place tie at 139.

First-round leader Larry Wadkins of Richmond, Va., fell back to tie at two with fourth consecutive three-over-par 73 on the rain-soaked 6,496-yard Waverley Country Club course here.

Cowan said his putting wasn't consistent.

"I didn't get too many putts today. It was wet out there. It rained and things were pretty tough."

He said this year's U.S. amateur had a strong field, giving credit to the younger golfers who are coming along each year.

The 21-year-old insurance agent said the fairways are not conducive to long drives and he's been using his three-wood "trying to keep the ball in play."

The field of 150 was cut to 61 for today's third round with those making 148 or better beating the cut.

Tournament officials had been ready to set the cutoff at 149 when late-starting Wayne McDonald of Oakville, Ont., twice a member of the U.S. all-American college golf team while at the University of Indiana, came charging through with a 148.

McDonald, who carded a 78 in Wednesday's opening round, came in with a 70 on the strength of a spectacular wedge shot on the 18th that landed six inches from the hole.

His 148 closed the door on several players at 149.

"I played a lot better today," said McDonald after his round. "... I had better concentration."

Other leaders included Rick Spears ofb Port Jervis, N.Y., who was tied with Wadkins at 146, Allen Miller of Pensacola, Fla., winner of the 1970 Canadian amateur at Oshawa, Kurt Cox of San Antonio, Tex., and Jim Simons of Butler, Pa., were at 141.

Davis Cup Could Defect If Russia Keeps Improving

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) —What do you think of the Davis Cup on display beside Lenin's tomb outside the red brick walls of the Kremlin in Moscow?

"Don't laugh at it. It's possible," Dennis Ralston, coach of the U.S. Davis Cup team said after he and Arthur Ashe Jr. had survived a two-day, five-set marathon Thursday with Russia's Alex Metreveli, 25, and 22-year-old Vladimir Korotkov.

The Yanks finally won 7-6, 6-7, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, but the Russians came within an eyelash of beating one of America's finest teams.

It was one of the obscure little dramas of the 1970 U.S. open tennis championships, enacted not without notice.

A month by Korotkov that would have tied the fifth set 6-6 and sent it into sudden death was called out by the umpire when it was obviously three inches inside the line. Ashe, with a display of good sportsmanship, insisted the ball was good.

The point was played again.

"We were praying we wouldn't go into sudden death," said Ralston. "They would have served last and would have had an 80-20 chance of winning."

"I think they would have won if we'd gone into a tie break," said Ashe.

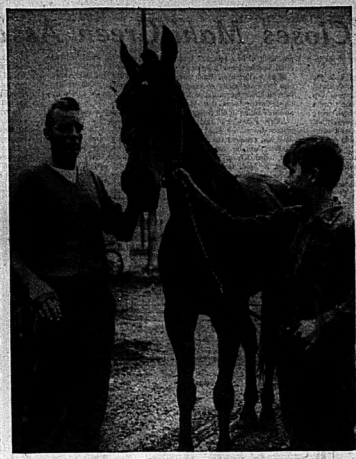
Both Americans praised the Russians.

"They're very good—especially Metreveli," said Ralston. "He beat me once in the French. He beat Pancho Gonzales at Wimbledon. He'd also beaten Roger Taylor, Manuel Santana and other top players."

"They would have been in the challenge rounds—West Germany, Mexico on a fluke," said Ashe. "Wouldn't it have been something—the U.S. and Russia playing for the Davis Cup? We'd have had to build a new stadium."

Athletes Get Grants

OTTAWA (CP) — Grants totaling $2,000 each have been awarded to 37 Canadian athletes attending post-secondary educational institutions, Health Minister John Munro announced Thursday.



The grants are made to "assist athletes who because of long training and competitive schedules have little opportunity to raise funds for educational purposes," the minister said in a release.

More than 300 applications were considered by a national selection committee, headed by Dean Ivor Wynne of McMaster University, which included representatives of various amateur sport governing bodies in Canada.

Names of additional recipients will be announced shortly, the release said.

The 37 include these Ontario names:

Happy Days

Bob Day applies the finishing touches to Grampa Jack, with some help from son Kevin. The bay gelding will be looking to increase the over $400 in prize money that he has collected this season in this week's Quinte Riding and Driving Club's Saturday night card.

'Grampa' Kicks Up Heels In Saturday Races

Belleville harness racing owner Bob Day can lay claim to the proud "grampa" in a wide stretch of territory — his eight year old race horse, Grampa Jack.

The bay gelding has performed well this season on the Belleville, Kingston tracks, and his owner was planning to compete at Rideau Raceway in Ottawa, before lack of stall space and a leg injury to Grampa Jack combined to halt his plans.

Grampa Jack is the second horse purchased by Day, who entered the racing game last year, and has already collected over $400 in prize money.

His owner is looking forward to qualifying for his harness driver's license enabling him to compete on the largest tracks in the area, such as Belleville and Kingston. "If you train and drive the horse yourself", says Day, "then you've got no one else to blame if he doesn't win."

While fall fairs and stakes races have forced the Riding and Driving card to reduce the number of races, a number of new out - of - town entries should provide some stiff competition for the track regulars.

Entries will come from Carleton Place and South March (near Ottawa), as well as Don Heath's Bay Jessica Heath, is a former Belleville resident, who now races out of Oakville.

Jim Cochrane will be looking to repeat the success of Jimmy Bing, when he brings Mary Bing to the post for the first time here.

The point was played again.

"We were praying we wouldn't go into sudden death," said Ralston. "They would have served last and would have had an 80-20 chance of winning."

"I think they would have won if we'd gone into a tie break," said Ashe.

Both Americans praised the Russians.

"They're very good—especially Metreveli," said Ralston. "He beat me once in the French. He beat Pancho Gonzales at Wimbledon. He'd also beaten Roger Taylor, Manuel Santana and other top players."

"They would have been in the challenge rounds—West Germany, Mexico on a fluke," said Ashe. "Wouldn't it have been something—the U.S. and Russia playing for the Davis Cup? We'd have had to build a new stadium."

Female Footballer Draws Suspension

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Professional football's first woman player made the team roster on the final cut here Thursday and was immediately suspended.

Palokas, 23-year-old Grade 3 teacher from Tampa, was put on the suspended list Thursday night by Paul Massey, general manager and coach of Orlando Panthers, a team in the Atlantic Coast League.

Massey said Pat would definitely not play this weekend's game.

"Unfortunately because of her many television and personal appearances and her full-time teaching job, she has been unable to attend practice sessions," Massey said.

"She is a member of our team and must live by the rules like the other players. so tomorrow when I turn in our 36 active roster list she will go on the suspended list."

The bubble burst for Pat just as she was preparing to demand a higher pay cheque as the principal drawing card of the minor-league Panthers.

Players receive $25 each for pre-season games and $100 for regular games.

Pat's husband, place-kicking specialist Steve Palokas, was cut earlier in the day, losing out to another place kicker. However, the team said it planned to pay Pat in her specialty of holding for place-kickers while attracting larger crowds than the Panthers have known recently.

United Stand

Belleville United advanced to the finals of the Belleville Minor Soccer Association's peewee division last night, on the strength of a 2-1 win over Peoples Pizzeria. The two teams had played to a draw in a previous match.

Stirling Wilson and David Thibaudeau counted the goals for the winners with Nick Barrett answering for Beppies.

Lucky Cooper Says:
Gold's Million Dollar Winner
- DELIBERATE DRAW

To draw the ball from right to left, merely close your stance. Position the clubface so that it faces the direction in which you wish the ball to finish. Place your feet parallel to a line on which you want the ball to start out. Don't manipulate your swing. . .trust your positioning to produce the draw and swing normally.

A finished golfer will be able to deliberately curve the ball in one way or another. But let me say that I believe the club golfer should not try to bend the ball with a driver. Certainly good players can and should be able to do this, but for most golfers the best tee shot with the driver is to the middle of the fairway.

Provincial Court Closes Maki-Green Assault Case

OTTAWA (CP) — Hockey's blinding speed and the instinctive actions of its players make it nearly impossible to prove charges of common assault against them, provincial Court Crown Att. Jean Pitzpatrick declared Thursday.

Pitzpatrick, Ont., jurist also said that hockey players consent to a number of attacks on the ice that normally would be considered assaults leading to criminal charges.

He made the statements in finding defenceman Ted Green of Boston Bruins not guilty of common assault arising from a vicious stick duel with winger Wayne Maki of St. Louis Blues in a National Hockey League exhibition game here Sept. 21, 1969.

Judge Fitzpatrick said he found Green was only defending himself against Maki.

Green suffered a skull fracture in the clash that nearly cost him his life and his hockey career. He missed all of the 1969-70 season because of the injury.

Court officials say it is the first time that a professional athlete has been charged with common assault arising from a game. There have been more serious charges, however, of manslaughter and assault causing bodily harm arising from a sports contest.

Judge Fitzpatrick made it clear that his comments on proving common assault charges did not embrace "unprovoked, vicious attacks" that could lead to serious injuries.

In an earlier trial, Maki was also found not guilty of assault causing bodily harm. Judge Edward Carter found that Maki also was acting in self-defence.

Judge Fitzpatrick said that neither Green nor Maki could have had criminal charges laid against them but for the blow that felled Green. Up to that point, he said, their duel was similar to thousands of rink battles.

He found that Maki had been guilty of two infractions against Green as the two players collided violently behind the Boston net in a fight for control of a loose puck.

Judge Fitzpatrick said he was satisfied that the St. Louis winger held Green by the sweater, preventing him from skating back into position in front of goalie Gerry Cheevers.

He said this led to Green either punching or shoving Maki in the face with his glove—a blow that constituted part of the common assault charge.

Maki then committed one of the worst faults in hockey by spearing Green in the area of his kidneys, the judge said.

In return, he said, Green had administered "a bad chop" with his stick to Maki's shoulder as a warning not to do it again.

The stick of Green Green was the other blow that the Crown alleged was an assault on Maki by the Boston defenceman.

In his judgment, delivered from the bench, Judge Fitzpatrick said Maki had delivered the most vicious blows in the battle that prompted a crackdown on rough play in the NHL.

The judge said he found Game referee Ken Dodd blameless, while interposed in NHL competition, alert and competent. There had been some criticism of the Guelph, Ont., referee at the trial.

Green's only comment was: "I'm only glad it's over at last."

Smith Plays 'Cousins'

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Joe Nieko has a cousin named Reggie Smith in the American League. At least Reggie Smith has a cousin named Joe Nieko.

"I don't know why I hit him so hard-maybe it's because he's new in the league this year and I hear that harder," Smith said after rapping a single and homer off Nieko's Boston Red Sox 5-3 victory over Detroit Tigers Thursday night.

That gave Smith nine hits in 17 at-bats against Nieko this season, including three homers, and raised his season's batting average to .322, two points ahead of California's Alex Johnson.

"I know I hit him good, but I hadn't any idea I had nine hits," said Smith, a slugging centre fielder. "He's a good pitcher and it's just one of those things. I remember all three homers and all have been on different pitches. I hit a slider one tonight. The only two homers I've got on 'I' fast ball and a change-up."

Smith's 22nd homer started Nieko's troubles in the opening inning and the Red Sox kayoed the Tiger right-hander in the third when Smith singled, Carl Yastrzemski doubled and Rico Petrocelli homered.

Elsewhere in the AL, Milwaukee Brewers toppled Minnesota Twins 8-3, California Angels edged Kansas City Royals 1-0, Oakland Athletics overcame the Chicago White Sox 4-3 on a three-run pitch homer by Frank Fernandez in the ninth inning, Baltimore Orioles clipped the New York Yankees 8-4 and Cleveland Indians beat Washington Senators 6-2.

Phil Roof's three-run homer highlighted a five-run explosion in the fifth inning as the Brewers beat the Twins and sliced their West Division lead to three games over the Angels and six over the A's. Minnesota's Brant Alyea and Milwaukee's Roberto Pena matched two-run homers in the seventh.

Trailing the White Sox 3-1, the A's had a runner on first but never down in their last out against reliever Wilbur Wood.

Then pinch hitter Dave Duncan singled and Fernandez, another pinch batter, smacked his 15th home run of the season over the left field fence. Bob Spence connected for the SOX.

The Orioles took advantage of two bust singles, two bases-loaded walks and two errors to score six times in the sixth inning and beat the Yankees and Mel Stottlemyre. Jim Palmer ventured 10 New York hits, including Jim Lyttle's homer, for his 19th victory.

Homers by Duke Sims, Jackie Heidemann and Craig Nettles powered the Indians over the Senators.

Cubs' Ice-man Coming Again

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jim Hickman, dubbed the Iceman by his teammates, strobed a run-scoring single in the opening inning, then crashed a three-run homer in the second as the Chicago Cubs routed Philadelphia Phillies 7-2 and moved to within one-half game of the National League's East division-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

The 6-foot-4, 205-pounder from Tennessee increased his average to .326 with his 29th homer and single and the four runs batted in gave him 103 for the year. In his eight previous big league seasons, Hickman hit 128.

"Jim carried us last August and when everyone else was fading in September, he kept right on going," Cubs' Manager Leo Durocher said. "And now he's carrying us again."

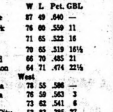
The game also marked the end of Billy Williams's National League consecutive game record at 1,117. Williams, the Cubs' left fielder, had been in every Chicago game since Sept. 21, 1967.

Elsewhere in the league, St. Louis Cardinals downed the New York Mets 5-3, the Pirates were rained out in Montreal, Cincinnati Reds trimmed San Francisco Giants 7-3, Atanta Braves routed Los Angeles Dodgers 11-4 and San Diego Padres blanked Houston Astros 4-0.

The Mets fell from second to third in the East, one game behind the Pirates, as Joe Hoerner ripped a homer and St. Louis jumped to an early 3-0 lead.



The Cards made it 5-1 in the sixth off loser Gary Gentry, 8-8. Steve Carlton, 8-18, picked up the victory, giving up nine hits, including a two-run homer by Al Weis in the ninth.

Pete Rose drilled his 12th homer and drove in three runs while Johnny Bench ripped three hits and knocked in a pair of runs in Cincinnati's victory over the Giants.

Henry Aaron, Orlando Cepeda and Clete Boyer socked homers for the Braves over Los Angeles while Andy Kosco and Bill Sudakis had homers for the Dodgers.

Leo Snaps Williams' String

CHICAGO (AP) — "It took a long time to get me out of there," said durable Billy Williams of Chicago Cubs, "but sometimes a player can get so wrapped up in record streaks it hurts his club."

A stroke of manager Leo Durocher's pen—making out the lineup for the resurging Cubs before their 7-2 victory over Philadelphia Phillies Thursday—ended Williams's National League record consecutive game total at 1,117.

"Billy talked a long time about ending his streak, but I didn't decide to take him out of left field until I made out the lineup card before the game," said Durocher in benching slumping Billy.

Williams consecutive game string had lasted almost seven seasons from a Sept. 22, 1963 start here against the then Milwaukee Braves.

Williams, benched as a .317 hitter, was 0-for-13 in the stand against the Phils, conceded that fatigue and pressure of the streak was affecting him.

This was Williams's third non-start of the season, half twice before he entered a Cub game as—a—pinch-hitter or for defensive purposes.

Mauch 'Benched' for Three

MONTREAL (CP) — Jim Fanning, general manager of National League, expressed surprise Thursday of the suspension of manager Gene Mauch.

Mauch was given a three-day suspension effective Thursday and fined $100 by league president Chub Feeney for bumping plate umpire Payl Pryor Wednesday night in a game against Pittsburgh Pirates.

"Gene's behavior has been excellent all year," said Fanning. "He's been thrown out of only three games and I thought Feeney did take this into consideration."

Mauch bumped Pryor in the eighth inning of Wednesday's game while protesting a third strike call against Adolfo Phillips.

"The bumping was an accident," said Mauch. "I was trying to show him how Phillips checked his swing. He was moving toward me, gestering that I was out of the game.

"The Pirates are out here busting their butts to win a pennant, we're out here busting out butts to stop them and I think Pryor should be busting his. I think too many umpires start looking in October at this point of the season and start resting."

Mauch is allowed on the field in uniform during batting practice and infield practice but must change and remove himself from the clubhouse and playing area during the game.

It is the second time Mauch has been suspended. Warren Giles, NL president until last year, set Mauch down for three days and fined him $250 for bumping an umpire while he was managing Philadelphia Phillies.

Third base coach Dick Williams will manage the Expos tonight and Saturday against the Cardinals in St. Louis and Mauch will return to the helm Sunday.

TOO TIRED TO LOVE?

Many marriages are wrecked or blighted by a simple hidden cause. Fatigue is easy to blame. But the real problem could lie deeper. Dr. Marion Hilliard, who was chief of obstetrics and gynecology at Woman's College Hospital in Toronto, discusses the problem frankly in the September issue of Reader's Digest. She offers specific help and tells how to take the initiative in creating an "atmosphere of love". Pick up your copy of Reader's Digest today.

Champagne Missing In Hockey

VANCOUVER (CP) — Soviet hockey coach Anatoly Tarasov says a world hockey championship tournament without Canada is like caviar without champagne.

Tarasov, who flew here from the U.S.S.R. Wednesday night to conduct a hockey clinic at the University of British Columbia, is the man who led the Russian national team to seven world championships.

"As a Russian, I cannot understand how Canadians can reconcile themselves to the fact that they are not in the world hockey tournament," the coach said through an interpreter.

"If I was a Canadian and I couldn't get there by sea, I would go with my hockey team on foot."

Canada pulled out of the tournament last year when the International Ice Hockey Federation declined to allow use of professionals in the tournament.

The average life span has increased from 47 years in 1900 to 70 years now.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For September 5

Your birthday today: Your path should be clear the next year will be adventurous, interesting, and productive for you depending on your willingness to change, keep your skills sharp so that this has been firmly established now is replaced. Today's natives are gifted with a knack for poetry, for finding something romantic in almost any situation.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your work is more strenuous today. However, influential people will be willing to listen; so put together your most important proposals, and study well.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Emotional pressures may lead you to overstate your case today. Otherwise much creative work can be done; something of a change in direction. Home life is warm and rewarding.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Too many things seem to be piling on most of the day. Keep notes so that details are accurate. Cut down your range of command.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): A little consideration helps as you attend the needs of your loved ones. Creative ventures promise bright bits of drama, moments of crisis with favorable resolutions.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): The only dark area is this generally favorable day is that finances — items skipped over quickly. Take the time to verify them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Use more observant of details than usual, even then a chance to check for themselves. Care in handling equipment, appliances is essential now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Not a favorable time for dealing with influential people. Old questions come up for fresh airing; there are ways to divert to side issues; make the best of it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): It may seem that your friends are a bit too close early in the day, that your plans are hindered. The later hours are a lot more pleasant, your persuasive powers stronger.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): There are so many wishes that you are tempted to ask for too much. Carefully examine anything you sign.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Now you can make progress toward a long - set goal. Friends are cordially disposed, but don't overdo anything. Let the situation evolve with out pressure.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Get an early start, confirm facts, get a great deal done and the whole thing is good. Taper off rapidly in the evening; seek light diversion.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Divergent ideas of what is to happen next cause people irritation. Be firm in your stand. Compromise becomes essential. Your patience will be long appreciated.

Post Office Future May Be Agency

Move Known By '72

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board President C. M. Drury says the government will decide within 18 months whether to convert the post office department into a Crown agency.

He told a news conference Friday the idea, which has been before the government for some time, will be decided upon before the expiry March 31, 1972, of a new postal contract signed earlier in the day.

The post office now comes directly under the cabinet. Operation of Crown agencies and corporations is more flexible and independent.

Mr. Drury and John Young, chairman of the prices and incomes commission, said the wage settlement of 6.8 or 7.2 per cent annually—depending on the figures used—is clearly a violation of the six-per-cent guideline for increases.

But Mr. Drury said the guide was formulated by the commission, not by the government. The government had accepted six per cent, however, as a realistic figure in the anti-inflation fight.

The government-appointed conciliator is an independent agent, Mr. Drury said.

He added that the 6.8 per cent is an accurate measure of the wage increase but the postal unions insist the figure should be 7.2.

To arrive at 6.8, the government adds the percentage increases in each of four periods in which pay raises totalling 55 cents an hour are given.

The percentages add to 17.1. When this is pro-rated over 30 months it shows an annual increase of 6.8 per cent.

The government follows this procedure, Mr. Drury said, because what is really important is the percentage increase in each period.

The unions use the total monetary increase of 55 cents an hour as a base and divide by the current average hourly wage of $3.98 to show a total increase over 30 months of 18 per cent.

Eighteen per cent, pro-rated over 30 months, shows an annual increase of 7.2 per cent.

When all the increases are in force next April 1, the post office will be paying a minimum of about $35 million a year more than in the final year of the old contract.

If postal workers vote to ratify the contract—and it seems likely they will—they will receive a three-cent-an-hour increase to 18 cents for shifts worked in the evening or at night.

They will also be given a retroactive payment of $534, to cover the period since last Sept. 30 when the old contract expired, at a total cost of $15,500,000.

Current rates of pay call for an expenditure by the post office over 18 months of $415,900,000. Added it will under the new contract will be $50,000,000 in pay increases.

Letter carriers will be paid overtime on a daily, instead of weekly, basis.

A letter from Postmaster-General Eric Kierans assures postal workers they will not lose their jobs because of technological changes.

The post office will pay 50 per cent of medical care insurance premiums in all provinces on an equal basis under the contract. Previous arrangements differed from province to province. The cost of this provision to the government will be about $450,000.

Employees will also be granted four weeks of annual vacation after 18 years' service instead of after 20.

Egypt Says U.S. Wrong

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Egypt says the United States is "absolutely far from the truth" in its charge that Cairo has been violating the Middle East ceasefire by setting up anti-aircraft missiles near the Suez canal.

The Egyptian foreign ministry also said Friday that "while the United States succumbed to Israeli pressure, it has taken no action on Egyptian counter-charges of Israeli violations."

In fact, the ministry said, the United States itself has violated the military standstill by sending Phantom jet fighters to Israel since the ceasefire went into effect Aug. 7.

Egypt said its foreign minister, Mahmoud Riad, has presented the complaints to Donald C. Bergus, the top U.S. diplomatic official in Cairo.

In Washington, a state department spokesman said the United States has demanded "rectification" by Egypt and the Soviet Union of the alleged ceasefire violations.

But he declined to say if this meant an insistence that the missiles be pulled back out of the canal truce zone.

Marxist To Run Chile

SANTIAGO (AP) — The voters have picked a Marxist to be Chile's next president, but it is up to Congress to confirm or reject their choice.

The government announced early today that Senator Salvador Allende had defeated former president Jorge Alessandri, a conservative, and Radomiro Tomic, a moderate leftist, in the presidential election.

But Allende got only 36.3 per cent of the 2,936,743 votes cast, edging out Alessandri by 39,338 votes.

Under Chilean law, a presidential candidate must receive more than 50 per cent of the votes cast to win an election outright. Otherwise, Congress must decide between the two leading candidates.

If Congress goes along with the choice of the voters as expected, Chile will have the first freely elected Communist- and Socialist-backed government in Latin America.

Allende, a 62-year-old former physician and three-time loser in previous presidential elections, has promised Chile a non-Marxist government but one "one that will open the way for socialism."

He has pledged to nationalize the banks, achieve full agrarian reform and nationalize the United States-operated copper industry.

A personal friend of Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba, Allende has pledged to restore diplomatic relations with Cuba, East Germany, North Korea, Communist China and North Vietnam.

OTTAWA (CP) — Racial prejudice in the federal public service is cited by government employees of Indian or Pakistani origin as a prominent factor adversely affecting promotion chances. In a survey conducted among more than 100 such public servants by some of their colleagues, 20 per cent of those who answered questionnaires said "unconscious prejudice" inhibited career advancement. There were 13% per cent who said they had experienced overt prejudice.

Coffee and Public Affairs

Lands and Forests Minister Rene Brunelle (right) shares coffee break with Prince Edward County warden Gordon Lloyd at opening of area forests and forest department Napanee office yesterday. Both men also share public affairs interest in possible big Quinte economic development — possible location of a giant kraft mill in Prince Edward. Mr. Brunelle had some remarks on the topic following ribbon-cutting ceremonies. (For details, see Page 2.)

Wheat Crop Smallest In Canada Since 1961

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian farmers are expected to harvest their smallest wheat crop in almost a decade this year, but record production of barley and oilseeds are likely.

Based on yield estimates Aug. 15 and published Friday by Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the total Canadian wheat harvest is forecast at about 338 million bushels, less than half last year's 684 million and the smallest since a weather-hit harvest of about 283 million bushels in 1961.

The anticipated decline in wheat production reflects the reduction in acreage planted to spring wheat—to about 12 million acres from more than 24 million last year—in the face of glut market conditions and a federal program that pays cash to farmers who switched wheatland into summerfallow or forage crops.

The carryover of wheat stored in elevators and on farms from previous harvests exceeded a record 900 million bushels at midsummer.

With the estimated reduction in this year's harvest, the stockpile could be reduced to between 700 million and 800 million bushels by next summer if exports remain about the same as the 356 million bushels sold abroad in the crop year that closed July 31. Domestic sales run at about 165 million bushels annually.

There have been some signs that the wheat-export market is strengthening, with reports of reduced crops in other exporting countries. Corn blight in the United States has stimulated market interest in other grains.

Saskatchewan this year will produce 212 million bushels, far below last year's 461 million. Alberta's 73 million bushels and Manitoba's 34 million are about half 1969 figures.

The 1970 spring wheat crop estimate is 322.4 million bushels compared with 670 million last year. Included in this year's estimate is 79.5 million bushels of durum wheat, down from last year's 83 million.

Farmers have turned from wheat to sow record crops of barley, flax, rapeseed and mixed grains this summer. Rye and oats for grain also are up.

The rapeseed crop will be a record 79.5 million bushels, compared with last year's 23.6 million. Seeded acreage has risen 96 per cent.

RCMP Joins Search For FBI Fugitives

MADISON, Wis. (AP) Four young men sought in the bombing of a University of Wisconsin research centre have been added to the FBI's list of most-wanted fugitives.

While the search was busiest along the Canadian border, Madison officials speculated that the FBI's most-wanted designation would help with extradition if any of the men was found in Canada.

The RCMP issued a Canada-wide alert Friday night for two of them David S. Fine, 18, and Leo F. Burt, 22, both former University of Wisconsin students.

The other two Karleton Armstrong, 22, and his brother, Dwight, 18, both of Madison, apparently slipped through the hands of police at Little Falls, N.Y., about 110 miles from Canada, Thursday night. State police in cars and helicopters searched the area Friday.

The four were named Wednesday in FBI warrants charging conspiracy, sabotage and destruction of government property. The Canadian warrants for Fine and Burt, an RCMP spokesman said, are based on a law which bans from entry into Canada any person suspected of advocating subversion of democracy.

The addition of their names to the FBI's most-wanted list expanded the roster to 14. The FBI said the list is held to 10 except in "extraordinary circumstances."

The explosion Aug. 24 shattered a six-storey army mathematics research centre at the university, killing a physics student working in a laboratory.

Russian Ballerina Seeks Asylum in West

LONDON (AP) — Ballerina Natalia Makarova, the second star of Leningrad's Kirov Ballet to defect to the West, was in seclusion near London today after obtaining asylum in Britain.

She told British officials that she was not defecting for political reasons but thought Britain offers a dancer more opportunities than the Soviet Union.

Miss Makarova did not appear at Royal Festival Hall Friday night for the final performance of a six-week engagement in Britain. The British home office then informed the Russian company she had defected.

"Miss Makarova applied to the home office this evening to remain in this country, and her request was granted," a British spokesman said.

Her whereabouts were not revealed. Sources said only that she was staying with friends outside the city.

Miss Makarova was the dancing partner of Rudolf Nureyev when he defected nine years ago in Paris. He joined Britain's Royal Ballet and gained a sensational international career with Dame Margot Fonteyn, Britain's great ballerina, as his partner.

Nureyev, Dame Margot and Miss Makarova have retained close ties through the years.

Now 20 years old and in her dancing prime, Miss Makarova is considered one of the world's top dancers. She was to appear Friday night as Princess Florin in "The Sleeping Beauty, the same ballet she and Nureyev were dancing when he defected.

Miss Makarova danced at rehearsals Friday with the 30-member Kirv Ballet, then told other members she wanted to do some last-minute shopping before the troupe's departure this weekend for Holland.

Secretly, she telephoned Scotland Yard and, in a mixture of English and French, asked the procedure for defecting. Detectives took her to the home office, where she applied for asylum, then took her to her friends' home. The home office made its official announcement later.

When Miss Makarova did not appear at the Festival Hall on the banks of the Thames, Kirov officials replaced her with Natalia Bolshakova without comment.

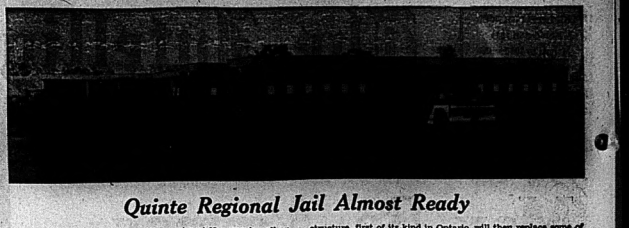
Lands and Forests' Opens Napanee Office

NAPANEE (Staff) — A new lands and forests department office, serving one of Ontario's burgeoning recreation areas — including the Oxbow district — was opened here yesterday.

Lands and Forests Minister Ross Brunelle, who performed the traditional ribbon-cutting ceremony, said the office is "dedicated to meet the growing recreation needs of an ever - increasing population who will soon be converging on this district to hunt and fish."

However, demands on its staff are multifold, covering the entire spectrum lands and forests management.

It's a demand emphasized by new problems, in fact noted by Mr. Brunelle.



"The unfortunate mercury pollution of many district waters has resulted in extra staff duties including the problems facing the commercial fishing industry in this busy eastern basin of Lake Ontario," he said.

As a branch office of the lands and forests district headquarters at Tweed, the unit administers most of the southern Quinte — Kingston region. Its territory includes an area from Picton to Trenton and east to Kingston.

Yesterday's formal ceremonies — with Norris Whitney, MPP Prince Edward - Lennox acting as chairman — were attended by local and senior government representatives from the region.

They included: Works Minister Jack Simonett, Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings, Syd Apps, MPP Kingston and the Islands, Mayor Russell Scott, Belleville and Gordon Lloyd, Prince Edward County warden.

Quinte Regional Jail Almost Ready

The Quinte regional detention centre at Napanee is well on its way to completion and should be ready within the next two months, Works Minister Jack Simonett said yesterday. The new structure, first of its kind in Ontario, will then replace some of the oldest county jails in the province — at Belleville, Picton, Napanee and Kingston.

CIP Spokesman:

No Kraft Mill Decision Until 1971

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

NAPANEE — A proposed $70-million kraft mill in Prince Edward County comes at a time of rapid development in pollution control technology, Lands and Forests Minister Rene Brunelle said here yesterday.

Its operation should not be compared with that of similar paper plants established many years ago in the province, he cautioned.

The controversial mill project — which has stimulated anti-pollution protests in the Quinte district — was noted by Mr. Brunelle during a brief speech while opening a new lands and forests department office here.

Simultaneously, yesterday afternoon, Canadian International Paper Company — which is studying location of the mill at Huyck's Point on Lake Ontario west of Wellington — announced no decision on the development is expected until next year.

"No final decision has been taken on this project, or on the site itself, and none is expected until 1971," Jaffre M. Dechene, CIP vice-president, said in a telegram to The Intelligencer.

The telegram confirmed a meeting between CIP officials and local government and business representatives in Belleville Wednesday night.

The session, set for Sun Valley Motor Inn, has been called to provide district community leaders with information on the CIP study. It was organized after reports of the mill provoked anti-pollution reaction.

Mr. Brunelle yesterday noted the public interest in the project.

The public's concern for pollution and the need for maintaining an attractive environment for people is well recognized — and it's our responsibility in the government to see that these matters are protected," he said.

"One point I would like to make crystal clear: There has been a very rapid development in air and water pollution technology and any new pulp mill built in Ontario will definitely not be allowed either to pollute our lakes or rivers or foul the atmosphere.

"No one should prejudge a modern, new facility on the basis of 30-year-old plants that still exist in a number of Ontario localities.

"Obviously, it is equally important to provide our young folk with job opportunities in the various regions of the province," he added.

Mr. Brunelle said his department, along with other provincial and federal departments had been working closely with government pollution control agencies to "obtain this important industry for Ontario."

Man Caught With Goods

A 27 - year - old Belleville man was charged with burglary after police this morning arrested a man at the back of the hospital Front Street store.

Two constables were checking downtown commercial properties when they spotted a man with a large suitcase hiding behind a wall near the rear of Zeller's store, police say.

The man fled but was arrested after a short chase.

Investigation showed a window in the rear door of Zeller's store had been broken. The suitcase, taken from the premises, was loaded with small merchandise, say police.

Lundberg Wins Again

J. C. "Jack" Lundberg has been elected for an unprecedented fifth term as national president for the Army, Navy and Air-force Veterans in Canada.

Mr. Lundberg's election was one of the final events of the association's annual meeting at Vancouver. A large Belleville delegation from Duke of Edinburgh Unit 201 was in attendance.

Prestige Costly For Thomson

CAMBRIDGE, England (CP) — Lord Thomson of Fleet said Friday the money he is investing in the London Times "is rather more than should be the case."

"I would not do for any other newspaper in the world what I am doing for The Times," the Canadian-born publisher told a conference of preparatory school headmasters.

"What better thing in the world today—what more impressive thing—than to own the national newspaper of great country, a great nation . . . and what greater privilege if you can afford to carry it, and I can, could you have than to own The Times, and to have the responsibility for carrying it?"

More Housing Questionnaires To Determine Tenants' Needs

More than 4,000 questionnaires will go out from city hall shortly as the Ontario Housing Corporation conducts another survey to determine the need and demand for family and senior citizens' housing in Belleville.

City council approved a motion ago requested the survey and families receiving the questionnaires are asked to fill them in and return them as soon as possible.

Following return of the questionnaires a research team from the OHC, the Ontario Government's housing agency, will estimate the number of families and senior citizens living or working in the community whose housing is inadequate or beyond their financial capabilities.

The demand in the area for housing on a geared-to-income basis will be determined from information gathered through advertising, direct mail questionnaires and personal interviews.

The survey will include an assessment of economic trends, growth factors and current and future housing needs in the municipality.

Residents and employees will receive letters outlining the government's rental housing program and asking them if they wish to participate. Rent is related to total income and includes heat, hot and cold water, stove and refrigerator. The lowest rent is $32 per month.

Currently two senior citizens' apartment complexes with a total of more than 128 units are under construction in the city, and family housing of the townhouse variety is nearing completion in the North Park and Pine Street areas.

But there is still a long waiting list of senior citizens and families interested in OHC housing, so the new housing survey was requested by cuncil.

Course Offered

Loyalist College is again offering a continuing education program for engineers and managers in the Quinte district.

The continuing education program was instituted last year with a course in financial management.

This year, the Loyalist extension department is offering managerial and engineering economics and management of organizational behavior.

Instructors are Norman B. Macintosh and James R. Ninginger, both professors of business administration at Queen's University.

Although the courses are of most benefit to people already employed at management levels in business and industry, others interested are encouraged to take advantage of the educational opportunity by contacting Loyalist College for details.

IN MEMORIAM

WHITE — In loving memory of our dear mother, Vera White who passed away Sept. 7th, 1966.
The years have passed upon,
Four years ago today
God took our mother unspoken,
To her gentle hand we gave,
You suffered much in silence,
Your spirit God out bend,
You found your pain with courage,
Your smile to the end.
—Sadly missed by son Charles and daughter-in-law Hazel.

PAUL WILLIAMS — In loving memory of our dear husband and father who passed away Sept. 6, 1967.
We had a son we were proud to call our own,
How much we miss him will never be known,
He left home our lives to clean,
But in our hearts he is always there,
Memories are kept in Your garden of rest,
God took him home,
For the best earth he was one of the best.
Please God forgive a silent fear,
We wish that God he were here.
There are others, yes we know,
But there is only one to mend him
—Mom, Dad and Marilyn.

FOX — In loving memory of a dear daughter and sister, Hazel Catherine Fox who passed away Sept. 5th, 1968.
Not until each loom is silent,
And the shuttles cease to fly,
Will God unfold the pattern,
Explain the reason why.
The dark threads are so needful,
In the weaver's skilful hand,
As the bright and golden colors,
Then lay down we shall understand.

Election of Trustees Is Slated for Fall

City council members are in office for a three - year term but Belleville voters will nevertheless still go to the polls this year.

The election will be to name new trustees for the Hastings County Board of Education and for the Hastings - Prince Edward Roman Catholic Separate School Board.

Trustees will be elected for two years with terms to run until the fall of 1972 when school board elections will again co-incide with municipal elections.

This means that although there is no election for council this year, voters last still have to be prepared for school board elections, and returning officer Adam Stalker is requesting that persons who have changed their address or moved into the district since the spring enumeration advise him of changes so their names will not be left off the voters list.

From the time of the enumeration until the assessment roll is out there is always a big movement of tenants, said Mr. Stalker.

Voters lists have to be posted by October 29 and municipal clerks should be notified of any changes by October 16th to allow time for corrections and printing of the lists.

Nomination day for school trustees throughout the county will be November 23.

System Is Changed For SS Trustees

Election of the two separate school trustees to the Hastings County Board of Education will be under the ward system this year rather than by the county at large.

City Clerk Adam Stalker said today that for the election of separate school trustees to the county board, Hastings would be divided into two wards — one for Belleville, and the other for Trenton and the balance of the county.

Two years ago, when elections were held for the new county school boards, they were either from Trenton or the county rural area.

The two separate school trustees on the county board are Paul Fleming and Robert son Collins.

Post Office

began Sept. 2, 1969, with the first meeting of negotiators and witnessed the appointment of a conciliation board, mediators and a series of rotating strikes before it ended.

The conciliation board, appointed last May under Montreal Judge Rene Lippe, split three ways on wages, with Judge Lippe recommending a 50-cent-an-hour increase over 12 months for the postal workers.

Following the report, A. W. R. Carrothers, president of the University of Calgary, was appointed to mediate the dispute, He quit after four days of meetings in June because he said the sides were too far apart.

The unions began a three-month series of rotating strikes with the government responding by closing down offices in some areas affected.

The appointment of Thomas O'Connor, a Toronto labor relations specialist, was announced Aug. 19.

Mr. O'Connor met both sides continually until agreement was reached.

Religion in Schools Local Decision Here

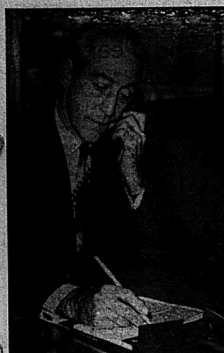
"It's not a thing to tackle now in a widespread area such as Hastings county," said its director of education Eric Rebanks today.

He was commenting on a report from the religious education committee of Halton county board of education, giving high school principals the option of dropping morning religious observances.

Now, provincial legislation calls for reciting of the Lord's Prayer and singing of O Canada every morning.



The provincial report, prepared by a committee under the direction of the late J. Keiller Mackay, urged elimination of religion courses in the schools and asked county boards for recommendations on its suggestion.

Halton county responded with formation of a religious education committee and report leaving morning observances up to individual principals and courses in ethics or morals up to the school board.

But Hastings county, caught up in the throes of organizing one of the most far-flung school districts in the province, made no move to study religion in the schools.

Consensus of board and administration is that any changes are up to the local school communities, through their advisory councils of parents, teachers and students.

Customs Conversation

L. J. Leonard, collector of customs in the Belleville office in the Federal Building, discusses import duties with an importer.

Customs Office Role Outlined

There are lots of beefs about the customs department, its departments and its civil servants, but not enough of the public know the intricacies and actual duties of the departments and the people who work within them, many civil servants feel.

Such a department is the customs and excise department of the government located in Belleville in the Federal Building on the Station Street block between Pinnacle and Church Streets.

L. J. Leonard, collector of customs in Belleville, explained to The Intelligencer that many people do not understand why they have to pay customs duties and how the department operates.

Mr. Leonard outlined the history, the operation and the intention of the Belleville and Canadian customs.

"The year 1788 marked the establishment of the first Liberal customs house in Canada at St. Johns on Lake Champlain," he explained. "This was an attempt to regularize a frontier trade between Vermont and Canada. A customs establishment was set up in Upper Canada in 1801."

The general business of the customs office is conducted in what is historically called "the long room", a room that got its name from an old English customs office with long dimensions.

There are three types of customs offices — Marine offices, dealing directly with merchandise arriving by ocean-going vessels, border ports where transportation companies or carriers come in contact with customs such as those along the border between the United States and Canada, and inland ports dealing with merchandise arriving by mail, express, rail and highway.

Belleville has the latter type of customs office and the staff here consists of Mr. Leonard, the collector, an appraiser and five customs officers.

"Manifests are received each morning for merchandise arriving in Canada for clearance at Belleville," Mr. Leonard said. "The importer receives notification from the carrier whether it be rail, express or highway that goods consigned to him have arrived and are held in bond under customs supervision."

The importer may obtain his goods by going to the customs office and pay his taxes or duties or he may, if he has a warehouse, keep the goods for two years before paying the duties. A customs broker may take care of this chore for a small fee.

All mail arriving for an addressee in Canada is forwarded to the nearest customs port to the consignee's address. Here it is handed over by post office officials to customs officers for examination purposes.

"Here, also, the segregation of dutiable and non - dutiable parcels takes place. Parcels found to be unsolicited gifts up to a value of $10, or duty free according to tariff and free of sales or excise taxes are stamped 'cleared customs' and returned to the post office for delivery in the normal manner.

"Those found to be dutiable or shipments of a commercial nature, whether in the officers opinion they are dutiable or not, are kept by customs.

A postal notice card is completed and, where a value can be ascertained, the duty and taxes are computed and shown on the card which is mailed to the importer. He then knows his parcel has arrived and how much it will cost to clear through customs.

The customs department also works closely with other government agencies such as the Department of Agriculture, the Pure Food and Drug Office, the Department of Trade and Commerce, Export and Import Control, Department of Transport and the RCMP.

Employment News

By D. A. MACDONALD

No one can deny that a scarcity of jobs affects everyone, directly or indirectly, to a greater or lesser extent. A limited job market creates severe placement difficulties for the physically, mentally and socially handicapped. They must overcome not only the shortage of job opportunities, but the stigma and prejudice that is still present in today's society toward the former "hospital patient", the "ex - inmate", the "paraplegic" etc. It is much easier to say "no" to applicants for employment than to give them a chance to prove their skills.

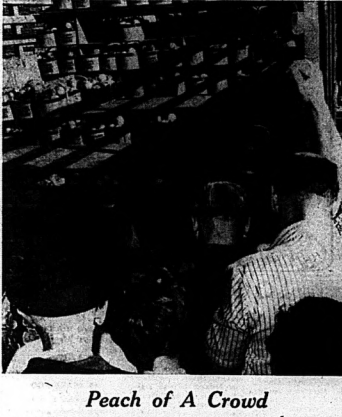
Canada Manpower Centres are actively concerned with the placement of disabled and work closely with community self provincial agencies and with employers to overcome negative attitudes and to show, by example, that in the right job, the handicapped individual is fully competitive.

Foremost among the social agencies with which Manpower Centres work is the Provincial Department of Social and Family Services. A federal - provincial cost sharing program enables the rehabilitation branch of this department to provide assessment, treatment and vocational recommendations for clients referred by Canada Manpower Centres and other agencies. One example of the type of assessment method used is the prevocational assessment program set up by the department of rehabilitative medicine at the Kingston General Hospital. Clients referred to this program not only receive counselling regarding results of psychological, vocational, interest and aptitude testing but they are also required to work at a number of "job stations" throughout the hospital complex. From work evaluation at each station, the client's motivation, work tolerance, attitudes, skill level ability to work under pressure are determined and fed back to the program's counsellor. On completion of the program a complete vocational report and recommendation is compiled on each client and forwarded to the appropriate agency for action. In the last year the Belleville Canada Manpower has been successful in placing many of the graduates of this program.

Involvement in job placement for the handicapped extends the Manpower Centre function to active participation in the Area Rehabilitation Council. The council is composed of persons professionally involved in assisting handicapped people in the Quinte area to Belleville region to achieve maximum potential in employment and social functioning. Through monthly dinner meetings, it is the objective of the council to:

(a) Bring together people in the community who are interested in problems related to the physically, psychologically and socially handicapped, for exchange of ideas, information and discussion.

(b) To promote and foster co-operation and communication between community agencies working with the handicapped.



(c- To promote awareness of community needs in relation to rehabilitation and to encourage solutions to these problems.

(d) To provide an awareness in the business community of the advantages of special placement.

(e) To maintain liaison with schools for the purpose of encouraging appropriate referral for services and through this contact foster preventive rehabilitation.

(f) To encourage, through special speakers, workshops, study groups, research projects, professional improvement for enhancement of community services to the handicapped.

Successful rehabilitation of the handicapped requires a team effort. The team is humanity and everyone should be an active member.

Peach of A Crowd

As George Clayson of Beamsville hands out 6-quart baskets of peaches, a long queue of shoppers gathered at the end of his truck to pay between $1.70 and $1.85 a basket. With some people purchasing two and three baskets, more than half of the truck was empty by 8:45 this morning.

Bug Demolished

News reporter Jack Brett escaped from the wreckage of his new model Volkswagen with minor injuries last night following a two car collision on Highway 49.

Three Are Injured In Head-on Collision

PICTON (Staff) — A two-car collision on Highway 49 near the Quinte Skyway Bridge last night sent the drivers of both vehicles to hospital and caused an estimated $1,900 damage. Injured were Jack Brett, 40, Picton, who was driving a new model Volkswagen, and Nolen Ryckman, 31, 251 Chelsea Road, Kingston. Mr. Brett, a former news reporter for the Kingston Whig Standard was reported in satisfactory condition this morning in Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital where he was rushed by ambulance following the accident.

The accident occurred at 7:30 p.m. only a short distance south of the Skyway Bridge. A spokesman for the Ontario Provincial Police today estimated damage to the Brett vehicle at $1,000, while damage to the car operated by Mr. Ryckman was set at $600. Charges are pending.

Mr. Ryckman and his young son with him at the time of the accident, were treated and released from PECM last night. Mrs. Ryckman, also a passenger in the car, escaped injury.

Tug Missing, CFB Alerted

TRENTON (Special) — The St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, concerned about the safety of an overdue tug pulling two scows between Prescott and the Iroquois lock, alerted CFB Trenton's Rescue Co - ordination Centre this morning.

It is likely the tug captain would decided to tie up for the night, since he had no radio and minimum navigation aids for seaway travel after dark, a rescue centre spokesman said.

Provincial police have been advised to check such a possibility before an air search is organized, he said.

Victory for Unions

With the postal dispute settled — finally — the unions claim the victory is theirs, and indeed it is, although William Houle, the peppery co-chairman of the Council of Postal Unions said he can't say that I'm happy with it but it's the best we can do."

Well if they are not satisfied now, after a year of bargaining and a public-be-damned attitude on the part of the unions, it augurs badly for both the postal service and the public.

That the country cannot afford prolonged tie-ups where essential services are concerned was demonstrated by a personal confrontation between Prime Minister Pearson and an angry citizen on Parliament Hill. Just back from his Mediterranean tour the prime minister was told by greeting card salesman Ian McDonald to "end the strike — and end it now." As it happened, negotiations at that time apparently were heading toward a settlement. Mr. McDonald said he had not had a holiday in 11 months, "not since the mail mess began." Not enough people were sending cards, business generally was being damaged and "all kinds of us are being badly hurt." He personally was "out" $3,000 of expected income as a result of the postal strike.

The sharp-tongued citizen reserved his most telling thrust on contemporary politics in Canada when Mr. Trudeau spoke of Parliament's sanctioning of the right of civil servants to strike. "You are the last one to quote Parliament," said Mr. MacDonald, clearly a reference to the trimming of time available for Commons question periods and to what many regard as a downgrading of the power of Parliament generally.

But that is by the way. The postal settlement nonetheless has done nothing to enhance the influence of the present government in the handling of such disputes. Mediator O'Connor was not the first outside go-between the Government had been obliged to call in, and the settlement has only been achieved at the price of extended deadlines (which allowed Ottawa to skirt the uncomfortable task of ordering an end to the strike) and a wage settlement in excess of the Government's 6 per cent guideline. So much for the power of collective bargaining and the impotence of the government.

Participatory Democracy

The turnout of 350 Prince Edward County citizens concerned about the pollution threat from a proposed kraft pulp mill was an excellent example of participatory democracy.

Just as the Pollution Unwanted group is spearheading the drive to ensure nothing will materialize that would harm the natural environment of the county, so too this sizeable representation of citizens was there to back them up. A large majority of those present at the Wellington meeting supported a resolution calling for an immediate study of the impact on the area of such a mill. An immediate drawback, it was pointed out by Mayor Ostler, is one familiar with the paper mill in Cornwall is aware. Pollution of a general nature moreover would be virtually inevitable, considering the size of such a project and the experience of other plants.

A spokesman for the going out of business Quinte Milk Products in Wellington for example has admitted that pollution is a problem at the plant, although the reason for its decline is something else again — the Ontario Marketing Board's quota system and consequent insufficiency of milk supply. But $65,000 for anti-pollution equipment with annual maintenance of up to $20,000 would greatly aggravate existing operating losses of $14,000 a month.

Canadian International Paper likely would have been difficulty in footing such a bill, but there is still the question of odor and just how effective anti-pollution devices would be. A projected meeting with company representatives next week should throw light on this problem, however.

Encouraging from the standpoint of public interest in this issue was the presence at the Wellington meeting of a number of young people. One youth in the audience said he had spoken to surveyors at Huyck Point recently who told him they were working for the company.

That there is a need for further discussion and information on this project is clear. The interests of Prince Edward County as a mainly agricultural and tourist region must be paramount in this matter.

And the Commons Swallowed It

Civil Servants 'Too Responsible' to Strike Said Pearson

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — How have you liked it?

Two "official's" or, as the Government has conceded, "legal" strikes paralyzing the Post Office — two Secretaries of normal service, in 1946 and again this year — with an "unofficial" or wildcat walkout in between in '49 to confound the chaos.

Who to blame?

How did it happen in the first place?

It is all there on the record. In Hansard, hard-to-spell as it is, word on it in the House of Commons.

Skim through it all again, and you have to apportion the lethal responsibility for the mail mess between former Prime Minister Louis Lester Pearson and Parliament itself.

Not just the Government supporters in Parliament, because at that time there was only an uncertain majority administration.

But blame all of Parliament, Liberals, Conservatives, New Democrats and the "splinter" groups.

Most of all you can place the heaviest burden of blame on the permissive Pearson shoulders.

The record appears a web his idea to give collective bargaining to the Federal Civil Service. It was his bill, his legislation under his own name that brought it into being.

And it was his decision to leave the scores of federal agencies and government staff groups free to choose between binding arbitration and the right to strike as the ultimate way of resolving any hangup in negotiations between the Administration and the Civil Service on wages and working conditions.

Almost unanimously the choice was for arbitration.

But not in the Post Office.

The postal unions chose the strike.

Lester Pearson's bill was given its Second Reading — the decision — maker — without, would you believe it, any recorded vote!

Not one MP, Liberal or Conservative, called for the "Ayes" and "Nays." Remember, a formal division in which every member would stand up and record his vote.

It was not that some of them were not worried. They were, and a few of them spoke their lives, said so.

What bothered them was the nagging worry that there were certain "essential" Government services such as the postal, that in no circumstance simply must not be permitted to be cut or crippled by strikes.

The Post Office, warned those few MPs — but they did not have whatever it took to demand a vote on it — was one of those key services. Essential. Supposedly indispensable.

But Lester Pearson tut-tutted them and soothed their fears with the since laughable assurance that civil servants, especially in the federal service, were just "too responsible" to ever even think of damaging the public interest by such a wildly irresponsible act as a strike.

The New Doubting Parliamentary Thomases were satisfied and they did — very likely because they did not want to have to make it known that an issue to require a recorded vote.

So the Pearson bill was sent to a Special Committee of the Commons where it supposedly was examined, clause by clause over a period, and then reported by returning to the House for the Third and Final Reading on February 26 of 1947.

There was no debate. And no vote.

It went through without so much as a precautionary "On Division" cry.

It was, in fact, unanimous. To the last MP they took Lester Pearson at his word.

Was your MP one of them? Ask him why he did not speak up, or vote, for the public interest. Ask him, too, if he has had any second thoughts. And most of all, ask him how he feels about strikes now in the "essential" parts of the civil service and what he proposes to do about it.

And by his answer mark your ballot for or against him in the next election.

One of the parliamentarians who insists he has no regrets is quiet, grey, sincere Stanley Knowles.

He takes the "credit," so he says? It, with another New Democrat, formally seconded David Lewis, for pushing for what is called "free collective bargaining", of the Civil Service strike regulations.

He still continues to fault the postal unions or concede that three years of strike turmoil is the Post Office is irresponsible. There are others, mostly New Dems, who feel as he does, but they are now a tiny minority.

But can you believe it, not one MP spoke up, objected or demanded a vote be taken on it when Lester Pearson moved Parliament's approval of a bill for one of his most unworldly statements, that civil servants were just "too responsible" to do that.

Ask your MP where he was that day and what he did.

Shelburne's Fiddle Contest

A Few Sore Heads—But A Good Time Was Had by All

Letter to The Globe and Mail

The column by Richard J. Needham on Aug. 12, rather hit the nail on the head, when one thinks of the recent rash of pop festivals and their general horror in particular (The Country of the Young).

During a recent weekend we in Shelburne successfully survived our twentieth Fiddle Contest, during which time our small village was invaded by the usual army of people listening or having a good time and entertaining each other. Although not one word appeared in the press to my knowledge, we had our marathon of Fiddle Contest music and dancing, the local taxed our water and sewage supplies for the 5,000 to 6,000 visitors, and few in town got much sleep.

There was one doctor on duty for this huge crowd (myself), and although things were steady they were not hectic. There were two fights among the youth, known to myself, and only a few cuts, including one inflicted by a whaddaikidoyoumean blade! Of the many who overindulged in various alcoholic drinks, only two arrived at our emergency department.

How could we, with a visiting population that is over 30 per cent of that at Mosport, have got off so easily? I believe the answer lies in the participation of the whole crowd in the fun. We had our large number of Americans, but most of them played the fiddle or were fascinated by those who did. Beers were passed freely. The people were entertaining themselves, no rules, regulations, or reason other than plain fun.

These people were not entertained like spectators, themselves. They most certainly did get drunk, the noise was tremendous, but completely harmless. We of Shelburne are already looking forward to next year's contest, and feel that if Mosport were entertained, the noise must have been pretty much the same. Had they got drunk, but in not one picture did I see a smiling face or other evidence that the spectators had their ball, but I wonder if the residents around the Mosport area are looking forward to a repeat next year.

I do not condemn the young. They are the product of their training and environment, and thus not terribly responsible. The kids at Mosport were and are sick freaks being exploited by some perverted sense of private gains. Mr. Needham suggested a private community of their own with their own laws, etc. Perhaps, somehow, therein lies the solution — we have produced these social misfits with their cerebral cortexes mashed by various chemicals. It would be cheaper to form a large community, as suggested by Mr. Needham, than it would be to try to house them in our already overworked mental institutions. The next 10 years will tell. We of this society are going to reap a mighty whirlwind and the piper is undoubtedly going to produce a bill of majestic proportions. How it will be paid, only God knows.

H. H. Smith, M.D.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

September 5, 1970 . . .

The Trojan Horse of Portsmouth, ended the Russo-Japanese war 65 years ago today—in failure. Internal political crisis in Russia initially the aggressor, then flushed with victory battle and their fleet, which sailed three-quarters of the way around the world to Japan had been sunk at Tsushima three months before. In Portsmouth, Peace Plenipotentiary had broken out and a general strike stopped the Russian people in October. The Czar agreed to call a parliament and his peace came too late as he was arrested in St. Petersburg, now Leningrad. The arrest precipitated a workers' uprising in Moscow which was finally put down by the army. The army's vigorous action held the people down until 1917.

1623—An earthquake killed 22,000 persons around Aleppo, in Asia Minor.

Five Million Pursue Higher Education in Soviet Union

Mikhail Anstiliov in UNESCO Features

Of the five million students enrolled at institutes of higher education in the Soviet Union by the end of 1970, approximately half will be workers and employees studying part - time through correspondence courses or in evening classes organized in factories and offices.

Correspondence courses are organized at all levels of primary and secondary education (8- or 10-year schools), both for general education and for the more specialized education provided by the "technicum".

But it is in higher education that correspondence teaching really comes into its own, especially in the fields of teacher training and technology. Courses are available in about 280 subjects through a whole network of specialized institutes, faculties and correspondence teaching services attached to the universities and technical colleges — in fact there are even branches of universities in the main towns and industrial centres.

The reason for the wide choice of possibilities in part-time education courses is simply that the students' leisure time and their availability for attending classes vary according to their particular job — and according to the location of the college or institute.

Take, for instance, the case of schoolteachers who wish to improve their qualifications so as to be able to teach in the senior classes of secondary schools or technicums. They can enrol as correspondence students at any one of 60-odd teacher training colleges in the main towns of the Soviet Union; but during the summer vacation they have to attend courses and examinations which are held at the college.

For the fields most likely to interest industrial technicians and workers, things work rather differently. Here there are too many subjects and specialities for there to be institutes and colleges conveniently placed for everyone. It would also be impossible to call all candidates for an exam at the same time without interrupting factory routine. For this reason, institutes of higher education have established study and consultation centres at such major factory and hubbub, where students can receive all the advice and help they need from qualified teachers. To enable them to prepare for their exams, workers are given additional periods of leave with pay which can amount to a year's study over a five year course.

How many institutions for part - time education exist in the USSR at the present time? All but one of the 68 Soviet universities have a correspondence teaching service, as do 200 teacher training colleges in 153 towns, and two special institutes, one in Moscow and the other in Kuibyshev (Samara). There are also 70 agricultural institutes, 15 veterinary colleges, 39 forestry institutes and dozens of other schools, sending instruction by post to economists, planners, publishers, etc.

A special word must be added about the All-Union Correspondence Polytechnical Institute in Moscow which, during its 37 years of existence, has trained, for example, more than 38,000 engineers in 59 different fields. With its 42,000 students and 827 teachers, the Institute is one of the largest colleges in the Soviet Union. It maintains seven branches in other cities, 23 study centres, 105 laboratories, publishes its own textbooks and courses (187 works in 1969 alone) makes use of every conceivable modern method — programmed instruction, films, tape — and broadcasts courses over television.

Though their studies are made easier by the Institute's modern methods and techniques, the students' workload is still very heavy. Returning to academic study after an interval of several years (the majority are aged between 30 and 35), they have to spend most of their leisure time studying, despite their family commitments. Most of them admit it is not enough time to pass their finals. Several of these "pillar box" graduates have distinguished themselves in research or applied science. Some have been awarded the Lenin Prize. Virtually all were promoted in their jobs.

Christianity in South Africa Faces Challenge from Natives

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Christianity faces a new challenge in South Africa as black men seek to reshape the white man's churches in their own image.

A welter of new sects has attracted a quarter of South Africa's black majority and some churchmen see this as a measure of failure in the white Christian establishment.

Black priests have fired the first salvos in a battle for a greater voice in established churches.

And an inter-denominational reform movement is under way to resist the distortion of church life caused by more than two decades of officially-sanctioned race separation (apartheid).

Five black Roman Catholic priests wrote in a manifesto published in a Johannesburg newspaper that despite Pope Paul's plea in Uganda last year for the "precious and original contribution of negritude," black participation in Roman Catholicism, his church in South Africa "cherishes" apartheid while pretending to condemn it.

The priests pleaded for "Africanization" of the church while accepting the temporarily unalterable fact of apartheid in public life. They demanded more openings in the hierarchy for black priests who, they charged, are often "dumped in the bush in non-viable parishes."

Though control of all established denominations is securely in white hands, most South African church leaders officially condemn apartheid. The major exceptions are the three powerful Calvinist Dutch Reformed churches which spiritually underpin ruling white Afrikanerdom and seek to justify apartheid in biblical terms.

The Afrikaner churches were the only ones to repudiate a "message to the people of South Africa" in which the inter-denominational South African Council of Churches last year condemned apartheid as "rooted in and dependent on a policy of sin."

Disregarding Premier John Vorster's warning that "pulpit politics" will not be tolerated, the council joined the Christian Institute of Southern Africa in seeking a Christian answer to apartheid. It recently sponsored a manifesto warning Christians of their responsibility as voters in the country's general election next year.

A major problem facing reform-minded clergymen is the social gap between white and black Christians caused by apartheid.

Though there is no law against multi-racial worship, the three Afrikaner churches enforce segregation. Church separation makes it physically difficult for different races to worship together even in multi-racial denominations. In addition, most white Christians by now accept social segregation no matter what their churches say.

A few blacks can usually be seen in the rear benches of white churches in cities, but even this is rare in more conservative rural areas.

Some church authorities organize group visits by whites to black churches. Though officialdom is usually co-operative, white women bringing food to black church socials need permits every time they enter a black township.

Different languages, customs and ways of thinking are barriers. Urban blacks can usually follow the gist of a white clergyman's sermon, but tribal vernacular services are a closed book to whites.

Less-sophisticated blacks in particular find the rigidly Western forms and traditions of established churches foreign to their nature. In the last quarter-century this has caused a "mushroom proliferation" of independent black sects. They had only about 761,000 members in 1946. By 1960, the number had increased to 2.3 million—21.2 per cent of the black four-to-one majority of about 13 million. The sects now claim the support of an estimated 25 per cent of the country's blacks.

By comparison, black membership of the established churches remained mostly static. Of white-led churches, Methodists have the most blacks—about 12 per cent.

The largest association of the new sects is the African Independent Church Association, which has 308 member churches. Many of these preach a blend of Christianity and elements from Africa's animist tribal past which would have made a 19th century missionary grab for his Bible.

Though an older generation of white churchmen would have condemned many of the new sects outright some Establishment thinkers now feel there is room for a fruitful exchange of thought.

Toronto Scholars Plot Reformation

TORONTO (CP) — A group of scholars in a Toronto house are plotting a second Protestant Reformation by "scripturally directed learning and scholarly enterprise."

Dr. Bernard Zylstra, a Dutch-American political and legal theorist said "we mean to develop a Reformation within the Christian community that is radical than in the 16th century."

The headquarters for the Institute for Christian Studies since 1967 has been the academic arm of the 14-year-old Association for the Advancement of Christian Scholarship, which has 2,500 members in North America.

By this fall the institute will have five full-time professors, 50 full-time students and 150 part-time students.

The starting point is Dutch Calvinism, since most of the students are of Dutch origin and the association was founded by Dutch-Canadians in Toronto.

The institute believes the Reformation did not reform enough, particularly in the field of human scholarship.

"A partial view of man and the world was left unreformed by the revealing light of God's word, thus to become an insidious wedge entering into the entire life-practice, including scholarship of the Christian," Dr. Zylstra said.

He added that the institute must destroy the 18th century concept of rationalism "which plagues the world today, and replace it with a new humanism which will help the individual and society."

The other alternatives are ultimately unsatisfying. When you find God you find yourself; you find your neighbor, you find the world."

Robert Carvill, 27, a Baptist from the United States, said: "From studying the Scriptures I get a new way of looking at things. We're not literalists; the world of God is not a bucket we can put things in it through which little rules drop.

"Christianity is a vision of reality. We take very basic motifs from the Scriptures and apply them to all other areas. All fields have suppositions and principles; what we do is scrutize what's taken for granted.

"We believe we have a better view of reality that gives better results. We can see reality better if we do our homework."

The institute hopes eventually to become a university and is in the midst of a $300,000 building campaign to relocate to larger quarters.

Two 'With It' Padres Bringing Out People

STANHOPE, P.E.I. (CP) — A couple of "with it" padres—a Roman Catholic priest and a United Church lay minister—have come up with a new formula for getting people together.

Rev. Pierre Arsenault of Charlottetown, a 12-string guitarist, and Tom Faulkner of Toronto, troubadour with a banjo, stroll around the beach and camping areas of Prince Edward Island's north shore tourist resorts seeking out groups who might like a sing-song.

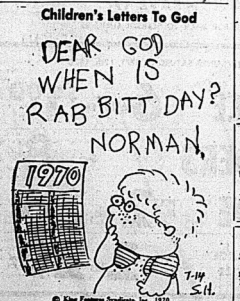
Both men were to establish tourist ministries in the north shore area when they met by accident and decided to pool resources.

They have come up with a unique Sunday night service and a coffee-house, too.

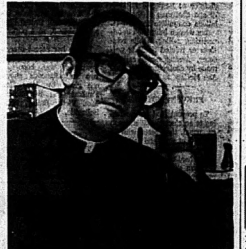
The informal service is held at the Marco Polo Land camp ground. People bring their own blankets and sit on the grass on a hill with a view, and everybody takes part.

"It's very much an experimental type of thing—we are trying to develop a service that is ecumenical and meaningful," Mr. Faulkner said. "We alternate between French and English."

After the service everyone sits around a roaring campfire for a sing song and meet-your-neighbor session.



Mr. Faulkner's wife Pat, recreation director at the camp ground, found that many of the youngsters who work at tourist centres during the summer, as well as young visitors, had nothing to do in the evenings.



So the Faulkners hold a coffee-house in the basement of Cavendish United Church two evenings a week.

"There are lots of games and records and when they want to dance it's just a matter of moving back the tables."

Live entertainment has been provided by a visiting rock band.

Messiahism Tested

Abbe Jacques Soucy, pastor of Notre Dame de Grace parish in Montreal, has been conducting an experiment at his 120-year-old Roman Catholic church. The "experiment was to stimuate reflection on "messianism," and saw the church decorated with posters of Che Guevara, druggies and scientific equipment. (CP Photo)

A Reading Machine Was Once A Chair

Today, reading machine means a mechanical device designed to improve the speed and skill of a reader. In the 18th century a reading machine was a chair.

An 18th century reading machine looked like a chair designed backwards. You straddled the seat and rested your arms on the padded back. It supported a book rest that looked like a modern music stand with swing arms to hold candles.

By the early 19th century the reader was allowed to lean back rather than forward and reading machines began to be called easy chairs. They are recognizable as the prototypes of modern la-z-boy and other chairs that incorporate a back and foot action.

The chair illustrated was made in Boston about 1830 and is thought to stem from design No. 31 of Ackermann's Repository of the Arts, published in 1813 in England.

The arm of the chair which appears solidly fixed is attached to a brass ratchet and can be adjusted as the back reclines. Under the seat is a removable foot rest which can be adjusted to any level by a further set of ratchets.

In the period this chair was made, spring upholstery had just been invented and was not common. This chair tends to be very firm, although the design, elegant in outline, is such that it is comfortable, particularly by 19th century standards.

In England, R. Daws, St. Square, London, patented a Recumbent Easy Chair, almost identical to the one illustrated. He offered a reward of £500 to anyone for information regarding attempts to infringe on his patent. Each of his chairs bears a label which announced that his name was stamped in the wood of every R. Daws' Patent Recumbent Easy Chair.

There is no date on Daws' labels. From the design it would appear that his chairs must have been about mid 19th century. At this same period in the century, deep upholstering with springing and buttoning became the fashion and the recumbent easy chair declined into a steamer chair, sweeping chapel train. Her four - tiered shoulder length veil was held by a circlet of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of pink carnations and pink sweetheart rosebuds.

Bridesmaid, Miss Joyce Campion, wore a floor length empire style gown in pale pink crystal crepe, and her bouquet was white carnations and Queen Elizabeth roses.

Best man was James Bedore, and usher was John Bedore, brothers of the bride.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at Marble Point Lodge. For their wedding trip to the Haliburton Highlands, the bride travelled in a coat dress of ice blue crimplene with white accessories, and her corsage was a white orchid.

On return they will reside in London, where the groom will attend Western University.

not to be revived until this century.

Daws' chairs or copies of them turn up in Canada. His label appears on them but his name is not always stamped in the wood, which might indicate that he leased his designs and labels and some of his chairs were made here.

Patent reclining easy chairs, if in working order, are just as comfortable now as they were 140 years ago. They are rare, but many sometimes be picked up for the same price as a good new easy chair, about $150 to $250.

WEDDING

BROOKS — BEDORE

MARMORA — Wedding vows were exchanged on August 21, 1970, between Ann Marie Bedore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Bedore, Marmora, and Thomas Brooks, son of Mrs. George Brooks, Marmora, and the late Mr. Brooks. The ceremony in St. Paul's Anglican Church, Marmora, was performed by the Very Rev. Dean H. G. Fleming of St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, assisted by pastor, Rev. David Saunders. Wedding music was provided by Mrs. Felming.

Given in marriage by her brother, David Bedore, due to illness of her father, the bride chose a full length gown of white satin with embroidered applique on the bodice and full skirt which extended to a

Points for Parents

Father: "Why do you buy Susie everything she wants? You know we couldn't afford another new dress."

Mother: "I hate to say 'No,' when she asks for something. I love her too much to deny her the things she wants."

Genuine parental love permits a parent to say "No," to a child clearly and forcefully when this seems necessary.

Susie: "I have to have a new dress. Everybody has seen all the dresses I have. I won't go to the party if I have to wear an old dress."

Mother: "You may suit yourself about going to the party. You've only worn your pink dress a few times, and we cannot afford to buy another new dress now."

SCHOOLS AND SCHOLARS

"There is no short cut to the mastery of words, techniques and ideas." — Sir Eric Ashby, past Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge University.

* * *

Recently, Sir Eric Ashby, "scholar, teacher, academic leader; citizen of England and the world," sponsored by the Whidden Lectures for 1970, spoke at McMaster University before large audiences drawn from the public and the university community alike.

His series of lectures, entitled, "Chancellors, Masters and Scholars," were given, it is reported, with wit, concern and intelligence, which covered a sensitive area of student revolt, rights and responsibilities.

Here are a few salient points:

Referring to present student protests in perspective, Sir Eric gave two examples of unrest in British Universities in the 1930's. The Student Reform Committee (S.R.C.) had its origin at that time. Concern and responsibility for education activities were shown and managed to establish lasting rights for University Student Committees.

Then World War I disrupted the S.R.C. In 1918 a reconstruction program began, whereby all students would work for peace and a better world. But it was "disillusioned by the government's peace plans, which Lawrence of Arabia summed up" . . . "old men took from us our victory and made it into their own world again."

World War II created a strong sense of collective responsibility in students. Their aim was to be a real force in a sick world, and they organized the National Union of Students (N.U.S.U.S.). This committee succeeded indefen ding free speech, protecting students from injustices and improving style content of higher education in Britain.

In regard to students' demand for more power in management, Sir Eric raised two questions regarding students' complaints. 1) To what extent are the demands for rights to govern, legitimate? To what ends will these rights go when acquired? The University is a guild of masters and apprentices; not a mini-state composed of members with equal knowledge on how to run it. He also points out that, as an apprentice the student is valuable educationally, but that the competence of a consumer, who exposes the faculty to criticism and destroys the natural assumption that the teacher is better than the student.

Participation, he says, in government is an important education in itself. The university depends on consent from all its members. The faculty and administration, however, provides needed information on which students may base their consent.

The art of participation is hard to teach. The students charge hypocrisy, he says, yet persuade police to action as they cry "Brutality". The student, he feels, is too precocious in his views and topics instead of academic pursuits, saying:

"It is part of the university's responsibility to transmit the heritage of rational thought and to train it to use wisely, now and for the future" and reminds before the world can be changed, the students must know what they are changing.

"When the student entered university, he voluntarily submitted himself to learn the orthodoxy of a subject and then the art of dissent . . . his training was to be developed and it takes courage to face the truth."

In view of the fact that "students are rejecting much that their masters are offering" they must have some sort of moral compass to guide them in their self - imposed duties to society . . . the best help the masters can give is to challenge them to succeed," concludes Sir Eric.

MR. AND MRS. PETER SALAR

SALAR — SHANNIK

Sharon Gail Lash, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Shannik of Frankford became the bride of Peter Salar, son of Frank Salar of Palmer Rapids at a ceremony conducted by Rev. Doug Robinson in Bethel Chapel on August 29.

Barbara Vardy at the organ and Claire Rupnow, soloist, provided music for the occasion.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in an empire-style A-line dress of sheer imported nylon over satin with nylon flowers on the bodice. It featured long full sheer sleeves with wide cuffs. A sheer long veil with four layers of scalloped short veiling fell from her headpiece composed of baby roses. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and stephanotis.

Kayla Forbes, the bride's sister, who was the maid of honor, wore a yellow empire style dress of flowing nylon sheer with full sheer sleeves. Her matching headpiece was composed of Shasta daisies and white 'mums. She also carried a basket of matching flowers.

The bridesmaids, Margaret Salar, sister of the bride; Mrs. Beverly Parks and Mrs. H. Fredrick were dressed identically to the maid of honor. Paula and Kelly Forbes, nieces of the bride, were flower girls. They were dressed in costumes similar to those of the bridesmaids and carried baskets of flowers.

Greg Rupnow (nephew of the bride) was the ring bearer.

Wayne Jordinson was the best man and the ushers were Mike Jowett, Wayne Varrie, and Jim Forbes.

For the reception held in Batawa Recreation Hall the bride's mother wore a jade green brocaded dress and coat ensemble with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. The bridegroom's mother chose a royal blue crepe silk dress with matching coat and accessories. Pink roses completed her outfit.

For the wedding trip to Quebec and the Maritime Provinces the bride left in a mint green empire style coat dress with beige accessories and a corsage of gardenias and stephanotis. Upon return they will live in Palmer Rapids.

Mary Gives Favorite Chili Sauce Recipes

By MARY MOORE

Appreciative Note: I am making a progress report. In a batch of 56 readers' letters there were none without an address; there were six without stamped self - addressed envelopes; there were 24 with stamped self-addressed envelopes and 26 with stamped self-addressed envelopes and 10 cents. Keep up the good work and one day we will have a perfect record. Thank you from Mary.

QUESTION: Will you please give us your best chili sauce? My tomatoes are ripening so fast I do not know what to do with them. — Hilda R.

ANSWER: My favorite is the variation with fruit in it but I have given you two choices.

CHILI SAUCE
(with fruit)

30 average-sized ripe tomatoes
6 ripe pears
6 ripe peaches
6 sweet red peppers
2 large onions
4 cups brown sugar
1 qt. vinegar
2½ tbsps. salt
2 tbsps. whole cloves
4 tbsps. stick cinnamon (broken)
2 tbsps. whole allspice

Wash, scald in boiling water and slip skins from tomatoes, peel onions; quarter, core and peel pears; scald and peel peaches; remove seeds and ribs from peppers. Cut up tomatoes, onions, peppers. Place all together in kettle. Add spices tied in cheesecloth bag, and other ingredients. Cook slowly 2½ hrs. or until of chili sauce consistency, stirring frequently. Seal in sterile jars.

P.G.'s CHILI SAUCE

3 cups finely chopped inner celery
2 cups chopped onion
¼ cup pickling salt (not iodized table salt)
2 cups sugar
1 cup cider vinegar (or spirit vinegar)
½ cn. (2 tbsps.) mustard seed
1-16 tsp. cayenne pepper
1 medium green pepper chopped finely

One 6-oz. can tomato paste

Pour boiling water over about 1/3 of tomatoes to blanch for 1 min. Peel and cut into eighths then measure 12 cups, well packed. (If you have a 1-qt. measure fill it three times to the 4-cup line.) Stir in the chopped celery and onion and sprinkle over the pickling salt and stir in and let stand overnight. In the morning drain off excess liquid through colander but do not press it. Turn into large kettle (not enamel) and add sugar, vinegar, mustard seed and cayenne and boil 45 min. or until celery and tomatoes are cooked to a mush, stirring frequently. Now add finely chopped green pepper and the tomato paste and boil 15-30 min. longer or until green pepper is tender and all is of chili sauce consistency. Pour into sterile jars and seal.

Dinner Menu

Barbecued Chicken (see Thursday, September 3rd); Potato Salad; Tomatoes Vinaigrette; Celery Hearts; Peach Pie; Cheddar Cheese; Tea.

Ann Landers
Cheapskate Cannot Outgrow Problem

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please tell me is something wrong with my mind, like mental illness, I mean. I am twelve years old and I am so cheap it is disgusting. I just love it when somebody buys me an ice cream cone or gives me half a candy bar. And I am thrilled when I get a present of any kind. But when it comes to spending a dime on someone else I can always think of a dozen reasons why I shouldn't.

I have almost all my allowance. Right now I have $43 put away. On Mother's Day I made up a poem so I wouldn't have to spend any money on a present. My mother was very pleased and even said it was a better gift than anything money could buy. On Father's Day I did the same thing. The poem I composed for my dad wasn't as good as Mom's and I think maybe he caught on to me.

Please explain why a 12-year-old should act like this. Will I outgrow it? — CHEAPSKATE.

(P.S. I asked my Mom for a postage stamp to mail this letter although I have stamps of my own. See what I mean?)

DEAR CHEAP: Yeah, I see what you mean — and you are not going to outgrow it. You'll probably get worse unless you make a conscious effort to improve. Decide what you consider your responsibilities (apparently a Mother's Day gift falls into this category, although it need not), then force yourself to act on it. After a while, you will establish a pattern of "coming through" when you feel you should and it won't be so painful.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was going with a man I loved very much (still do). A couple of months ago, I thought for sure I was pregnant. I was certain he would marry me but I was wrong. Instead he gave me $2500 and told me I could do what I wanted — put a down payment on a house, get an abortion or leave town. Marriage wasn't even mentioned as an alternative.

I decided to buy a house and stay in town, hoping he'd change his mind. Now I find I am not pregnant and never was. I was too ashamed to admit that to him so I lied and said I had a miscarriage. He believed me. Last week he told me in plain language that our romance is finished because he cannot afford any more scares like the one I gave him. He also said, "For a 26-year-old girl you are too dumb for me."

I am wearing the house and giving him a percentage of the rent. But I feel guilty because I lied to him. Should I tell the truth so I can sleep better at night? I promise to do as you say. — MESSED UP AT 26.

* * *

DEAR 26: Tell him the truth. Since he gave you the money and the choices, the house belongs to you. I hope now you will sleep better at night — and alone.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am dating a very attractive girl (age 24.) The trouble is, she is too attractive. She attracts all kinds of guys and I am beginning to think she does it on purpose. Whenever we go any place she starts conversations with strangers. I've told her I don't like it. She says she has a naturally outgoing personality, and I should be proud of her friendliness. Please comment. — BIG FRANK.

DEAR FRANK: Sounds as if the girl's "outgoing personality" is going out in too many directions. Don't make any serious plans (like marriage) until you learn the limits to her friendliness.

Magnify Opposition

SHERBROOKE Que. (CP)- sociologist Nora McGrath e11 says the most difficul means of parental control for the teen-ager to handle is one based on reason. Young people feel "tricked" when they can't find a legitimate outlet for their antagonism and have little choice but to profong the quarrel by magnifying any supposed opposition.

'A Friendly Snack' Makes for Relaxation

By DORIS CLARK

For Teens Only: Have you ever thought what a friendly snack does for any get-together? Besides quieting those hunger pangs — which can be just belated —

Suppose your drama group meets at a member's home for rehearsal, or a Junior Red Cross executive concentrates on a welfare project, or a Boys' Club meeting has been serious and tiring.

Then the period is over and you can go home. But how grateful you are to be offered sandwiches and ginger ale or cocoa and doughnuts and a chance to bubble over in light talk!

Not only is refreshment welcome but you just can't be too stiff and retiring while you are eating. Every group needs a spirit of friendliness and a chance for members to get to know one another. Nibbling on a doughnut or slurping a beverage together makes this easy.

When planned properly the food can be served simply. Write in for my new leaflet, "The Friendly Snack", which gives planning ideas and menus, and easy recipes for gingerbread, sour cream cookies, chocolate meringues which you can use when your turn comes around to be host or hostess. Enclose 10 cents and a six - cent - stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Doris: I have had a cancer phobia for the past 10 years. Whenever anything really upsetting comes along I get indigestion and perhaps a little showing of blood. Then I worry about cancer and it sends me into a panic.

The fear is not logical and I am all right when I talk to my psychiatrist. When I get really scared I phone my doctor and he reassures me.

My husband is a dear, although he cannot help me at all. His advice is pull up your socks and stop worrying. I tried to take a correspondence course to finish high school but when it came to taking an exam I was so scared of failing that I quit.

I would like to try to write but there also I feel I could not possibly be good enough. — Feeling Useless.

Dear Feeling: If the symptoms have been going on for 10 years without getting any worse and only happening off and on, why not believe your doctor?

What you have is a failure phobia. It isn't reasonable, but emotions won't go by reason.

You are going to have to prove something to yourself through painful deliberate effort — like sitting at your desk and beginning to write something whether you want to or not. There are books to be read and courses to be had to help, but your own deliberate determination comes first.

Write and report when you've taken some action.

* * *

Confidential to Couldn't Care Less: It is not a happy state of affairs when a girl cannot talk comfortably to her parents. They see you as their little girl; you see yourself as nearly adult. They are nervous that you will harm yourself.

Could you begin sharing family duties so that they will look upon you as getting grown up? Just how much responsibility do you take for your own bed, bedroom, books, clothes? Do you know how to help with the cooking?

Details Still Not Public on ETV Shows

TORONTO (CP) — Details of programming from Canada's first full-scale educational television station at Toronto will not be available until a few days before the station goes on the air as experts struggle with the problems of education for adults and pre-school children.

Channel 19, operated by the CBC to carry programming ordered by the new Ontario Educational Communications Authority, goes on the air Sept. 28 with facilities capable of reaching an audience of 2.7 million in south central Ontario.

Available to the authority are about 3,500 programs ranging in length from 20 minutes to a little more than half an hour, most of them prepared by the old educational television branch of the provincial education department.

Channel 19 has power enough to broadcast to schools in an area bounded by St. Catharines, Oshawa and Brampton.

Details of the actual programming will not be made public until Sept. 22 when the 13-member authority reveals how it intends to use the broadcasts to educate elementary and secondary pupils, colleges and university students, adults and pre-school children.

The authority is headed by Ram Ide, former director of the ETV branch.

Channel 19 will broadcast on ultra-high frequency, the only facility available in the Toronto area. Only the newest TV sets are equipped to receive UHF and it costs up to $50 each to convert older sets.

This is no problem in schools, which can be equipped to record the broadcasts on tape for showing to classes at the convenience of teachers. But if ETV is to fulfil its function as a cradle-to-grave educational process, it must be available in low-income adults and pre-school children of poor families who are most in need of educational facilities outside of the schools.

About 2,200 schools will receive first broadcasts from Channel 19. The rest of the province now receiving ETV programs on tape or film for in-school use will be served directly through additional transmitters as provincial funds become available.

Stanfield On Course

The Progressive Conservative leader helped feed yearling bulls on Len Berg's farm near here.

It was part of what Mr. Stanfield called his familiarizing education in agriculture, particularly the problems faced by western producers.

During the morning he toured the two sections operated by Mr. Berg, president of the Battle River PC Association. He looked at crops and spent considerable time among the herd of 40 registered Herfords and tried his hand at operating a swather.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"I'm glad to hear you'd rather fish than eat. I forgot to pack your lunch."

SEPT-ILES, Que. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau received a thundering round of applause Friday when he congratulated Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa for his co-operation with Quebec Cartier Mining Co. in a project to develop a major open-pit iron-ore project in northeastern Quebec.

The project was announced earlier Friday by Lewis J. Pattison, president of Quebec Cartier Mining, who said that plans for the second phase in the development of the project will be implemented immediately.

He made the announcement after meeting with Mr. Bourassa in Quebec City.

The project will result in an annual production capacity of 16 million tons of concentrates at Mount Wright near the Quebec-Labrador border.

Mr. Trudeau told about 2,000 persons who came to greet him that French-speaking Quebecers should take an active part in national problems.

In the second day of his three-day visit to northeastern Quebec and the Gaspe peninsula, Mr. Trudeau said that Quebecers in the past have tended to retreat too much within their own boundaries.

He said French-Canadians are strong enough to promote in the province "an authentic and stimulatig culture—predominantly French of course—but not to the point where the English-speaking minority will feel threatened or deprived."

The prime minister also mentioned the necessity of modifying the white paper on taxation as regards the mining industry.

Ottawa Vindicates Cahill's Fears While Alouettes Hope to Pull Ahead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa Rough Riders have supplied the vindication and now it will be up to Toronto Argonauts to supply coach Leo Cahill with the victory.

While his Argos were being described as the 1970 Canadian Football League champions even before the season started, Cahill insisted that the Rough Riders remained the power in the Eastern Conference.

His assertion was vindicated last Wednesday when the Riders beat the conference-leading Montreal Alouettes.

"If you look back you'll find that I said before the season started that Ottawa was the team to beat," said Cahill as his charges prepared to meet the Riders in Ottawa in one of four Labor Day CFL contests.

In the other EFC encounter Monday, Montreal visits Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Out west, Edmonton Eskimos visit Calgary Stampeders and Winnipeg Blue Bombers are in Regina to meet Saskatchewan Roughriders.

The CTV national network has set up a double-header program with the Calgary game being televised at 3 p.m. EDT and the Ottawa game following at 8 p.m. EDT.

All four Eastern clubs have made lineup changes for Monday's action.

A new figure in the Argos' defensive backfield will be Don Sutherin, cut by Ottawa before the season started. He joined the Argos at Regina when they lost 36-14 to Saskatchewan and this will be his first time in the Argo uniform.

"I've been waiting for a chance to play this game ever since I was cut," Sutherin said. "It hurts a man's pride when he's cut for no reason."

Taking over injured Dick Thornton's position at left cornerback should give Sutherin an opportunity to show if he or two Ottawa passes.

Cahill said he's not sure whether he'll use Sutherin as a place-kicker instead of quarterback Don Jones.

"It will depend on the situation," said Cahill. "Jones kicked two field goals in the last game, but Sutherin has a lot of experience kicking under pressure and it may be that we'll need him in there."

The Riders announced Friday they have dropped defensive back Tom Deacon to make room for flanker Whit Tucker who is returning from a knee injury he suffered last May. However, Tucker is not expected to play Monday. He is recovering from a knee operation.

The Riders may be announcing more cuts if they decide to keep any of three new players in camp for tryouts.

Quarterback Barclay Allen, picked up on waivers from Edmonton, defensive back Jim Smith from Denver Broncos of the National League and tight end Dave Fivez, a former Argo who has played for Los Angeles Rams and Denver, are the new players trying for a place with the Riders.

Coach Sam Etcheverry has a couple of injured Alouettes on his hands and at least one will have to be replaced for Monday's game in Hamilton.

Defensive back Lewis Cook suffered a knee injury against Ottawa and his replacement will likely be Richie Davies, who is just returning after a leg injury. Also with a knee injury is offensive back Dick Smith.

Alouettes will have to win Monday if they hope to stay within striking distance of first place Toronto, Ottawa and Hamilton each have four points, just two fewer than Montreal going into the weekend action.

And Tiger coach Jim Reside feels his team has been "strengthened immeasurably" by the addition of three new players.

Reside has picked up middle linebacker Allen Ray Aldridge, cut earlier by the Argos; defensive halfback Mack Lamb in a trade with the Calgary Colombia Lions and offensive end Al Irwin, who came back from a brief retirement.

Reside also has offensive tackle Charley Turner back from the 30-day injury list. He cut defensive end Bill Shiry and Lonnie Match to make room for the newcomers.

Sports Fans Generally Left 'High and Dry'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For most Canadian sports fans, the only way they can sit in the stands and quaff beer while watching their hometown heroes is to do it illegally.

Or, they can sit at home, watch the game on television and make trips to the refrigerator during commercials.

However, a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press has revealed this paradox.

In Montreal, fans can drink beer while they cheer from the stands at Expos baseball games, but can't imbibe in their seats at hockey or football games.

In Winnipeg, they now will be able to quaff beer in the stands at football and hockey games, but not at home games of the Winnipeg Whips of baseball's International League.

Most provinces allow the sale of liquor at sporting events but confine it to stadium beer or with meals. But consumption is not permitted in the seating areas.

Montreal became the second Canadian city to allow beer-drinking in the stands when the Manitoba Licensing Board approved an application by Winnipeg Enterprises Ltd., which owns Winnipeg Stadium and Winnipeg Arena.

But that doesn't mean sipping in the seats doesn't go on in other cities.

"I think most of the patrons take along their own mickey (anyway)," said G. H. Burns, Saskatchewan liquor licensing commission chairman.

In Toronto, police were told recently to crack down on drinking at CNE Stadium, home of Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

John Bassett, chairman of the Argos and Maple Leaf Gardens, owners of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, said he was "personally very much opposed" to beer sales in the stands.

"Having it available somewhere nearby is fine but when I've been in sports stadiums it's for what I never thought it added anything to the game."

Harold Ballard, a member of the Gardens' board, said that at Chicago stadium "they threw beer all over the place."

In British Columbia, a recent royal commission advocated sale of beer at sports events, but the provincial government has yet to act on the proposal although it has implemented others such as lowering the drinking age to 18.

B.C. and Saskatchewan have the lowest drinking age in Canada but Manitoba will be the leader when the legal age drops to 18 from 21 Sept. 15. In Quebec it is 20 and in other provinces 21.

Here is a summary of legislation governing drinking at public events across the country:

Newfoundland — Beer sold only in licensed spots such as golf clubs and curling rinks and must be consumed in designated areas. No licence for live theatres or movie theatres, but the cultural centre in St. John's has a licence.

Nova Scotia—Beer and liquor can be sold at licensed sports centres, but must be consumed with meals. Bars, taverns and beverage rooms sell liquor with meals on Sundays.

New Brunswick — Liquor is available at sports centres such as golf clubs but is not sold at stadia. It is not sold at universities, theatres or movie houses. Dining rooms and sporting clubs may sell liquor on Sundays.

Prince Edward Island — Liquor is available only in licensed club areas at sporting events and live theatre performances. There are no hotels on university campuses. Dining rooms and sporting clubs may sell on Sundays.

Quebec — In addition to being sold in the stands at Expos baseball games, beer may be sold at football and hockey games, but not brought into the stands. Quebec permits sale of beer and alcohol at theatres, concert halls and theatres. Universities may also get permits to sell beer and liquor is permitted with meals on Sundays from noon to 10 p.m.

Ontario — Liquor is sold at private clubs in hockey and football stadiums but not permitted in the stands. It is also sold at sporting clubs and at live theatre performances. Student and faculty clubs at universities are permitted to sell liquor. Licensed dining rooms may sell liquor with meals between noon and 10 p.m. on Sundays.

Manitoba — Beer may be consumed in stands at football and hockey games. Winnipeg Arena already has a licensed lounge, as do theatres and concert halls where liquor may be consumed in the lounge area. Liquor sales are not yet permitted in movie houses. Universities are permitted licensed student beverage rooms.

Saskatchewan — Liquor sales are prohibited at sports events but allowed in theatres when live performances are staged. The University of Saskatchewan at Regina had a "pub night" each Thursday last month when beer was sold. Sundays are dry.

Alberta — Liquor licences are not granted for public functions although special permits are available for stadium clubhouses and the mezzanine floors of arenas. University groups can apply for beverage rooms, dining lounge and private club licences. Drinking is permitted in licensed dining rooms on Sundays.

British Columbia — No liquor is sold at sports events but may be at licensed areas of race tracks and concert halls and theatres. Universities may also get permits to sell beer and liquor is permitted with meals on Sundays from noon to 10 p.m.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Quarterback Joe Kapp, holding out for a $1.25 million contract over five years after leading Minnesota's Vikings to the National Football League championship last season, Friday was at the home of his business partner Peter Wall about 10 miles south of here. Knapp is a director of Wall and Redekop Real Estate Ltd., of which Wall is president. Kapp has remained in virtual isolation for two weeks and messages left at the Wall home go unanswered. Kapp has left, contract negotiations in the hands of his lawyer, John Elliott Cook of Glenbrook, Nev., who said from there Thursday that the impasse is "frozen about as tight as it can at the moment."

ATLANTA, (AP) — Cassius Clay, who still claims the world heavyweight title, will box either Jerry Quarry of Bellflower, Calif., or Argentina's Oscar Bonavena in Atlanta Oct. 26, a promoter said Friday. The understanding here is that it most likely will be Quarry, ranked No. 1 contender by Ring Magazine and No. 3 by the World Boxing Association. Clay now has a license to box in Atlanta. He boxed eight rounds against three opponents here Wednesday in his first public fighting appearance in more than three years.

* * *

MONTREAL (CP) — Running back Tony Lorick, a six-year National Football League veteran, has joined Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference for a five-day trial, the team announced Friday. Lorick played four years with Baltimore Colts and spent the last two seasons with New Orleans Saints. Also in the Als' camp for five-day trials are two other late NFL cuts. They are Bob Campbell, a six-foot, 205-pound running back cut by Pittsburgh Steelers, and George Burrell, a five-foot 10-inch, 180-pound free safety released by Denver Broncos.

* * *

WINNIPEG (CP) — A world invitational gymnastics championship will be held here Nov. 1-15, co-sponsored by Manisphere, formerly the Red River Exhibition, and the federal fitness and amateur sports directorate, it was announced Friday. Four countries have accepted invitations, Russia, Japan, Yugoslavia, and the United States.

* * *

CHICAGO (AP) — Chuck Tanner, manager of Hawaii Islanders in the Pacific Coast League, was named manager Friday of Chicago White Sox. Tanner, 41, an eight-season manager in the California Angels' minor-league system, was hired by Stu Holcomb, new Sox general manager, to replace Don Gutteridge, who was dismissed Wednesday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Fanfreluche, a Canadian-bred daughter of 1964 Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner Northern Dancer, heads a field of 11 three-year-old fillies today for the 75th running of the Coaching Handicap at Belmont Park. Franfreluche is ruled a 5-to-2 favorite after winning the Alabama last month at Saratoga following an earlier victory in the Manitoba Derby.

* * *

TORONTO (CP) — Boxing promoter Vince Bagnato announced Friday heavyweight Paul Nilsen has signed for a bout here Sept. 24 with Charlie Chase of Montreal.

* * *

BROOKVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — New York Giants announced Friday they had asked waivers on defensive end Vernon Vanoy, reducing their National Football League squad to 48 players. The move leaves an open spot on the roster which may be filled by centre Greg Larson, who is on the injured waived list.

* * *

TORONTO (CP) — CNE officials announced Friday that Lachie Stewart, Scotland's 10,000-metre champion in the Commonwealth Games in July, has withdrawn from a 16-mile championship race here Sunday. No reason for the withdrawal was given.

Cover-Up Ordered

FORREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — A mild furore was raised in the United States Open tennis championships Friday when the tournament referee banned a see-through dress worn by a pretty Swedish competitor.

"I was never so embarrassed in my life," said Ingrid Bentzer of Stockholm. "Capt. Mike Gibson came up to me in my first-round match and told me I couldn't wear the dress I had on.

"He said it was illegal. I felt as if I had violated good taste."

The incident provided the biggest tennis style scandal since Gussie Moran's lace panties shook up the staid British at Wimbledon in 1949.

"I was playing Peaches Bartkowicz," Miss Bentzer, 22, blonde, long-haired and shapely said, "Capt. Gibson came on the court and said I must wear another dress.

"I told him I had no other tennis dress. He said I might finish my match but not to wear it again. I was mortified."

Miss Bentzer was beaten by Miss Bartkowicz 6-2, 6-2.

"I see nothing wrong with the dress," she said. "It is made of very frail lace with a skin colored lining."

Brewer Retires— For Last Time?

TORONTO (CP) — Carl Brewer, Detroit Red Wings all-star defenceman, said Friday he will be relieved when the National Hockey League is "as permanent as anything is permanent."

The Detroit organization announced earlier the 31-year-old Brewer, who came out of a four-year retirement last year to help the Red Wings, had notified them of his plans in a letter to Detroit president Bruce A. Norris.

Brewer said the Red Wings were aware at the end of last season there was a 50-50 chance he wouldn't return.

"I had a talk with them over the summer and so (Norris) wasn't entirely surprised," said Brewer. "The final decision came this week, but I'd been there earlier."

Detroit said Brewer had already signed his 1970 contract. The defenceman said the contract doesn't "say you play hockey or else." It merely signifies that should you play hockey, it would be with the club where you have a contractual agreement.

The smooth-skating Brewer said he intends to devote more time to his family and a sports equipment importing business that's "requiring more of my time and it's located here in Toronto."

He was acquired by Detroit from Toronto Maple Leafs in March, 1968, along with Frank Mahovlich, Pete Stemkowski and Garry Unger in a trade that sent Norm Ullman, Paul Henderson and Floyd Smith to the Leafs.

Soviets Gain Ground on U.S. at Universities Games

TURIN, Italy (CP) — The Soviet Union today has a chance to tie or overtake the United States in number of gold medals as the second-last day of the sixth World Universities Games.

The U.S. still leads the medals standings with 30 golds, mostly won in swimming. But the Soviet Union, well behind after the first week of competition and now trailing by two golds only, has become a challenger.

Of the 10 gold medals at stake today three are considered in the range of the Soviet team.

In the hop, skip and jump event Nikolai Dudkin and Viktor Sanayev, both of the Soviet Union, were rated favorites.

In the decathlon Nikolai Avilov, the Soviet leader of the standings after the first day of competition, was expected to strengthen his leadership in today's final events.

Lastly, the Soviet team was the favorite to win the women's volleyball.

The Americans could hope for a gold only in the men's basketball tournament ending tonight. But they had a tough opponent —the Soviets.

A Russian victory in basketball could put the Soviets in first place for gold medals.

Last Grenades competing only in track and field, already has collected five golds in three days. It was expected to score other wins in today's events, including the finals of women's shot-put, the men's 800-metre, 5,000-metre steeplechase and the women's high jump.

Grant McLaren of Guelph, Ont., qualified for the 3,000 metre steeplechase Friday when he placed third in one of the two semi-finals. He was timed at 8:58.8, compared with the 8:44.4 of Michal Zolev of Bulgaria.

In the men's team spec, closing event of the fencing tournament, the gold was a private affair between Hungary and West Germany, with Italy and Cuba fighting for the third and fourth place.

Also the men's volleyball was to end tonight to leave the closing day's honors to track and field.

In their tournament the deciding game was between Japan and the host team, Italy.

Interest about yesterday's no-deep final hundreds of fans forced out of the sold-out sports palace, increased today. Friday night, threatening to tear down the doors.

'Power Failure' Leaves Pittsburgh All Wet in Philadelphia Washout

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rain and an automatic tarpaulin that wouldn't work properly ended Pittsburgh Pirates game with the visiting Philadelphia Phillies in the seventh inning Friday night. They'll play the rest of the game before tonight's regularly scheduled contest.

Pittsburgh was ahead 4-1 and Philadelphia's Don Money had walked to open the seventh inning when the game was halted. Pirates, at this point, remain .0004 percentage points ahead of Chicago Cubs in the National League East race.

The Cubs beat the New York Mets 7-4, dropping their lead to 1½ games back.

Elsewhere in the NL, San Diego Padres clobbered Cincinnati Reds 15-3, Houston Astros downed Los Angeles Dodgers 7-3 and Montreal Expos edged St. Louis Cardinals 9-7 in 13 innings, San Francisco Giants at Atlanta Braves were rained out in the fifth inning with the Giants leading 1-0.

Solo homers by Richie Hebner, Bob Robertson and Willie Stargell staked the Pirates to their 4-1 lead. Steve Blass, who held the Phillies to five hits through six innings, will be replaced tonight by George Brunet. The Phils will wait to see what happens in the top of the seventh before they decide on a new pitcher.

Roberto Clemente of the Pirates injured his lower back as he grounded out in the first inning and left the game. It was not known how bad he'll be out.

Randy Hundley's two-run single in the seventh inning broke a 3-3 tie and sparked the Cubs to their first Wrigley Field victory over the Mets this season in seven starts. Paul Popovich made it a three-run inning with a sacrifice fly and Jim Hickman homered in the eighth. Hundley had doubled across the Cubs' first run in the second.

Art Shamsky hit a three-run homer in the sixth for New York to wipe out a 2-0 Chicago lead.

Pitcher Mike Corkins baked a grand slam homer and Clarence Gaston and Nate Colbert also connected as the Padres tagged Cincinnati ace Jim Merritt and three relievers for 18 hits. Bobby Tolan homered for the Reds.

Jim Maloney, making his first appearance for Cincinnati since he was injured last April, was touched for two runs in the sixth on Gaston's homer and two more in the seventh.

Jim Wynn singled to start a four-run uprising in the eighth inning. Hank Aaron homered the final run of the inning as the Astros beat the Dodgers. Tom Haller hit a two-run homer for the losers.

Gary Sutherland's sacrifice fly and a wild pitch gave Montreal two runs and a 9-7 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in 13 innings. Montreal took a 7-5 lead on two bases loaded walks in the 10th, but Joe Torre tied it with a two-run homer in the bottom of the inning.

Twins Blank Angels to Open Lead

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The California Angels management wailed an extra 15 minutes and kissed the fans got to their seats before starting the game. But once it began, Minnesota Twins Brant Alyea didn't wait long to do in the Angels.

With two out and two on in the first inning, Alyea drove a first pitch from Rudy May over the left field fence for his 13th home run and the Twins went on to a 4-0 victory that opened up a four-game lead over the second-place Angels in the American League West.

Alyea's homer which gave him eight runs batted in in his 14 at-bats against Angel pitching this year was enough to back the combined pitching of Bert Blyleven and Ron Perranoski who gave a California crowd of 38,199 little to cheer about.

Oakland Athletics blanked Kansas City Royals 5-0. Baltimore Orioles trounced New York Yankees 8-6, New York Yankees nipped Cleveland Indians 3-2, Detroit Tigers took Washington Senators 8-3 and Milwaukee Brewers edged the Chicago White Sox 3-2 in 10 innings in other AL games.

The 19-year-old Blyleven, who lives in Anaheim, retired the first 11 men he faced and had a two-hitter until he ran into trouble in the sixth. With one out, Tony Gonzales singled, Jim Fregosi walked and Alex Johnson beat out an infield hit to load the bases.

But Perranoski then came in to strike out pinch-hitter Billy Cowan and get Tommy Reynolds on a force play.

Don Mincher and Gene Tenace clouted homers and Jim Hunter, 15-12, pitched a five-hitter as Oakland beat Kansas City for its sixth straight victory to remain six games behind the Twins. It was Hunter's ninth try for his 16th victory. He had last won on July 30.

Brooks Robinson slammed five straight hits, including a solo homer and a three-run shot to key Baltimore's victory over Boston. Tony Conigliaro hit his second grand slam in four days, his 29th homer of the season, in the first when Boston chased Mike Cuellar, Baltimore's 21-game winner.

Jake Gibbs homered and then broke a 2-2 tie with an RBI single, giving the Yankees and reliefer Steve Hamilton victory over Cleveland.

Frank Howard doubled in two runs and then gave Washington a 3-2 lead with a run-scoring single in the eighth, but Detroit came back to win with four runs in the ninth, two coming on Elliott Maddox' double.

Floyd Wicker singled in Tommy Harper in the 10th for Milwaukee's victory over the White Sox.

Poor Selection and Training Hamper Canadian Rowing Efforts

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — The trouble with Canadian rowing is in the selection and training of oarsmen, says Darryl MacDonald, 34-year-old manager of the Canadian representatives to the third World Rowing Championships.

In two days of competition, Canadian crews have contested every event and come last in all but one—that one was the fours with coxswain in which they came third out of four boats in the second-chance repechages and were eliminated.

There are no Canadian boats in today's semi-finals and only one—the double-sculls—in the finals on Sunday. And the double sculls only got that far because there were only 12 entries in that event; they're rowing in the section to decide seventh through 12th positions.

"Our training methods are failing behind other countries," MacDonald said.

"As in most amateur sports, we are behind in sports medicine. The East Germans, for instance, have a psychologist with them. Their training takes in the psychiatric as well as the physical.

"Other athletes pass psychological tests and must be mentally tough as well as physically hard."

MacDonald, has been around rowing for 17 years, beginning in 1953 when at a football, basketball and lacrosse player he was challenged to try "a man's game."

In 1954 Canada rowed third in the coxed fours in the British Empire Games. He was in the bow of the coxless fours boat at the 1964 Olympic Games in Tokyo and occupied that seat in the coxless pairs in 1966 in the World Championships in Bled, Yugoslavia, and in the eightboat at the 1968 Olympic Games in Mexico City.

Canadian oarsmen, MacDonald says, are doing "an equal amount of work as those of other countries," but without such medical background as proper testing of equipment and the people to man it "there is no way of telling how the men are progressing.

"For the first time we've formed composite crews from the best oarsmen of the last year, but they were put up at the last minute. This is the first attempt by the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen to form composite crews."

MacDonald won't discuss reports that some of Canada's top men are watching the championships from the sidelines of the Royal Canadian Henley course nor speculation that there is athlete-coach friction keeping them there.

"If there are problems between the oarsmen and coaches, the CAAO is working to resolve them," he says.

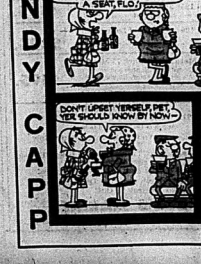
Tiger Hurler on Kuhn Carpet

NEW YORK (AP) — Detroit pitcher Denny McLain was ordered Friday by baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn to appear in New York Wednesday for a hearing in his probationary status and not to report to the Tigers until then.

The commissioner in his statement did not use the word suspended in taking the action against McLain, but in effect the problem-plagued hurler cannot pitch until a hearing is held.

McLain was suspended earlier this season by Kuhn and placed on probation after investigation disclosed he had attempted to become a partner of gamblers allegedly involved in bookmaking operations.



He was due to have a second suspension lifted Friday night. The week-long suspension was imposed by the Detroit club after McLain threw buckets of water at two writers who regularly cove the club.

Roughriders Rest Key Players in Weekend Winnipeg Battle

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With a four-point lead in the Western Football Conference, Saskatchewan Roughriders can afford to rest such key players as quarterback Ron Lancaster and fullback George Reed, both nursing minor injuries.

But Calgary Stampeders, who share second place with British Columbia Lions, have no intention of putting veteran quarterback Jerry Keeling on the sidelines.

"Why should I rest Keeling when he's the leading passer in the west," Calgary coach Jim Duncan said Friday. "We'd like to use Larry Lawrence more often but Jerry has been playing well and we're not about to change now."

The Roughriders, with six wins and a defeat, play host to Winnipeg Blue Bombers in one of two WFC Labor Day games Monday.

In Calgary, the Stampeders will take on Edmonton Eskimos in a game to be televised over the CTV national network starting at 2:30 p.m. MST.

Saskatchewan coach Eagle Keys says Don Weiss, acquired from Winnipeg earlier this year, will get a starting assignment, relegating Lancaster, bothered by an ailing right arm—to the backup position.

However, Keys admits that Weiss could be replaced if Keeling shows he's going well for the Roughriders.

Reed's status is in question mark. The 1,000-yard running veteran, hampered by a leg injury, could see limited action with Canadian fullback Steve Mobley leading over his duties. Reed leads the WFC in rushing with 519 yards on 116 carries.

Weiss could be facing another backup quarterback in Ron Johnson, although Winnipeg coach Jim Spavital won't confirm or deny that regular Wally Gabler will be on the bench.

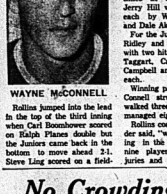
Gabler, inconsistent in most games this season, picked up a swollen ankle in Wednesday's 29-4 loss to Calgary.

The Stampeders and the Lions have eight points, four more than the Eskimos, who snapped a four-game losing streak Tuesday with a 26-9 win over B.C. Winnipeg is in the cellar with a 1-5 record.

Edmonton and Calgary, noted for low-scoring games in recent years, will be meeting for the second time this season. The Stampeders took a 21-10 decision in an exhibition contest at Calgary but lost 14-2 in a regular-season game in Edmonton.

Duncan also indicated the Stampeders would go through the air more often "in an attempt to loosen up the Eskimos' defence."

Keeling started the trend Wednesday and completed 24 of 46 passes while tossing four touchdown strikes to Herman Harrison.



Duncan said offensive guard John Atamian, picked up on waivers from Winnipeg, will dress against Edmonton. Also Granville Liggins, a doubtful starter with a groin injury, is listed on the Calgary lineup to served list as import would have to be cut to make room for Atamian.

Edmonton halfback Jim Thomas, who replaced the Eskimos after being cut from Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League, won't play in the Calgary game.

On a five-game trial, Thomas may have trouble breaking into the lineup with Ben Swann, ace halfback position, scored two touchdowns against B.C., and is one of the top backs playing in the WFC, while Alan Pilkabiby, another halfback, also turned in a strong game against the Lions.

Rollins Grab Lead In Commercial Finals

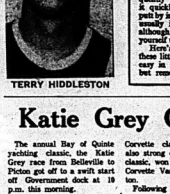
Wayne McConnell has not only proved he can pitch but also swing a bat as his single in the fifth was all that Rollins needed to score the winning run in a 5-3 Commercial League final ball game against Ellis Juniors. The builders now lead 2-1 in the best four-of-seven playoffs.

WAYNE McCONNELL

Rollins jumped into the lead in the top of the third inning when Carl Boomhower scored on Dale Duvall's double but the Juniors came back in the bottom to move ahead 2-1. Steve Ling scored on a fielder's choice and Wayne McTaggart tagged home plate on Dale Duvall's second baggie.

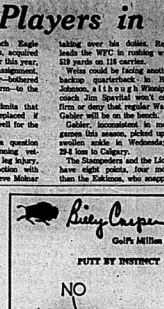
It was a new ball game going into the fifth inning as Terry Hiddleston and Dale Akey scored once for the winners in the fourth. Craig Rumpy replied for the Juniors to tie the game 3-3, and end the Ellis scoring.

In the fifth Ralph Plane scored the builders winning run on McConnell's single and the insurance marker came when Dale Akey reached first on an error and scored on Jerry Hill's double.



Ralph Plane took the batting honors for the losers getting three hits in three times at bat followed by Jerry Hill with two and one each by Wayne McConnell and Dale Akey.

For the Juniors, it was Rod Ridley and Steve Ling both with two hits and Wayne McTaggart, Craig Rumpy, John Campbell and Scott Reid one each.



Winning pitcher Wayne McConnell struck out nine and walked three while Scott Reid managed eight of each.

Rollins coach Garry Alexander said, "we have been playing in this series with only nine players because of injuries and job commitments and one of the main reasons besides McConnell's outstanding pitching is the fact Brian Smith and Terry Hiddleston are doing a great job filling in."

TERRY HIDDLESTON

On short putts (those from one to three feet) I think instinct is very good guide. You know that when someone "gives" you a short putt you frequently walk up and hit it quickly anyway. You putt by instinct there, and usually it goes right in although you didn't set yourself up.

Here's my advice for these little devils: take it easy in those putts, but remember that there isn't much time for break to take effect. Never aim outside the cup . . . just at the upper edge if there is a slant. Now settle yourself in your stance, take one last look at the cup and your intended line and immediately stroke the ball. If you wait for any length of time you may freeze and might miss even a "gimme."

Tykes, Kinsmen Stay On Play-down Road

It's a long, long road to an Ontario Baseball title, but two of the city's minor baseball entries are still in the running as the tyke all-stars and the Kinsmen Juniors will both open play - off series against Toronto opposition this weekend.

The Tykes, after defeated teams from Kingston and Peterborough en route to an Eastern Ontario crown, are set to meet Islington in a 1 p.m. Sunday game at the Park Dale diamond.

Meanwhile, the Kinsmen face a scheduling problem. After Islington forfeited game three of the quarter-finals of the Junior competition, Belleville was slated to go against the Perth Boys Club of Toronto, tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. in Park Dale.

The Toronto team has balked at the Sunday starting time, however, and a definite starting time has not yet been established. While Belleville team officials still hold slim hopes of holding a Sunday game, the most probable date for the opening game of the series would be Monday at 6 p.m. in Park Dale.

Whenever the opening date is determined, coach Moe Hunter hopes to go with pitching ace Garnie Adams. The slender hurler recorded the Kinsmen's second - game win over Burlington as well as losing a tough 1-0 decision in the series opener.

The Kinsmen coach credits his club's late season improvement with the fact that "we've been playing together for a while now and we're also getting solid infield play."

Tyke coach George Mills credits the fact that "we've been able to fight back from behind, and we're getting exceptionally good hitting from the bottom part of our line-up" with his club's success.

Either Peter Hall or Howie Cockburn will be on the mound, tomorrow in the first game of the best of three series.

Katie Grey Classic Gets Under Way

The annual Bay of Quinte yachting classic, the Katie Grey race from Belleville to Picton got off to a swift start off Government dock at 10 p.m. this morning.

Westerly winds at 10 to 15 knots promised to carry the 19 entries over the finish line at the entrance to Picton harbor late in the afternoon.

This year marks the third running of the 25 mile race, instituted to commemorate the early yachting history of the sponsoring body, Bay of Quinte Yacht Club.

The Katie Grey trophy, awarded to the winning yachtsman, is a historic piece of silverware, first awarded to the yacht Katie Grey in a sailing classic of the 1870s.

The cup turned up at an auction sale a few years ago, and was purchased and presented to the club by a group of interested sailors. Its return to the club after almost 90 years led to the inauguration of the Belleville to Picton race.

Odds this year are on a yacht now in the bay racing line - up, Kishwaba, a Vicking 38 owned by Dr. W. A. L. McDonald of Trenton. The Corvette class yachts are also strong contenders in the classic, won last year by the Corvette Varuna from Trenton.

Following the fleet is the BQYC committee boat, manned by Nan and Pete Petto, who started the race and will time the yachts over the finish line this evening in Picton.

The Katie Grey Cup will be presented to the winner by BQYC commodore Dick Bird at the annual Katie Grey dinner at Prince Edward Yacht Club tonight.

No Crowding In City School's Hockey Classes

The problem of "classroom crowding" won't affect the Belleville Hockey School this year, after it was decided at the first organizational meeting to limit the number of entries to 300 boys.

The school will be split into two one - week camps rather than last year's format of two straight weeks of instruction, with 150 boys attending each camp.

Officials feel that the new format will allow more personalized coaching for each boy enrolled than was available previously. "Because the citizens of Belleville are helping to underwrite the cost of the school", said chairman Joe Cox, "we felt it only fair that city residents be given first chance to enroll. If we fail to meet our quota then boys from the surrounding districts are welcome to attend."

Another feature of this year's school will be a separate camp for girls between the ages of 7-13, to be held after the boys' instruction periods.

Lionel Boily will definitely be in charge of instruction this year and, in a new development, it was decided to form one or two special instruction groups for players who participated in all - star competition last year.

Palmer Lesson Pays Off

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Jim Colbert credited a quick lesson from Arnold Palmer with his share of the first-round lead in the $100,000 Greater Hartford Open Golf Tournament.

Colbert had eight birdies en route to a five-under-par 66 in Friday's opening round and was tied for the top with Bob Murphy, Pete Brown and Paul Moran.

Colbert, a 29-year-old tour regular and a one-time Kansas State halfback, said he was on the practice tee next to Palmer last week at the Dow Jones Open and asked Palmer what he was doing wrong.

"He changed my grip," Colbert continued. "He moved my right hand around. I'd let it get too much under the club. He said 'Put it there,' and showed me.

The leading quartet held a one-stroke margin over a group of seven tied at 67, including Dean Refram, who had a brilliant 30 on the back nine.

There was another large group at 68 and about two dozen within four strokes of each other, including Bill Garrett who had a hole-in-one on the 215-yard, 17th hole en route to a 69.

Dave Stockton, Professional Golfers' Association champion, took a 72 with Lee Trevino and Frank Beard at 73. Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Billy Casper, Gary Player and Tony Jacklin are not competing.

Of the three Canadians entered, Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver had the best round, a 68. George Knudson of Toronto had a 73 and Ben Kern of Oakville, Ont., 74.

Rindt Dies In Crash

MONZA, Italy (AP) — Jochen Rindt, 28-year-old Austrian driving ace, was killed today when his Lotus Ford went off the track on a curve.

The accident happened during trials for Sunday's Monza Grand Prix Formula One auto race.

Cowan Five Off Pace In U. S. Amateur Play

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — "You mean I broke the old record by seven strokes and all I've got is a two-stroke lead?" 39-year-old Bob Rie Jr. exclaimed as he moved into the final round of the United States Am at 5-under-par 135 Championship here.

Rie, frm Austin, Tex., shot a one-over-par 71 Friday for a 54-hole total of 207 on the 6,496-yard Waverley Country Club course here.

Lanny Watkins, 20, of Richmond, Va., who lost the first-round lead, moved into second place with a 69 for a 209 total.

James Simons, 20, of Butler, Pa., was third at 210. Jim Gabrielsen, Atlanta, was at 211, followed by 1966 champ Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., at 212.

Rie made the exclamation of disbelief about his thin lead after official announced the 54-hole total. It equaled the three-round mark of 214 held by three others.

Cowan, who shot a 73, went two-over par on the 16th and 17th holes.

Although he is five strokes off the pace he said he feels he still has a good chance to win.

Wayne McDonald of Port Credit, Ont., was in 17th place with 222 after shooting a 74 in the third round.

British Labor Party Prepares For First Post-Election Debate

LONDON (CP) — The next annual conference of the British Labor party is more than three weeks away but the organization already is alive with debate about future policy following its defeat in the June 18 general election.

"One of the underlying causes of Labor's defeat in 1970 could well have been that we did not appreciate the changing nature of our relationship with the people," lamented ex-technology minister Anthony Wedgwood Benn in a Fabian Society pamphlet published Friday.

Benn, whose all-out verbal attack on Conservative maverick Enoch Powell was a controversial high point of the election campaign, argues that secretive and other traditional methods of government are no longer enough to satisfy the contemporary citizen.

"Anyone aspiring to political leadership . . . has now got to devote a part, and probably a majority, of his time and skill and effort to persuading people and listening in return to what is said to him," he added.

He gave no indication that this statement should be construed as a direct criticism of Harold Wilson's conduct during the former Labor prime minister's six years of office.

Other criticisms of Labor's election campaign, voiced by some backbench MPs, have been explicit in their hostility to Wilson.

But he is in no immediate danger of losing his job as party leader, although preparations for the four-day conference which begins Sept. 28 point to much debate about Labor's line of action in its new role as parliamentary opposition to Edward Heath's Conservative government.

Norman Atkinson, a left-wing Labor MP, insists that in future Wilson "must re-establish his credibility as a socialist."

Atkinson, a candidate for party treasurer, says Britain's large financial interests pressured the Wilson government into adopting non-socialist policies, which resulted in rough times for the working-class wage earner and a worrisome level of unemployment.

Instead of conflict with the trade unions, along the lines of Wilson's abortive attempt last year to bring them into line with policies of wage restraint, Atkinson wants the Labor party to give unionists complete backing in what he calls their present campaign for "full employment, higher real wages and decent pensions."

Among the statistics bothering Laborites of the left, right and centre has been the drop to 43 per cent from 48 in 1945 in the proportion of the electorate voting for the party.

"The Labor party is not attracting the number of supporters it held as far back as 1951," the organization's national committee complained.

Although non-committal on the exact cause of the June 18 defeat, the executive appears to abide by Wilson's own argument that the need for implementing harsh economic policies undermined the government's chances of re-election.

James Callaghan, home secretary in the Wilson cabinet and currently the party treasurer, says the necessity for better constituency organization and for more money is the big lesson to be learned by Labor from its election downfall.

"But, of course, that is not all," Callaghan wrote in the New Statesman magazine.

"Even with a less than perfect organization, more Labor voters would have gone to the poll if they had been sufficiently stirred and if we had engaged their beliefs, enthusiasm and interest.

"That is where we failed and now we shall pay the price of a Tory government."

FAILURES DROP

HALIFAX (CP) — More than 27,000 cars have been removed from Nova Scotia highways since the provincial government enacted compulsory automobile inspection legislation three years ago, says D. J. Tully, registrar of motor vehicles. He said that in the first year, the ratio was 65 failures to 35 passes but since then it has been reversed to 55 passes and 45 failures.

No Nudes Is Good Nudes

FREELTON, Ont. (CP) — There will be no nudes on stage today—only in the audience—as the Miss Nude World contest opens in this village 15 miles north of Hamilton.

The owners of Four Seasons Nature Park, Hans and Lisa Stein, say they expect today's crowd—mostly from among the 500 members of their nudist club—to swell to 3,000 Sunday for the nude judging.

Today it's bikinis.

Mrs. Stein said she was sure the number of contestants would also rise. There were 11 at a reception in the park Friday evening but Mrs. Stein said only two of 33 applicants had informed her they were backing out.

She expected a strong United States contingent from areas within a day's drive and some Canadians discouraged by Friday's rain to swell the ranks of contestants by the noon registration deadline.

One of the two dropouts is a Canadian Cree Indian who was advised against entering the contest by leaders of her tribe.

The judges, including broadcaster Gordon Sinclair, footballer Angelo Mosca of Hamilton Tiger-Cats and a Hamilton doctor who will judge anatomy, will chose the winner on looks, stintan, poise and answers to a question about nudism.

All contestants must be members of nudist clubs, of which there are 14 in southern Ontario and about 50 in Canada. They must display the even tan of a true nudist, with no strap gaps.

Mr. Mosca said in an interview that Mrs. Stein asked him two weeks ago to be a judge and he thought it over a few days before consenting.

"When it came out I was going to be a judge in a nude contest, I really took it from the guys in the locker room. But they all said they wanted to be my alternates."

Mrs. Stein said the only purpose of the contest, for which she and her husband took the Canadian copyright for the name Miss Nude World, is to promote Canadian nudism.

"Most people think nudism is connected with sex, like your swinger clubs, but it isn't like that at all," she said. "It's something different for everyone so I can't speak for others, but I met a lot of nice people in nudism.

"I'm more comfortable without clothes and I enjoy swimming in the nude. It's healthy for the mind. Never mind the body, it's the mind that's important—especially for the children.

"There is less crime among nudist teenagers, sexual crime that is."

Winner of the contest will receive a one week trip to Florida for two a crown, trophy, ski outfit and pet monkey.

The public is barred from the proceedings and security is tight at the 38-acre park. It is surrounded by a high, corrugated steel fence and the guard posted at the gate for the weekend will admit only card-carrying members of nudists clubs.

Prosecutor in Tate Murder Trial Removed from Case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The veteran prosecutor who mapped the state's case against four defendants in the Sharon Tate murder trial has been pulled off the case. Reports say his removal came because of his involvement in a drug bust.

The district attorney suddenly removed Chief Prosecutor Aaron H Stovitz in mid-trial Friday, saying he was needed for administrative duties.

Sources said District Attorney Evelle Younger had been upset about out-of-court statements by the two prosecutors.

Stovitz, 45, chief of the district attorney's trials division, had been on the case, assisted by Vincent Bugliosi, since the arrest and six others were found guilty in August, 1969.

Charles M. Manson, 33, leader of a hippie-style clan, and three women followers have been on trial since July, charged with murder-conspiracy.

Stovitz often traded jokes with reporters in corridors outside court.

Early this week he was quoted by some reporters as saying that testimony by defendant Susan Atkins about her health was "a performance worthy of a Sarah Bernhardt." Miss Atkins told the judge se had stomach pains and was too ill to continue. A doctor said she was in good health.

Stovitz said later this comment, made in the corridor, was off the record.

At one point, Stovitz was charged with contempt of court after giving an interview to an underground newspaper, but there has been no ruling in the case.

Younger said Stovitz's replacement will be Donald A. Munich, 34, a deputy district attorney with no previous involvement in the case.

During the trial session Friday, the courtroom erupted in laughter as an 11-year-old boy told how a policeman handled a gun sought in the case.

Steven Weiss said he found the long-barrelled revolver on a hill behind the home, handled it gingerly by the muzzle so as "not to disturb any fingerprints," then called police.

The policeman who came to pick it up, he said, "put both hands all over it." Spectators and jurors laughed loudly.

The Weiss home is about three miles from Miss Tate's Benedict Canyon estate.

A policeman later said homicide investigators in downtown Los Angeles conducted an international search for the gun—not knowing it was being held at the suburban Van Nuys station. A firearms expert testified that a bullet removed from the body of Tate victim Jay Sebring was fired from the 23-calibre pistol Sgt. William J. Lee said there was no doubt about the Sebring bullet, but bullets removed from the bodies of other victims could not be positively identified as having come from that gun.

The state has said it will try to show that the gun belonged to Manson and that he was using it at the Spahn Ranch, home of his communal "family."

Readers' Letters Valuable

Before starting my vacation, I'd like to make this last column a personal letter to each and all of the readers who have been such a trouble to write to me during the year. Such letters — both pro and con — are more valuable than you may realize.

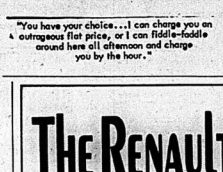
Writing a column, as I have steadily learned in the last 25 years, is a two-way street; the reader depends nearly as much upon the reader as upon the writer.

For it is largely the readers who keep the writer sharply aware of his errors, his excesses, and his inevitable blind spots in his temperament and background.

One's own fallibility is hard for a writer to see, sitting behind his typewriter, telling people daily what he thinks and feels. There is a natural, if deplorable, tendency to confuse oneself with God's official spokesman.

The disturbing letters — even the angry and abusive ones — help him to keep a sensible perspective about himself and his work. They also act as a healthy curb on his self-esteem, which is a deadly enemy of honest writing.

This is not to say that the favorable letters and comments do not also serve their purpose. They make a nervewracking task seem worthwhile, even on the most bleak or discouraging days.



It is perennially heartwarming that so many others — strangers to me, living in the world, who are yet somehow friends — think and feel as you do. The comradeship of shared ideas can be as nourishing as love.

And it is more than heartwarming. It is inspiring, to know that something you have written has prompted someone to re-examine his beliefs or to filter his prejudices through the purifying net of reason.

And, let me add, it is enormously gratifying to have this daily debate of views with the public, to feel a sense of communion with other minds who are also struggling for the attainment of whatever tentative truths man can attain. It is also always complex and often contradictory world we live in.

It does not do any of us to have learned over the last quarter-century, it is that there is someone who is smarter than Anyone and that is Everyone; each of us has his own particular contribution to make, and he who ignores another's angle of vision runs the risk of distorting his own into a caricature of reality.

Trading Brisk, Aggressive On Markets During Week

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Western oil issues led Canadian stock markets in a climb to higher levels this week as prices rose for the third-consecutive five-day period.

Trading at markets was brisk, with aggressive buying and selling among investors pushing volume to a near-high for the year.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's volume was 12.15 million shares, the greatest total since the first week in June and up from 10.91 million last week.

Oil issues were pushed upward under strong pressure throughout most of the week. The Toronto exchange's western oil index advanced 12.06 points to 181.58 posting its second-consecutive weekly advance of the year. The largest advance was made in mid-August.

Much of the buoyancy among oil and gas stocks was due to attributed, say analysts, to building demand in the United States for Canadian fuel.

A report by the National Petroleum Department in the U.S. this week outlined alternatives to fuel shortages.

The report suggested that more Canadian crude oil should be allowed into the country.

The Nixon administration cut Canadian imports recently to 305,000 barrels a day.

The flow of oil had risen to 600,000 barrels a day under an informal agreement prior to the reduced quota.

Observers also suggested the over-all uptrend at markets was helped along by a reduction in the Bank of Canada's lending rate to 6¾ per cent from 7 per cent.

It was the third such reduction this year.

The central bank's lending rate is usually interpreted as an indicator of money market trends in Canada.

Banking officials are still cautious about announcing a similar reduction in their prime lending rates, or the interest rate extended to their best customers.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Congenial associates make the day enjoyable despite some confusion or disappointments in social arrangements, delays in getting things done.

For September 7

Your birthday today: Adaptability emerges this year as one of your talents. Inner changes and growth mean more to you than the inany shifts in external circumstances now going on. Your self-improvement helps you guide the work of others. In your personal life, what is done is far more eloquent and important than what is said. Today's natives are industrious and versatile.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): This is an off-day Monday, with not enough getting done. Find an outlet for your energy, but avoid excess. Make tentative plans for a complex tomorrow.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Varying opinions on money run into conflict and possible misunderstandings. Make sure of facts and figures. Catch a balance this evening with dilation.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Impulsive originality colors your behavior today. Start early and get something of your own going. The later hours are crowded; make room for others and their concerns.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): Stay away from financial matters today. Concentrate on the nonmaterial areas of your life-expression. Unusual circumstances stimulate thought.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Friends offer special temptations. You skip important details if you are following up a new decision. Check things out; give your intuition a chance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your quiet diligence works to advantage while others play. Proceed with your current plans, rather than squabble with friends over making new ones.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Make this a day of social contact; abstain from business dealings if you can. Take nonmaterial factors into account now before proceeding.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): It is enough to see things in a different light today, without making changes. Too many people are involved to adjust matters quickly to your thinking.

For September 8

Your birthday today: A "do-it-yourself" year of experimentation and development begins. External conditions are neither favorable nor unfavorable after the changes of this month and next. Your personal philosophy attracts contacts and reactions you unconsciously seek. Knowing your own inner nature becomes crucial in such a year. Today's natives often reorganize existing systems, instigate sensible reforms.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your work offers enough challenge without taking on the job of convincing important skeptics. Let the results pile up a bit further before pointing to them.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Keep notes, records of any transactions you make today. Routines run into tangles which merit watchfulness. Leave new ideas for a better time.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Lend nothing beyond ideas; expect initial rejection, later acceptance. Enjoy what you can do right now, without fretting over the future or past.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Rely mainly on your own resources as the people around you have enough to cope with. An early start and consistent effort make the difference now.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Close co-operation or direct competition are both tense. Seek places where you have the field to yourself. Public opinion runs to confusion, criticism.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Go beyond your own plans to assure group or family harmony. Asking favors invites games rather than assistance. Line up your budgets, seasonal plans this evening.

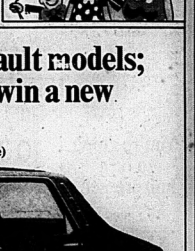
LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Whatever you do tends to be judged in a context you don't know about. Caution, reticence is indicated. Pay no attention to momentary disagreements — they will be resolved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Self-reliance is the key to success today. Stay within your resources, decide what your real earning power is, but defer action for a better time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Career issues are at a standstill, while purely personal diversions are alive. Stay busy with superficial matters; let your unconscious digest recent experience.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Much is expected of you today — be conservative in your promises, discreet before strangers. You appear more placid than you feel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 —Feb. 18): Financial manoeuvres today tend to confuse the people you work with. Go directly ahead without involving others. Later, make changes to fit new information.



PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): On things already well started, definite progress can be achieved. Expressions of doubt attract needless discussion. Just go on with what has been settled.

Jesus Freaks Start Commune in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — An unorthodox Christian revival movement among youth has reached Toronto.

The self-styled "Jesus Freaks" established a "Christian commune" last month in a downtown residential area and have started a mission to the city's youth havens—talking in street slang.

Long-haired and barefoot or short-haired and straight, "we're stoned on Christ, that's our trip," explained Anna Jean McNaught, 20, a resident of the commune.

The commune is called Emmaus—because according to the gospel of Luke, the resurrected Christ met the apostles on the road to Emmaus. The freaks say it is one of three or four in Canada.

In addition to the seven members of the sect, who range in age from 18 to 29, it is also home to several temporary residents, some of them being helped off drugs and alcohol.

Jean Morton, 25, says she has been a Jesus Freak for four years.

"Before then I was a lot of other things, including other religions. This isn't really a religion. It's more a relationship."

"The house has a two-fold purpose," says Sharon Nacduff, 25. "It's a house of God in that the people are here to learn more about God and God in relation to others. And the second part of that is spreading God's love to others."

Another member, a 19-year-old United States Army deserter from Miami, Fla., got to the commune by way of a coffee-house in Yorkville run by a pentecostal evangelist who also ministers to youth.

"I used to take a lot of dope," he said. "I was searching like everyone else on dope. I had accepted Christ in my own way: Love hot do your own thing."

Then he dropped into the coffee-house—the Stepping Stone.

"They were preaching Jesus. I had tried everything else so I tried it and it's really beautiful."

The seven include Roman Catholics and Anglicans as well as former United Church members. Each morning they spend 45 minutes to an hour in interdenominational devotions at their main floor chapel.

Morning housework is followed by free time, during which they work, go to school or preach in the streets.

The house relies on faith to pay for the groceries and the $200 monthly house rent. So far, faith has paid off in donations from nuns, churches and several individuals. Two members help support the community with outside jobs.

Drugs, alcohol and pre-marital sex are banned—drugs as being unfair to former addicts and pre-marital sex because it is forbidden in the Bible.

"Our relationships are as brothers and sisters—there's no sexual connotation," says Anna Jean.

National Legal Aid Recommended

HALIFAX (CP) — The legal profession should evolve some form of effective and uniform legal-aid scheme for all of Canada, the new president of the Canadian Bar Association said Friday.

A. Lorne Campbell, Winnipeg corporation lawyer, told a news conference that some of the poorer provinces "cannot even afford a meaningful program." He said some way must be found to make legal services available across the country on an equitable basis.

A resolution adopted Friday during closing sessions of the association's annual convention called on Ottawa to make funds available for such a program. Justice Minister John Turner, who attended earlier in the week, indicated his support for federal action.

Mr. Campbell said most lawyers would like to avoid a scheme similar to medical-care insurance with prepaid contributions, although the alternative might involve some form of means test to determine a client's ability to pay.

The new president agreed that he was an activist among lawyers and plans to push for heavier commitment from the legal profession to social problems.

"I want to see changes. I want to promote the younger group in the profession, and to see us more involved in public issues."

Resolutions adopted during the final day included one urging a substantial increase in the maximum prison term for jury-tampering and corrupting witnesses.

The resolution put forward by G. D. Kenney, deputy attorney-general of British Columbia, recommended that the penalty under the Criminal Code for such offices be boosted to 10 years from the present two.

Supporters of the resolution said that in several cases, courts dealing with attempts to influence jury members, to coerce witnesses or to plant evidence have expressed regret that they could not impose sentences greater than two years.

A resolution advocating by Professor Arnold R. Bass of Winnipeg called for uniform legislation throughout Canada to deal with jet-age "kidnapping" of children affected by custody orders in divorce and separation cases.

The resolution met not only with approval but also with applause.

Prof. Bass said there now are "horrendous consequences" when children are spirited away from one jurisdiction to another by disgruntled parties in a custody action. The children become the innocent pawns in a frequently complex, prolonged and costly procedure to return them to the original jurisdiction.

He said ease of travel in the modern age had made the problem more acute.

He's an Indian Too!

After 35 years in federal Indian affairs administration — 10 of them as superintendent of Tyendinaga Mohawk reserve — Morley McCracken suddenly found himself an honorary Indian Sunday. The title was awarded the civil servant, now retiring, at the opening of Mohawk Recreation Park. With the award goes an Indian name, Koronhyakiodye — Along the Sky — created by a Mohawk Mrs. Effie Doreen (right). (For story, see Page 3.)

No Safe Way Seen To Stop Hijackings

NEW YORK (AP) — The captain of a Boeing 747 jetliner hijacked and bombed in Cairo Sunday says that before takeoff he searched two men who later turned out to be the hijackers. But he found no weapons.

Capt. John Priddy told reporters at Kennedy International Airport early today that he made the search after being informed that the two men had been denied passage on an El Al airliner.

"I patted them all over and then searched their attache cases and found nothing," Priddy said, adding that he assumed the men had "stashed their weapons" upon boarding the Pan American World Airways jumbo jet.

Priddy, a resident of Northport, N.Y., said he "doesn't see how hijackers can be stopped without the danger of getting someone hurt."

"Some of these hijackers are prepared to blow themselves up with the plane" if airplane security guards try to stop them, he said.

He described the hijackers as "real professionals" and said one told him it was his third hijacking.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A weather system lying across the southern Great Lakes is causing rain and thunderstorms over most of northern Ontario. A secondary area of weather associated with the same disturbance is forecast to cross southern Ontario today and Wednesday. Temperatures south of the system will climb into the 80s except for spots near the lower lakes. Sixty degree weather will push slowly south over the next 48 hours. The pattern is complicated by a series of lows moving along the frontal surface from the west so that the overall progress of the system as a whole is quite slow.

Arabs Seize Planes
Red Cross Will Try To Free Passengers

Four Nations Get Ultimatum

LONDON (CP) — Four Western governments delegated the International Red Cross today to seek the release of hijacked airline passengers in Jordan by negotiating with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, British officials reported.

The move was disclosed as British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home summoned the envoys of six Arab countries for discussions on the hijacking crisis.

It came in the wake of an ultimatum by the Arab commandos who forced three jetliners to land in the Middle East—release a girl hijacker now being held in London and other Arabs involved in airline incidents, or two of the planes and their male passengers would be blown up in Jordan.

Informants said Britain, the United States, West Germany and Switzerland agreed to contact the Palestinian Popular Front through the Red Cross.

The commandos have demanded that Britain, Switzerland and West Germany release all Arabs being held in connection with aircraft incidents.

A popular front spokesman said the 72-hour ultimatum would expire at 10 a.m. Amman time (4 a.m. EDT) Thursday.

Otherwise, the ultimatum said, the Swissair DC-8 and the Trans World Airlines Boeing 707 being held by hijackers at a small airfield in Jordan will be blown up with the passengers aboard.

"The front has put boxes of explosives inside the two planes, in order to blow them up in case there is no reply to its warning," a guerrilla spokesman said in the Jordanian capital of Amman.

There was no sign that Britain was prepared to free the girl hijacker being held by Scotland Yard police, 24-year-old Leila Khaled. West Germany and Switzerland also were understood to be reconsidering earlier reported decisions to surrender guerrillas they are holding in custody.

Britain's Prime Minister Edward Heath called an emergency cabinet session today to discuss the Arab ultimatum, and Douglas-Home conferred with diplomats from Jordan, Egypt, Iraq, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

The third plane hijacked to the Middle East Sunday, a Pan American World Airways Boeing 747, was blown up eight minutes after landing at Cairo but its passengers escaped through emergency chutes. A substitute Boeing 707 returned to New York Monday night with 137 of the jumbo jet's 188 passengers and crew aboard.

All three planes were hijacked en route to New York.

Miss Khaled was seized by Israeli security guards Sunday during a fourth hijack attempt. Her male companion was fatally shot when they tried to take over an Israeli El Al Airlines DC-8 on a flight from Amsterdam to New York. She was jailed by Scotland Yard when the plane landed at London's Heathrow Airport.

The other guerrillas whose release has been demanded also are in jail in charges involving

Da Nang Area Bases Attacked

SAIGON (AP) — More than 200 North Vietnamese commandos blasted their way into a South Vietnamese military district headquarters and a ranger camp south of Da Nang today and rampaged through the two installations, killing at least 34 government soldiers and wounding 42.

Twenty-six North Vietnamese soldiers were reported killed in the three-hour battle.

Egypt Expects Israeli Attack

CAIRO (CP) — Egypt's leaders say the U.S. assertion that Cairo has violated the Middle East ceasefire is "a mask to cover any Israeli action against Egypt."

The Middle East news agency said the Egyptian cabinet made the statement Monday after meeting in Cairo with President Nasser.

The semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said Israel's latest charge that Egypt has broken the ceasefire agreement by setting up missiles near the Suez canal is a "trick" to indicate that Cairo violated the agreement first.

The newspaper told its readers: "An Israeli military offensive is near at hand."

Israel released its 11th complaint of Egyptian ceasefire violations Monday. The United States has confirmed most of the Israeli charges, and Tel Aviv is boycotting the Middle East peace talks in New York until Egyptian military strength in the canal truce zone is restored to what it was before Aug. 7, the day the truce went into effect.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Monday that the Israeli boycott of the negotiations has virtually ruined chances for a Middle East peace settlement. The agency charged that Israel is using allegations about Egyptian violations of the ceasefire agreement "to cover up its refusal" to continue the talks.

"Actually," Tass said, "Tel Aviv's decision is only a logical conclusion of the policy of procrastination by means of which Israel tries to prevent implementation of the Security Council's Nov. 22, 1967, resolution."

The resolution, which forms the basis of the U.S.-sponsored talks by representatives of Israel, Egypt and Jordan, calls for an Israeli pullout from territories occupied in the 1967 war and for Arab recognition of Israel's right to exist within secure boundaries.

In Tel Aviv, an Israeli military source said Egyptian military preparations since the ceasefire began have given Cairo the capability of moving 300 missiles up to the canal zone in a matter of hours.

The Doors Are Open

Police Dog Bowls Over B.C. Man Hunted as Slayer of Eight

CRESTON, B.C. (CP) — Dale Merle Nelson, 31, was to appear in court today charged with non-capital murder in the savage slayings of five children and three adults, members of two farm families.

Nelson, blonde part-time logger, was bowled over by a police dog and seized Sunday after a lone 48-hour manhunt in the hills west of this mountain community, 200 miles east of Vancouver.

He was charged Sunday with the death of one of the victims, Mrs. Alex Wasyk, 36, who was shot, stabbed and hit on the head. One of Mrs. Wasyk's three daughters was also slain and was found decapitated.

Seven bodies, shot or stabbed, were found in their cabin homes Saturday. Five, all of one family, were mutilated with a knife. The eighth victim, Calvin Phipps, 8, believed taken as a hostage, was found dead Sunday, apparently from knife wounds.

Nelson's wife Annette and her three children were reported staying with relatives here. Neighbors said Mrs. Wasyk, who lived near Nelson's West Creston shack, was an aunt of Mrs. Nelson.

One of the Wasyk girls, Debbie, 12, ran to the home of Maurice MacKay early Saturday and said a man had shot her mother and sister Tracey, 8, and was headed for the McKay home. Mrs. McKay called RCMP.

Sunday evening, police spotted Nelson lying under a tree near his cabin. He rose to meet Const. a police German shepherd, and the dog knocked him down. Nelson, bearded and barefoot, was handcuffed.

A loaded rifle was in the crook of a tree near him. Police found about a dozen rounds of ammunition. They said the weapon used in the killings was a rifle of the 7mm Mauser type.

The victims were:

—Raymond John Phipps, 42, an alfalfa farmer, found gunned down and mutilated in two pools of blood at the door of his two-room cabin;

—His wife Isabella, 38, found shot and mutilated in the doorway of the bedroom;

—Paul Phipps, 10 shot and mutilated in the bunk bed;

—Bryan Phipps, 7, shot and mutilated in his bunk bed;

—Kenneth Phipps, 14 months, shot and mutilated in his crib;

—Cathy Phipps, 5, taken away by the killer, found knifed Sunday;

—Shirley Wasyk, 30, dead of stab wounds or cerebral hemorrhage from a blow to the head; she was also shot;

—Tracey Wasyk, 8, knifed, mutilated.

While police were absent from the Wasyk home for about 15 minutes early Saturday, Tracey's body was removed. It was found Sunday, decapitated, near a car that had been abandoned a few miles away.

The two surviving Wasyk girls, Debbie and another girl found cowering in bushes outside her home, were treated for shock. Mr. Wasyk was away, working in a logging camp near Creston.

After Mrs. MacKay called police, RCMP found the bodies of Mrs. Wasyk and Tracey, then went to the McKay house to evacuate the McKay family. During this period, Tracey's body was removed.

Checking other homes in the West Creston area, police found the Phipps bodies. There was no blood on the sheets of Cathy's bed and police theorized the killer took her alive as a hostage.

About 36 armed police officers and three tracker dogs began to scan the area. A military helicopter joined the hunt. An RCMP dog found a beer bottle and cap and a cigarette package. The search was suspended because of darkness Saturday night and resumed Sunday.

The search concentrated on the area of the Nelson shack after police discovered someone had slit open a plastic window and entered.

At about 4:30 p.m. Sunday, police spotted Nelson lying in grass near his shack. Police and dogs surrounded him. Mrs. Nelson, at the cabin picking up belongings, was driven away.

"This is the RCMP," called superintendent Terrence Stewart through a loudhailer. "You are surrounded. Stand up, put your hands in the air and walk towards the cabin. All units hold your fire."

Nelson didn't respond and the dog Count was sent in and knocked down the 200-pound man. A few minutes later a voice called from behind the cabin: "Keep the press the hell away from me."

Nelson, wearing khaki work clothes and a green jacket, was put into a police car and taken to an RCMP cell in Creston.

Logging In

Wing Commander G. T. Smeaton (left) checks over the log book of his Royal Air Force Vulcan bomber with Chief Technician J. Fisher and Sgt. B. Morris at the end of flight checks. Two of the delta winged aircraft represented Great Britain in the airshow held last week at the Canadian National Exhibition. The four-engined craft left CFB Trenton daily for their five minute Toronto performances.

Vulcan Flip Is Sensational

TRENTON (Staff) — Sensational - that's what it is, to be aboard a Royal Air Force Vulcan bomber as it performs aerobatics over Lake Ontario.

Two Vulcans were committed to the International Air Show held at the Canadian Exhibition last week.

Not only did they excite hundreds of thousands of Ex-gooers, the giant delta-winged craft were a constant attraction to personnel at CFB Trenton from where they flew the daily air show mission.

A masterpiece of aviation engineering, the Vulcan was designed by the Avro Corp. in Britain during the 1950s.

Hawker - Siddely, however, now manufactures the updated Mark II version used by the Royal Air Force.

The sleek, camouflaged jets zoomed off into the western sky every afternoon to make a five minute contribution to the air show, a perennial Ex favorite.

Take-off is preceded by a lengthy procedure — even before the crew arrive at their planes on the tarmac.

Flight plans have to be registered with Base Operations, the weather has to be checked, technicians have to give the bombers a detailed inspection.

The crew is conveyed to the waiting bombers by a staff car. Seconds later, doors slam everybody out and there they are, a matched pair of gleaming bombers capable of awesome nuclear strike roles.

One by one, the crews scaled the ladders rising from the undersides of the craft deep up into the interiors, pausing to discuss merits of the Vulcan with Canadian Forces personnel gathered around the undercarriages.

Inside, the Vulcan is an complex as the exterior is simple. Window space is minimal, provision for for electronic gadgetry at a premium.

Wall and ceiling surfaces are loaded with red and yellow dials and the RAF flight crew seem to check every one as they prepare for takeoff.

Equipped with a green flight oxygen mask, microphone-headset and helmet, each man goes through his routine flight suit, Mae West, parachute, preparations on various floors of the split level interior.

MORE

Constant communication is kept among the crew in the minutes before the engines start to whistle, then thunder as the planes taxi out to the runway for clearance from Trenton tower.

The Vulcan bounces some as it moves to the end of the runway. Clearance given, it is off — piercing the clouds as it moves toward Toronto.

Lake Ontario streaked out below, there is Oshawa, there is the Toronto Dominion Centre, there is the Exhibition.

In at 500 feet the Vulcans perform tight orbits and figure eights before entering steep climbs — straight up — to 5,000 feet.

Twenty minutes later the crew were back on the ground at CFB Trenton. Today, they returned to their home base, RAF Station, Waddington, Lincs.

airline hijackings. Three of the prisoners are awaiting trial in Munich and the other four have been sentenced in Zurich to 13-year prison terms.

The Popular Front demanded that:

—Switzerland free the three Arab commandos being held in that country for an attack in February, 1969, on an Israeli El Al Boeing at Zurich Airport.

—Britain free Miss Khaled and return her safely to Jordan.

—West Germany free three commandos held since an attack on a busload of El Al passengers at Munich Airport in February.

—Israel release a number, as yet unspecified, of guerrillas held in Israeli jails and also free two Algerians detained when their British airliner landed at Tel Aviv in July.

The Popular Front said the freedom of people aboard the hijacked aircraft hinging don Israeli and U.S. nationality depended upon the fourth condition being met.

All-star Cast For Tory Tea

What's your beef with: Education, municipal affairs, the Ontario economy, provincial issues in general?

For the Quinte electorate tomorrow is prime time to directly question, criticize or offer personal ideas to the men responsible for the course of such public policies.

The time is 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. The place, Dr. Richard Potter's Massassaga home, where the Quinte MPP is hosting a Tory Tea.

His guest list stars four key Ontario cabinet ministers, and any and all commers who wish to personally discuss contemporary public issues with them.

To this end, Dr. Potter has invited cabinet ministers whose portfolios include some areas of public affairs.

Among them are Education Minister William Davis and Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough.

With the switch to county education and regional government trends, both ministers are consistently involved in some of the most tempestuous provincial issues of the day, Dr. Potter notes.

Financial and Commercial Affairs Minister Bert Lawrence is also involved in issues of wide - ranging concern, and also is one of the most recent cabinet appointees.

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch is also Conservative government House leader and therefore generally involved in all policy issues, says Dr. Potter.

No formal format has been laid down for the occasion, since Dr. Potter says he wants to make contacts between constituents and cabinet ministers as personal as possible, thus freeing discussion.

"My main concern is to get the people out to tell the ministers what they believe is wrong with various policies," he says, "and offer their own ideas."

Such a style of confrontation may stimulate mutual awareness between politicians and public, Dr. Potter feels.

"What I also want them (the ministers) to realize is that everything isn't school of cherries and that people have a lot of things they want to say," says Dr. Potter.

CESO Goes to India

Studying travel plans are Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Beeby of 40 Ritchie Ave., Belleville, who will depart for India October 1 as volunteer workers with the Canadian Executive Service Overseas. Apart from Canada and England, the Beebys have not travelled extensively overseas.

Belleville Couple To Work in India

CESO, the Canadian Executive Service Overseas, is a federal government agency which is attempting to make technical and professional skills of Canadian specialists available to existing organizations in developing nations.

Aptly describing the CESO approach is the Chinese proverb: "If you give a man a fish, you feed him for a day; if you teach him to fish, you feed him for life."

According to government statistics, approximately two-thirds of the total world population requires some sort of assistance.

Since its inception in 1958, CESO has sent volunteers to these developing countries.For periods ranging from three to six months. Most of those chosen are retired from their lifetime careers but have both the ability and the will to remain active.

Fred A. Beeby has been the personnel services manager at Northern Electric's Belleville plant since 1962. During his 43 years of association with Northern, Mr. Beeby has been involved with quality control and helped establish the plant in Belleville.

One of Mr.- Beeby's first bosses was C. A. Peachey, who is now President of CESO. Through a mutual friend, Mr. Beeby made contact and offered his services.

Presented with the problems of Allwyn Metalworks Company in the city of Hyderabad, state of Andhra Pradesh, India, Mr. Beeby made arrangements to retire on Sept. 15, of this year. Following a visit with their family near Edmonton, Mr. and Mrs. Beeby plan to depart from Montreal on Oct. 1.

From past work of CESO volunteers, experience has indicated that the best results are obtained when the working and social environment is a growing system exists under local management. It has been found that in many cases management did not have the opportunity to acquire knowledge of modern technical and administrative practices available.

The methods employed by CESO workers are those of recommendations and suggestions. Surveys are conducted on the request of these companies and the findings are then entered into a portfolio which is forwarded to a volunteer.

As in the case of Mr. Beeby, the volunteer's opinions concerning the portfolio are considered and a course of action is based on the recommendations.

Among the 31 products manufactured by Allwyn are electric refrigerators, electric and gas stoves, low pressure gas tanks, bus bodies, prefabricated steel houses, and steel furniture.

Belleville Couple To Work in India

Originally established privately, this state-owned firm employs 8,000 workers. Mr. Beeby's assignment is to overcome production difficulties.

"My experience in the technology and personnel field will help me with this job," he said.

Together with this background, he has been an extension school teacher in electronic technology for 15 years in Belleville high schools and has taught managerial training for six years in area plants, high schools and more recently, Loyalist College.

The Beebys will be working with another couple from the Quinte area. Herbert Brown, a former tool designer for Northern and his wife, will also be working at Allwyn.

The work period is short, because, as Mr. Beeby explained, "we would do nothing but out of work if we stay too long; for a short stay without pay (CESO pays expenses with volunteers receiving their pensions) CESO workers are welcomed by the native workers."

Although most wives accompany their husbands, there is little for them to do while in these countries. Mrs. Beeby, however, obtained permission to do her husband's secretarial work and with a keen interest in hospital work, she plans to be quite busy for the duration of their stay.

And what plans for the future upon their return?

"Well, I'm studying two other job offers . . . one in the Indian state of Kerala, in the city of Quilon, the other in Brazil.

"Until I receive a further statement from CESO to one of these locations, or another, I would like to return to teaching here."

Time-serving Students Are A Problem

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Ontario's young people returned to school this morning for another year — but the big question remains: how are you going to keep them there?

Will the 15-year-olds and over showing greater impatience every year with academic life, and government and labor determined to keep them out of the work force during this period of rising unemployment, school teachers and principals on the secondary level are caught in the middle.

Options must be found for students who don't want to remain in school, said Walter Pitman, former Peterborough teacher, leadership candidate for the Ontario New Democratic Party and his party's education critic.

Speaking to campaign supporters last week in Belleville Lodge A.F. and AM No. 123,

He is survived by his wife, the former Myrtle Annie McCoy; one son, Farley M. Vermilyea of RR5, Belleville; one daughter, Clarence W. Vermilyea of RR 5, Belleville; four grandsons, and one great-grandson.

The body is resting at the John R. Bush Funeral home where the service will be held Wednesday afternoon. Rev. Roy Vessey will officiate. Interment will be in the Belleville Cemetery.

Third Joyceville Escaper Captured Downing Beer

TRENTON (Staff) — A routine call turned into an unforgettable hair-raising experience for a Trenton taxi driver here on Saturday.

Around noon Howard "Knobby" Chase, 59, who drives for Graham's Taxi was dispatched to the Wooler area to pick up a fare for a trip to the local brewer's retail outlet.

According to Chase his customer purchased a case of two dozen bottles of beer and acted normally until he stopped to talk to a friend at the place they started from.

Then his passenger made a gesture as though he carried a gun and ordered him to turn over a wallet with $18 in it and the taxi.

Chase started to walk along the road to a nearby farmhouse until he heard the taxi returning at high speed. He learned later the driver ran into a dead end and was compelled to retrace the route in making his getaway. He hid in a cornfield and watched his taxi whiz by and disappear in a cloud of dust.

The woman in the farmhouse called the police while Chase was still relating his story.

"In 10 minutes time police cars were coming from every direction and I was glad to see them," the taxi driver said sufficiently afterwards.

Arrested and charged with robbery with violence was Douglas Clayton Whitney, 30, who escaped from Joyceville penitentiary on Sept. 1 with two other inmates. The last of the three escapees to be recaptured, Whitney was sitting alone in the local drinking beer when he surrendered without resistance. His freedom ended on a Cramahe township road near Hamilton south of Warkworth. He was not carrying any weapons when he was picked up.

Festive Opening For Mohawk Park

TYENDINAGA (Staff) — A two-day combination of modern amusements and traditional rituals during the Labor Day weekend here opened the biggest community project undertaken by the Bay of Quinte Mohawks.

The event officially launched Mohawk Recreation Park, a 13-acre site overlooking the Bay of Quinte and fully equipped as a picnic-play area.

The project was formally declared in action Sunday at opening ceremonies attended by local and senior government representatives and leaders of various Indian reserves in Ontario.

The emphasis was on Mohawk culture during the ceremonies. Mohawks led by Chief Earl Hill, donned full Indian dress to mingle with the crowd as Lee Grills, MP Hastings, cut the opening ribbon — a string of buckskin.

Then John McGilp, community affairs director for the Indian Affairs department, unveiled a memorial cairn — the customary silk cloth also replaced by buckskin.

Mohawks singers and Indian dancers highlighted the entertainment program that followed.

Saturday's events brought out scores of youngsters and adults for a day-long schedule of events that included sports, sing-dancing, a fiddler's contest and square - dancing.

The weekend's events also marked the end of nearly three years' work, most of it volunteered by the Mohawks themselves.

Working in spare time they cleared the site of trees and underbrush reducing costs of creating the park to a minimum. Donations were also received from several contractors and businessmen.

It's to the credit of the people of the Tyendinaga Indian reserve that we now have this park for our people to enjoy, Chief Hill told the crowd Sunday.

Mr. McGilp said the project carried on an Indian tradition' that put the emphasis on children and young people.

"Just as Indians in the past placed great importance on their young, so today, with this park, you five still place children in the forefront of your endeavors," he said.

Two Break-ins

A quantity of wrecking bars, crowbars and other heavy tools was stolen from 21 Ella Street sometime between Sunday and this morning.

The house is being torn down at present.

Nothing was taken in a second break-in at Bayview Public School over the long weekend. The entry occurred sometime after Saturday, police said.

Suds and Roses

Belleville's Corby Park fountain became a foaming centrepiece among rose beds during Labor Day weekend. Unknown pranksters who dumped detergent in fountain's basin were blamed for the incident.

McCracken Retiring As A Mohawk Chief

TYENDINAGA (Staff) — After working 25 years for the white man's government with Ontario Indian communities, Morley McCracken is going into retirement — as an Indian chief.

The honorary title was conferred on a surprised Mr. McCracken here Sunday by the Bay of Quinte Mohawks, on whose Tyendinaga reserve he has been federal government superintendent for the past 10 years.

Mr. McCracken is retiring this September from the Indian Affairs department, after 33 years' service.

The honorary title, complete with headdress and the Mohawk name Korokiyakodye — Along the Sky — was bestowed on him at the end of ceremonies officially opening the Mohawk Recreation Park here.

"I certainly didn't expect this," Mr. McCracken told Chief Earl Hill and members of the Mohawk council after the presentation.

Mr. McCracken, who has worked on various reserves in Ontario, was first briefly stationed to Tyendinaga in 1939. He returned 26 years later for what was to be his final posting with the department.

During his public service he has seen many changes in the affairs and attitudes of Canada's Indians, Mr. McCracken later recalled.

"I think it's all been for the good of the people," he said. "I think they've made progress over the years in many ways, and I hope it continues."

Monsarrat on Canada

Best-selling author Nicholas Monsarrat, who ran the British Information Services in Canada from 1951 to 1956 and lived in this country until a few years ago, has given Canadians something to think about in a new volume of autobiography.

In political life here he says "scandals abounded, of the most deplorable kind . . ." As for the drinking laws, which he called grotesque, Monsarrat reflects that these did not stop people from drinking but merely gave them "awful drinking habits."

"Even in chilled Ottawa," he recalls, there was a "bottle-killing" tradition before dinner parties. But author Monsarrat is at his scathing best in his survey of the male-female scene in Canada. "Canadians," he said, "seemed to have an inborn horror of admitting affection for a woman and observed that the country seemed trapped between its 'Calvinist pleasure-is-wrong' outlook and its French-Canadian hard-line Catholicism which saw wickedness behind every hemline."

Well . . . er yes, it is a hoary old continent to be sure; the climate is hard and we suffer all the frustrations and depressions of a northern race. As a nation we are new and still a little gauche as we stumble forward into the unknown. Meanwhile we are what we are, capable of improvement like everyone else, including Mr. Monsarrat. His autobiographical series, incidentally, reflects his own lusty thought patterns and literary style, and is entitled, Life is a Four-Letter Word.

Madoc Park's Fate

The following letter appeared in The Toronto Telegram September 1. Signed by Peter Gentry, the letter speaks for itself. "With deep regret I heard of the closing of Crystal Beach Park at Madoc due to the water pollution caused by arsenic and raw sewage. My family and I have been camping there for a good many years. We appreciated the clean, well-kept park, the concern and comfort provided there for the guests.

"Do the people of Madoc care? They should, as their village and much of their livelihood are at stake if the water pollution is not stopped now. Ontario's loss will be 300 camp sites."

We would add only this, that other lakes could suffer a similar fate. We just hope not; the trouble is, though, anywhere people congregate and there are boats and cottages and sewage and oil spill, not to mention industrial effluence, then unless proper precautions are taken the spectre of pollution looms that much larger.

Reds Slay Orphans

There is still a war on in Vietnam and the other day the communist North Vietnamese showed their "prowess" by attacking an undefended orphanage at a place called Xuyen Phu.

From a vantage point in the hills at dawn they fired mortars at the orphanage, then moved in with grenades and plastic charges as some 60 children huddled under their beds. As if this were not enough they fired automatic weapons at anything that moved. Before they left, they executed the Buddhist monk in charge of the orphanage.

Twelve others were left dead, seven of them children, and 45 wounded, two-thirds of them children. The others were nurses and staff workers.

A Polish Vietnamese captain in charge of a relief force that arrived too late said he thought it was a terror attack because it was an election day — a favorite tactic of the Communist Vietnamese to discourage people from going to the polls.

Whatever the rationale of it, it was still another monstrous episode in a monstrous war.

'Bonnie' for Scrap

Between its 1957 purchase from Britain and refit ten years later HMCS Bonaventure has cost the Canadian taxpayer $29 million. Now Vancouver shipbroker Bill Kennedy has bought it for around three-quarters of a million dollars and the vessel is destined for Formosa of all places where it will be scrapped. What a climax, after all that expense and so much political palaver. We can only wonder just what we get for our defence tax dollar, in an age when weapons and ships and planes are obsolete almost as soon as they go into service.

Six in Cabinet

Montreal Gets More for Less Than Rest of Canada

By RICHARD JACKSON
OTTAWA — Feel neglected federally?

Suspect your region is missing out on some of the goodies distributed from Parliament Hill? Then better start thinking about your regional or even provincial Cabinet chief.

What sort of punch does your particular Cabinet representative — or, if you live in some politically favored region, representatives — seem to pack with the Prime Minister, the dispenser - in - chief of the many benefits that make for a comfortable scale of federal living?

After all, you helped pay the $12 billion in taxes that it is all costing.

But bet your bottom dollar that no matter how well you consider your Cabinet-Man-on-Ottawa is performing, or how hard he is trying, you are not getting anything like what Montreal is enjoying.

No, not even proportionately. Sure, Montreal is bigger.

But all that much bigger?

So big that it should get a write-off of the millions of dollars it owes to the federal government for Expo; millions more for its freeways, for Mirabel and his World, tax concessions worth $1 million or so to the 11 team, subsidies for the coming Olympics and all those other "extras" and "plus" items in the routine benefits of more ordinary federal services and favors enjoyed by most of the rest of the country?

No, not really.

For one thing and scarcely a negligible consideration, Montreal pays only eight percent of Canada's total income tax bill, according to the latest report in the "Green Book" published by the Taxation Division of the National Revenue Department.

Toronto pays 19 per cent. Vancouver six.

Ottawa, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Calgary pick up three percent of the tax tab each.

Victoria, Kitchener and London each go for just under two percent of the total.

Or put it another way. In dollars.

Montreal pays a total of $426 million in federal taxes. Toronto's total is $979 million.

But Montreal has six strongly entrenched Cabinet ministers, even dominating — some of the Cabinet, orchestrated by his Right Honorable Pierre Elliott Trudeau, Liberal MP for Mount Royal and the all - powerful Prime Minister.

Toronto has only three members in the Cabinet and they speak in whispers — Michael Starr of Ontario, Dick Bell and Donald of the Privy Council, and freshman Minister Robert Stanbury, Westmount - St. Henri.

So who cares about Toronto? Nobody, really, outside of "Hogtown" itself. Mighty Metro does more than very well by itself, no matter what.

But what about the rest of the country?

Well, the Prairies pay $826 million in federal taxes; Ontario alone pouring up $395 million, not far short of Montreal's $426 million.

But across the Prairies there are only three federal Cabinet Ministers, Horace "Bud" Olson of Agriculture, a deserter from the Social Credit camp, James Richardson of Supply and Services, and Otto Lang, with no portfolio but with the heavy responsibility of selling wheat.

Add the likes of dandy Andy more important, who is the small - circle of Cabinet power in the Province of Quebec.

The West is "alienated," as the "in" phrase goes, and is it any wonder?

British Columbia puts up $690 million in federal taxes, a good deal more than Metro Montreal's $426 million.

The B.C. half built Montreal's Expo, with Arthur Laing of Public Works, Jack Davis of Fisheries and Forestry, and Ron Basford of Consumer and Corporate Affairs to speak for it.

Good, solid men, all three, but nowhere near even the Eastern Approaches of the "Magic Circle" of Montreal power.

Only the Maritimes have anything like an even break of Cabinet representation — but only in numbers, not in influence — on the tax beats.

Together the four Atlantic provinces have five members around the Cabinet table, one of them, Don Jamieson of Transport a powerful figure and a match for the "Montreal Mafia."

The others, Allan MacEachen of Manpower and Immigration, Jean-Eudes Dubé of Veterans Affairs . . . well, neither is a Don Jamieson.

The Atlantic provinces pay a total federal tax tab of $358 million, "a good deal more than half Montreal's $426 million and numerically have half the Cabinet representation. A decent break in the Cabinet musical chairs game, but in influence only on the fringe.

Now for sheer, naked power, in the measure of Wiseguy-ness, look at the Montreal Men, the "Mafia" as this author/artist elite is known here.

Treasury Board President Charles M. Drury, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, Jean-Pierre Côté of National Revenue, Eric Kierans of Communications, and Gerald Pelletier, the "Cultural Czar," as State Secretary, with Pierre Trudeau and Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand one of the "Three Wise Men."

Any wonder, then, that what Montreal wants, Montreal usually gets?

"Come on in — the oil's fine!"

NDP Leadership Tussle

Peterborough Examiner

The contest for the provincial leadership of the New Democratic Party between Peterborough MPP, Walter Pitman and Stephen Lewis (Scarborough West) is creating a situation that is probably unique in the history of Ontario politics.

While the two rivals are on the basis of terms — they have little, if any, ideological differences and even set the ground rules to keep the campaign clean — their supporters are waging a battle among themselves which may not only split the Ontario wing of the party, but help whoever wins the leadership to lose the election in 1971.

Yet, interestingly, the argument is about how to win that election or rather what kind of NDP leader could win it.

One group of strategists believing that the voters will go for the radical type, meaning Lewis; others are convinced that Pitman's quiet conservatism will win the votes.

Last week two university professors, each supporting one of other candidate, presented documents describing what they think the Ontario voter of 1971 will seek in a prospective prime minister.

University of Waterloo political science professor John Wilson thinks the voters are more Progressive and Conservative and want a prime minister who is "... the personification of progressive change and of cautious common sense."

Gerald Caplan, an assistant history professor at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education (and Mr. Lewis' campaign manager), claims in his paper that the voters don't want "... a second (Liberal leader Robert) Nixon or a third (Premier John) Robarts."

"... the bank is trying to steer a very narrow course. While it is clear enough to Mr. Windhol both in the degree of slack that exists in the economy and the length of time it takes for changes in monetary conditions to have their full effect, it does not wish to sacrifice the significant gains that have been made in reducing the inflationary pressures in the economy by excessive or premature monetary expansion."

Bank Rate

Ottawa Journal

The anguish shows through in almost every paragraph of the Bank of Canada's apologia for reducing the bank rate by one-half per cent to six per cent. The language is clear, concise and eminently orthodox. It is an attempt to give a modest boost to the economy, to quicken the pace of industrial activity and to stop the rise in the unemployment rate. But the Bank of Canada itself is aware that its policies are risky.

"... the bank is trying to steer a very narrow course. While it is clear enough to Mr. Windhol both in the degree of slack that exists in the economy and the length of time it takes for changes in monetary conditions to have their full effect, it does not wish to sacrifice the significant gains that have been made in reducing the inflationary pressures in the economy by excessive or premature monetary expansion."

While 'One Kissing Politician Is Enough'

Opposition Leader Shines in Small Groups

Montreal Gazette

The Progressive Conservative party can win power only by defeating the Liberals in an election. An obvious point? It is but so obvious, what is wrong with the Conservatives? Where is their spirit?

Perhaps it has been forgotten by the party's national executive and by the principal figures in the parliamentary caucus that Canada has an adversary system of government. An opposition party serves neither the country nor itself if it will not constantly prod, jab, harass and needle the government.

A good test of an opposition leader's effectiveness is his ability to make the government front benchers in the House of Commons positively uncomfortable. It is not the only test, but it is an essential one. It is the Opposition leader's business to put the government on the defensive if he can.

One has a nagging suspicion, however, that it does not cause the cabinet especially unhappy to see Mr. Stanfield in the House. He has not given them many lot, afternoons. It has to be said in extenuation of his performance, however, that he has had precious little help from his parliamentary supporters.

There are 72 Conservatives in the House. That ought to have been enough to prevent the rise of the complacency and arrogance that have become characteristic of some government members.

Much is made of the fact that Mr. Stanfield is a reasonable and responsible man. Lamentable as it may be these qualities alone accomplish very little under an adversary system.

They must be allied with aggressiveness. If a party leader cannot (or will not attack the government, forcefully and clearly, at every opportunity, then there is nothing he can do to take up a favorable turn of events and a swing in the public mood.

Events could turn, and the public mood could swing, but what if they do not? Can an opposition leader really expect to get the better job if he does not try to take the initiative in his own hands?

Besides the general impression of Mr. Trudeau is that he, too, is a reasonable and responsible man. His capacity to enjoy life has not undermined this impression. The Opposition has not found his Achilles heel.

Perhaps Mr. Stanfield has a combative streak and is merely biding his time, waiting to strike until the government has finished writing all its white papers and passed into a more vigorous legislative phase. If that is the case, his time should soon come. It will not be long before a prosperous government has begun to envelop Ottawa.

Seven Swordfish Bi-planes Bring an Average of $700 Each

TYLDESBURG, Ont. (CP) — Bidding on seven Fairey Swordfish bi-planes, expected to be high because f a $15,000 bid informed to auctioneers Friday, was low Saturday. The planes sold for an average of $700 each.

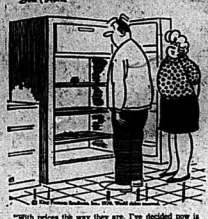
Auctioneer Don Murray, who had received $1,000 by wire from a Scot who made the $15,000 bid, took a second bid of $7,100 on the Swordfish. Mr. Murray said if the Scot didn't want to pay the other $14,000, he would keep the $1,000 deposit and the plane would go to the second bidder, a Fort Colborne air cadet squadron.

Only 15 of the Second World War Swordfish planes are known to exist and only one is in flying condition. Seven sat decaying on the farm of the late Ernie Simmons.

When Mr. Simmons, a recluse, died earlier this year he left $34,000 in bonds, about $1,200 in cash hidden in his rundown shackle house and a collection of cars, motorcycles and airplanes.

The sale was handled by the Public Trustee of Ontario and proceeds will be divided among cousins and an uncle, Roy Sellwell, 86, of St. Catharines.

Thirty-one Fairey planes from the Second World War and the seven Swordfishes brought total receipts of the three-day auction to about $30,000.



One of the Swordfishes was bought by the naval aviation museum at Ottawa, which had previously purchased another Swordfish from Mr. Simmons.

Gil Rushton of Burlington and some partners paid $925 for the remains of two Swordfishes from which they hope to make one airworthy. Robert Spence of Muskrik and several friends paid $1,630 for another aircraft.

Peter Bennett, a Thorndale sculptor, bought 17 wrecked motorcycles Saturday to use in his leather and metal creations.

The remains of a 1926 Hudson Super Six sold for $135, a Model T Ford for $155, a 1931 Model A Ford for $125 and a 1928 Buick coupe for $95.

400 Charges Laid At Rock Festival

SHELBURNE, Ont. (CP) — An estimated 15,000 rock music fans attended a rock festival near here Saturday and Sunday and provincial police laid about 400 charges involving liquor and drug offences.

The crown at the 200-acre park, 80 miles northwest of Toronto, generally remained in good spirits although there were some incidents of harassment involving fans and policemen.

Provincial police, smarting under criticism which followed their decision to stay off the site of a rock festival attended by about 85,000 people at Mosport Park last month, took a sterner line here.

A 250-man police force, both uniformed and in plainclothes, was on duty in the area. They searched fans at the gates and on the site, and also searched tents and cars for drugs and liquor.

Attorney-general Arthur Wishart had said the government intends to bill the promoters for the $87,000 cost of policing the event.

Miss Nude World Contest Draws Skimpy Crowd

FREELTON, Ont. (CP) — Despite a disappointing turnout at the Miss Nude World contest during the weekend, its promoters plan to make it an annual event.

The contest ended Sunday with the crowning of Rhonda Lee Stallan, 21, a Toronto bookkeeper. Annette Graef, 23, of Burlington, Ont., and Barbara Underhill, 27, of Campbellville, Ont., were runners-up.

Hans and Lisa Stein, promoters of the contest and owners of Four Seasons Nature Park near this village 15 miles north of Hamilton, had predicted that 2,000 persons from Canada and the United States would attend.

They also had expected 38 contestants.

However, only 13 contestants entered and the crowd never numbered more than 200. Only about a dozen cars were from outside Ontario.

But Mrs. Stein said in an interview they will hold the contest in Europe in 1971. The Steins have the Canadian copyright on the name Miss Nude World.

The contestants were judged in the nude by a panel, including broadcaster Gordon Sinclair and Angelo Mosca, Hamilton Tiger-Cats football player.

Only members of nudists camps could enter and observe the contest.

All except Miss Stallan and two other contestants were married and most said it was their husbands who were the most enthusiastic about nudism and had urged them to enter the contest.

"The only thing I was worried about in the contest," Miss Stallan said, "was certain pictures being published."

Other contestants were Lucy Letawsky, 24, of Toronto, formerly of Edmonton; Evelyn Kane, 29, of Rochester, N.Y.; and from Hamilton, Lucia Jones, 28, Siggi Grotjahn, 26, Judy Muir, 22, and Nachita Jaimes, formerly of Churchill, Man.

McLaughlin 99 Years Old

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Col. R. S. (Sam) McLaughlin, the "grand old man" of General Motors, celebrated his 99th birthday today.

The event was to be marked by a family gathering at his estate here, to be attended by his three daughters and close family friends.

"Mr. Sam" now is confined to bed after an operation last month for a bowel obstruction.

He founded the McLaughlin Carriage Works which later became General Motors of Canada Ltd. and served as president and chairman of the board of GM Until his recent illness he had spent at least an hour a day in his office.

Blast Injures 17

TORONTO (CP) — Seventeen firemen and a policeman were injured Monday when two explosions rocked a supermarket where an earlier blast started a fire.

All but four firemen were treated and released from hospital Monday night. All were in satisfactory condition with burns to hands and faces.

The first blast, at 1:32 a.m., sounded like an automobile collision, said Fred Edwards, the occupant of one of eight apartments on the upper floors of the three-storey building.

Firemen were fighting the blaze caused by the blast in the Priole Supermarket on the ground floor when the second explosion, described by a witness as "a sort of poof," injured two firemen in the street.

The third and largest explosion seven minutes later injured 15 firemen inside the building and a Metropolitan Toronto police sergeant in the street.

Talks Stalled

DETROIT (AP) — With less than a week to go before contracts expire, bargaining between the United Auto Workers and the Big Three auto-makers appears stalled today while the union awaits a second offer from its twin strike targets, General Motors and Chrysler Corp.

Fugitives Sought

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — City police believe two of four young men sought in the bombing of a research centre at the University of Wisconsin spent a few days last week in Peterborough.

David S. Fine, 18, Leo F. Burt, 22, Karleton Armstrong, 22, and his brother Dwight, 19, all were placed on the FBI's most-wanted list after an explosion Aug. 24 destroyed a six-storey army mathematics research centre and killed a physics student working in a laboratory.

Sinatra Gets in Tiff

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Frank Sinatra, who stormed out of a card game in which authorities say a gun was pulled, will have to get an entertainer's work permit and answer a few questions before he sings in this gambling spa again, Sheriff Ralph Lamb says.

Sinatra cut off a singing engagement at the Caesars Palace Casino Sunday after casino vice - president Sandford Waterman, 66, refused the singer credit to play for $16,000 stakes in a baccarat game and drew a .38-calibre pistol to end an argument that followed, Lamb said.

"If Sinatra comes back to town," Lamb said, "He's coming downtown to get a work card."

gives me any trouble, he's going to jail."

"I'm tired of him intimidating waiters, waitresses, starting fires and throwing plates," Lamb told reporters.

Actually, it's a heat-exchanger and its function is saving fuel. Here's how.

The heat-exchanger is located between the combustion chamber and the chimney outlet. Hot waste gases from the combustion chamber pass through the heat-exchanger making it hot.

Cold room air passes over the heat exchanger on its way into the furnace and is pre-warmed. Because room air is now warmer, it takes less fuel to heat it again.

Cutaway diagram shows how the heat exchanger saves fuel. Cold room air flows over the heat-exchanger and is pre-warmed by left-over heat.

How much will you save?

That depends on how good or bad your old furnace is and the efficiency of the rest of the system. But experience has shown that a 15 year old furnace for example, runs at 65 to 70% efficiency. A new Shell Furnace can reach an efficiency of 80% in an ideal heating system. That means, that for each dollar you spend on oil for your old furnace, a new Shell Furnace can save you up to 18¢!

Now's the time to do something about your furnace.

That's right. Now that the heating season is over you should have your heating system checked by your local Shell Agent. If it's ready for replacement, he can arrange for installation during the warm weather without discomfort to your family. Call him today.

A new Shell Oil Furnace with the exclusive heat-exchanger is the best way to lower your heating costs and improve your winter comfort.

Translate Fashions

Greek Designers Make Conquests

ATHENS (CP) — A culture of many centuries has given to the Greeks a unique knack for translating fashions to their own idiom. The recent world premiere Hellenic Fashion Institute collection showings proved a case in point.

The showing featured a native-wise recall back to the sun-drenched homeland for the multiple purpose of reminding the world that Greek designers have made conquests on foreign shores. Among the Greek-born designers who returned for the event were George Stavropoulos of New York, Dimitris Kritsas and Jean Desses of Paris and James Galanos of California.

It was as informal as a large Greek family gathering with plenty of feta, or goat's-milk cheese, resined wine, gossip and the cheek-kissing greeting and farewell as if all the participants had been born in the same village. But there was little at village level in the succession of vintage wines and the dress o' the guests.

The designers resolved to prove to the international buyers and fashion press that Athens has come a long way in fashion awareness since th' Parthenon was built.

They provided a fashion parade of floor-length summer magnificences in printed silks, sari and metallic-em broidered gauzes, the latest Galanos pleats with representations of Greek caryatids—the stone ladies who hold up the roof in classic architecture — stirpings and georgettes, and chiffons layered color on color.

For an Athenian, summer, midnight is the mere shank of the evening but North Americans are unaccustomed to fashion showings that start at 12:30 a.m.

The assorted guests wanted front-seat views and kept dinning the fashion alley by carrying chairs from the back to the front. Ultimately the models had barely room to slink between the remaining spaces.

The Kritsas group went pagan ir white gowns slit to the thigh and with plenty of "Lo and behold!" as to bodice.

He introduced fringed Greek kerchief dresses for the gypsy look. The Maximilian group did purple snakeskin lined in black mink and a navy maxi-coat of dyed Indian lamb. Famous for his use of chiffons, Stavropoulos showed dinner gowns in cafe au lait, the models in bare feet skimming swiftly over the marble floor. Galanos played with prints of Greek classic designs, but went gaucho with a suit in red, black-caped for a kind of Valentino movie appeal. Jean Desses used the historic pyjama-pantalon of the Greek provinces as basis for the new form of elegance.

When the clock stood at 1.30, the crowd decided that enough was sufficient. As a single entity, they marched to the door past the models who were showing a line of body jewelry.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN PATTERSON

Foxboro Couple Wed for 60 Years

An "At Home" at the residence of their daughter in the Oak Hills, and an evening family dinner at the Sun Luck Gardens in Belleville marked the diamond wedding anniversary Sunday for Mr. and Mrs. John B. Patterson of Foxboro.

The couple has lived in Foxboro for the past seven years, moving to the village from the family farm in Thurlow township where they had resided for more than half a century.

Dozens of cards from friends and relatives and congratulations from Ontario Premier John P. Robarts, and local members of parliament were received by the couple.

Mr. Patterson was born in the Stirling area, while his bride of 60 years, the former Myrtle Reid, is a native of Thurlow.

The couple was married at the home of the bride's parents then took a wedding trip to Toronto and across Lake Ontario to Niagara Falls.

"Travelling was a lot different then than it is now," Mr. Patterson recalls. He drove a horse and buggy from Stirling to the family home for the wedding.

Mr. Patterson still drives his car and takes great enjoyment from his garden.

"I get the garden worked up in the spring, but do all the hoeing by hand," he says proudly.

The couple are members of Emmanuel United Church, where Mrs. Patterson is still an active worker in the UCW.

Mr. and Mrs. Patterson have two children, Mrs. Donald G. (Ferne) Williams of the Oak Hills, and a son Glenn of Tweed. There are four grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Pouring tea during Sunday's "At Home" were Mrs. Wanda Sine, Mrs. Abel Parsons, Mrs. R. A. Patterson and Mrs. Glen Patterson.

Serving were Mrs. Wayne Bennett of Hamilton, Nancy and Susan Williams, Mrs. Garth Sine, Kathy Sine, Mrs. Frank Tunnnon and Pattie Tuffimon.

Youngsters Conduct Complete Church Service for Grown-ups

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: We observed the Children's Sunday and everyone had a lovely time watching the little ones take the church service. There were youngsters to read the Scripture for the day, pray, recite certain passages from the Bible, lead the children's choir singing nice hymns with a conductor (himself a youngster of 10 years).

At the end of the service, every child present was given a gift packet containing locally manufactured biscuits and sweets and cards selected specially for them from the parents sent by our benefactors from over the seas.

It is worth the trouble of preparing the little ones for this occasion; for days we worked at rehearsing and they did not make a single mistake.

The youngsters are crazy over cards and most of them will spend all their pocket money for the day buying cards instead of lollies and eating something from the school tuck shop. They love pictures of flowers and animals from Birthday and Get Well cards. Mrs. A. Peters, Christian Audio Visual Center, 62nd Street, Mandalay, Upper Burma.

P.S. Please ask donors to enclose name and address, to leave off declaration form and send by ordinary sea mail. This helps to avoid duty on these used cards.

* * *

Dear Mrs. Peters: You give a vivid picture. I would love to have been the whole performance, including that 15-year-old character leading the singing. You did not mention who preached the sermon!

About the cards, I gather what you want us to do is merely write some place on the parcel, "Used Cards — no commercial value", but leave off the official-looking form which seems to impel the customs officials to charge some duty!

* * *

Dear Doris: A friend has three children and she treats them terribly. You can hear her hollering a block away. She has the children so nervous they cannot sleep without having nightmares. Then they get a good licking for having them. They are lovely children; she gives credit for their ages (four, three and two).

I have tried to reason with her to be more like a mother and treat the children decently. She gets on my nerves so much I hate to see her arrive at my door. I told her she should have psychiatric treatments.—Worried Friend.

Dear Friend: A temperamous mother achieves the opposite to what she seems to be after. She demands good behavior; she gets uneven, poorly functioning children. She indulges her own temper at a very great price.

The trouble is indeed with her and not the kids. The bollering may be her reaction to dissatisfaction with her husband, with her home, with her background. Counselling might just get at the root of it — if she were to see her problem well enough to even seek it. There's the rub.

Confidential to Worried: Relax. What you have done is risky business, but cannot possibly mean pregnancy. Your physical symptoms may be caused by any one of a host of things — fatigue, anxiety, or generally poor health.

I'd suggest an early visit to your doctor; and when you do see him hold nothing whatever back, if you want his help.

Ann Landers

Encouraging Words For Homosexuals

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a homosexual who has managed to go straight. I think you should give encouragement to others who want to do the same, instead of telling them, as you did recently, that their chances are slim.

I went both therapy but it didn't solve my problem. It did, as you pointed out, help me correct other personality disorders. You were right about that. But let me tell you how I made the transition from homosexuality to a normal life.

ANN LANDERS

First I threw out my homosexual magazine collection and I stopped seeing my gay friends. I avoided gay bars and night cruising. I made an effort to buy straight clothes. I dropped the Mary mannerisms which we all recognize as come-on signals.

I began to look at myself as a man and forced myself to have a real love affair. It was difficult at first, actually distasteful, but after a while I enjoyed it. I also discovered that the companionship of a woman can be very stimulating. I especially like being seen with a pretty female and considered normal. The lady is married now to someone else, but we are still good friends.

I am a different person today and I would not go back to the gay life for anything in the world. If I can do it, so can others. A word of encouragement from you could help. Sign me — MADE IT IN MODESTO.

* * *

DEAR MADE IT: Thank you for letting me know how it was with you. And now, may I tell you how it is with others who relate similar stories? They were not homosexuals to begin with. They had had some homosexual experiences but, as any authority will tell you, there's a big difference between the true homo and one who engages in early experimentation with a member of the same sex. I receive countless letters from frightened teen-age boys who describe themselves as homosexuals. I always urge them to get counselling because often their fears are unfounded.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your sarcastic answer to the young man who signed himself "Hate Aggressive Women" was uncalled for. Haven't you seen enough of today's females to know a man doesn't need anything special to attract a sex pot? He needs only to be (1) male and (2) present.

True, as you said, a woman can't rape a man, but she can seduce him. It happens all the time. I've heard shocking stories from bachelors, widowers and divorced men — some of them not particularly attractive. They describe with a fair amount of bewilderment, how women literally dragged them to bed.

An 18-year-old nephew of mine had to pay a dear price for his naivete. He actually married a 24-year-old nut who knew exactly what she was doing when she got pregnant. There should be laws to protect young lads against females like her. In the old days mothers used to have little talks with their daughters. Today they should have little talks with their sons. — FEMINELLE.

* * *

DEAR FED: I'm in favor of little talks between mothers and sons, although Pa is usually a better candidate. Your 18-year-old nephew certainly could have used some guidance from somebody. Se should have been told there's more to sex than having fun and that 18-year-old boys can make live babies. He also should have been told that every sex act carries with it a responsibility — not only for the boy, but for the girl. And finally, he should have been reminded of that wonderful old adage (my grandmother again), "If you want to dance, you should be willing to pay the fiddler."

A Repeat Recipe for Pancakes

By MARY MOORE

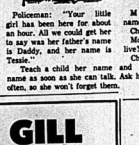
More than two years ago I gave you a dinner menu and recipes for a roast shoulder of pork and sauerkraut and added to pancakes meal.

I was surprised and pleased at its popularity. I drink more of our Canadian cooks made Potato Pancakes for.. I think they are delicious. Today I am going to repeat this German - Austrian - Hungarian recipe for Potato Cakes then I am going to enlarge on them by adding ground beef. It is a meat stretcher in a delicious guise that our budgeters will welcome.

POTATO PANCAKES
(Serves 4 to 6)

2 cups washed, pared, shredded (¼") potatoes
1 egg
Shake of pepper
2 tbsps. flour
Butter or bacon drippings (for frying)

As soon as potatoes are shredded and measured add onion and egg and mix to prevent discoloring. Stir in salt, pepper and flour. About 5 min. before serving time melt about 2 tbsps. butter or bacon fat in large frying pan until bubbling. Add spoonfuls of mixture. You should have eight. With bottom of lifter press slightly to flatten and brown lightly. Turn over and brown other side. Potato pancakes should not be overcooked. They should be crisp and have a waxy texture.



MEAT POTATO PANCAKES
(Serves 4 or 5)

2 cups washed, pared, shredded (¼") raw potatoes (packed)
2 cups ground chuck beef (packed — ½ lb.)
1 tspn. minced onion (or instant flakes)
1 egg
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
1 tbspn. flour
2 or 3 tbsps. butter or margarine or oil

Shred potatoes into large bowl and quickly measure. At once add other ingredients in order listed to prevent browning. Mix well. Shape into 10 patties. Add to hot large frying pan in which butter or margarine or oil are heated and flatten to ½" thickness with bottom of lifter. These cook quickly and should. Meat should be slightly pink and potatoes still retain some of their waxiness — about 6 min. Good with catsup.

Policeman: "Your little girl has been here for about an hour. All we could get her to say was her father's name is Daddy, and her name is Tessie."

Mother: "What's your name?"

Child: "Tessie Smith."

Mother: "Where do you live?"

Child: "1800 Oak Drive."

Teach a child her name and address and her father's name as soon as she can talk. Ask her to tell you these facts often, so she won't forget them.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.,
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Prompt Attention To Squint Urged

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I'm puzzled, my wife and then another, I can't make up my mind whether or not our only daughter's eye-squint is serious. She's only five, a pretty little thing but one eye turns in toward her nose.

We've been told to forget it, she'll outgrow it. My husband is calling me a worrywart and it's causing some tension between us.

But my intuition, or something, tells me time is a-wasting, and that we should take her to an eye specialist. My husband says she's too young. Why spend money unnecessarily? You can understand why I am so anxious to have your opinion. — Mrs. E.

COMMENT: Call it your intuition or good sense, but I am on your side rather than on your husband's. If he insists on procrastinating, he will not only interfere with your daughter's good looks (and leave her open to the jibes or her young playmates) but he may actually endanger her sight. The "good" eye may become lazy and weak.

Children don't usually grow out of cross-eyes (strabismus) when they have it at age five. It's true that some infants are cross-eyed during the first few months of life. It takes time for the two eyes to work together as a team. As their eye muscles strengthen, the strabismus disappears. They "grow out of it." But not, as I said, when they get older.

My suggestion is that you take your daughter to an eye specialist. They are ways of examining very young children. For some, glasses have been prescribed while they were still under one year of age.

The ophthalmologist will decide what treatment is necessary for your daughter. He may prescribe special eye exercise or glasses. Some children require both. Whatever the treatment, right now is the time to determine what is best.

Your husband (and daughter) will be thankful you are a worrywart.

For Mr. U.: It is true that for some iron pills cause upset stomach and constipation.

Have you tried a different brand? Sometimes a change is better tolerated.

If still unable to take iron in pill form, then why not try to make up the deficiency by taking a diet high in iron? It may take longer to get over your slight anemia, nevertheless, this may be the solution.

Some of the "high iron" content foods are: prunes, lean meats, liver, cereals, oysters, and such greens as spinach, turnip, chard or kale. Does your doctor know how upsetting the iron pills are? He can't make any new suggestions until you tell him.

For Mrs. T.: Most "routine" blood tests include examination for syphilis. But if in doubt, better ask.

• • •

For Mrs. C.: If you have been having colitis lately, try eliminating the large helpings of bran you take every day. Some people find that their lower bowel just can't take it in daily doses.

For Mr. Z.: I don't believe it has been established that eating a dozen or two oysters acts as an aphrodisiac. (Psychologically, perhaps.)

THE BETTER HALF

By Bob Barnes

"Could you make it snappy?... My Cadillac is double-parked."

Sydney J. Harris Says

Primitive Tribes Were Peaceful

(During his vacation, we are reprinting selections from Mr. Harris' latest collection of columns in book form, Leaving the Surface.)

One of the chief conceits of so-called "civilization" is that war and conflict were more prevalent in what we call "primitive" societies. But most anthropological research does not bear out this view. Studies of primitive tribes, whether in Africa or among the American Indians, indicate that only as the tribes advanced further into more "civilized" states did they relax their efforts at peace-keeping and intensify their warlike activities.

Indeed, most of the North American tribes had "peace chiefs" as well as "war chiefs." The peace chiefs engaged in elaborate ceremonies to induce other tribes to make potential conflicts to be resolved amicably without loss of face on either side. And of these "primitives" were so psychologically shrewd that sometimes they arranged for the tribes to engage in mock battles, with the exchange of hostages, to drain away the hostility and release pent-up emotions without going through a real war.

The higher the level of civilization, the fewer provisions are made by society for resolving conflicts. Every modern nation has a department of war; none has a department of peace. As society becomes wealthier, stronger, and more technical, more of its resources are allocated to military preparations.

Methods of maintaining peace were part of the essential fabric of primitive societies, because it was realized even then that deterrence did not deter: tribes that prepared for war went to war, unless there was some means of turning off the war machinery and turning on the peace machinery. This is a lesson we seem to have lost in our advancing technological society.

For several years we have been involved in "disarmament negotiations" in Geneva, but nobody pretends that there are much more than feeble efforts to make a moral posture, while at the same time most of our energy and funds go into building the most powerful armament factory the world has ever known. It is a ludicrously unequal contest between the "war chief" and the "peace chiefs" in our tribe — especially since no one knows who the peace chief is or what he is really doing.

Perhaps it is time we dropped the illusion of being "civilized," and restored some of those "primitive" methods of keeping our young men alive.

Oil Barge Founders In Gulf

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — Transport department officials were scheduled to travel to a spot in the Gulf of St. Lawrence today about 60 miles northwest of Summerside, P.E.I. to determine what action can be taken in the sinking of an oil barge carrying 875,000 gallons of bunker C oil.

The 500-foot Irving Whale, an unmanned barge owned by K. C. Irving interests in Saint John, N.B., was being towed from Halifax to Bathurst, N.B., when it sank in about 250 feet of water Monday morning.

Prince Edward Island's prime north shore beaches lie in the path of the oil, but a statement issued by Atlantic Towing Ltd., a division of J. D. Irving Ltd. of Saint John, the company which was operating the tug Irving Maple, said there was "no evidence" of bunker C oil escaping Monday.

The statement said a "small quantity" of light heating oil was carried on the barge for heating purposes and "as the oil surfaced, it was being dispersed by heavy seas."

Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island said late Monday that an aircraft from CFB Summerside had sighted a slick more than a mile long and 100 yards wide.

A transport department official here said removing oil cargo from the barge would be a "pretty formidable" task for divers because of the water depth.

Curve Lake Indians Burn White Paper

CURVE LAKE, Ont. (CP) — A copy of the federal government white paper on Indian rights was burned Monday before a crowd of nearly 1,000 at the annual Curve Lake powwow held by local Ojibwas.

Ojibwa Chief Elsie Knott put a match to the document, saying "that this will show Mr. Trudeau what we think of the white paper." She then joined other band members in dancing on the ashes.

Hugh Faulkner, deputy speaker of the Commons, was here for the powwow but did not see the burning. He said later:

"My impression of the incident was that it was done in the spirit of good fun."

Curve Lake is about 15 miles northwest of Peterborough.

If Vibration Can't Be Cured Machine Used May Be Faulty

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"While returning from Florida last summer we ran into a rain storm and the car developed a severe vibration. It seemed to come from the right front wheel, but since it was also noticeable in the rear seat we could not be certain.

"A mechanic checked the tires and the steering mechanism, but could find no defects. While the vibration is more noticeable when driving in the rain, it is also quite pronounced on dry roads at speeds over 55 mph.

"After getting home, new shocks were installed and the wheels have been balanced on two different occasions, but the problem persists.

"Do you have any suggestions as to the cause of the trouble and what can be done to correct it?" — Mr. S. B., St. Catharines, Ont.

While driving on wet roads may accentuate an existing problem, I have never heard of rain causing a vibration.

In most instances this problem is triggered by one or more unbalanced road-wheel assemblies. Remember the fact that the wheels have just been balanced does not necessarily eliminate them as a possible source of annoying vibrations.

Some time ago a reader wrote me seeking advice about a high-speed vibration he had been trying to cure for 17,000 miles. Three times his dealer had tried and failed to overcome the vibration by balancing the wheels.

I suggested that he have the wheels tested at another shop, which he did, and it turned out that to some degree all the wheels were in need of balancing. Upon completion of the job, there was no further problem.

Balancing wheels is quite demanding and it is important that the mechanic doing it is well-trained and aware of the capabilities of the particular type of balancing equipment he is using.

As with most testing equipment, it depends on the knowledge and skill of the man who operates it. Also, the wheel-balancing machine must be tested occasionally to establish its accuracy. Most of them are highly sophisticated and the slightest defect can result in inaccurate balancing.

Best road - wheels, out-of-round tires, or slight bulges on the sidewalls can cause hard-to-pin point vibrations that wheel balancing will not correct. Due to centrifugal force, most vibrations are felt at speeds above 60 mph. With ever-increasing speed limits, the slightest imbalance in one or more of the tire and wheel assemblies can result in critical vibrations.

If, after examining and balancing the tires and checking for bent road-wheels, the problem persists — the next likely culprit is a defective universal joint. This usually shows up as a quivering type of vibration that increases with speed.

Kinsmen Take OBA Semi-Finals Opener

The main strength of the day appeared to be what they didn't rather than did do against the Perth Boys Club. Coach Moe Hunter's club opened their OBA semi-final series with a 7-2 win over the Toronto team.

Unlike the wasting spad the Kinsmen didn't commit fielding errors, didn't lose their composure when they were behind and didn't require a pitching change throughout the nine-inning contest.

"I'd have to say that this was one of the best games they've played," said Hunter. "They were all hitting the ball and they fielded well."

Righthander Terry "Midge" McTaggart met the distance to record the win, after surviving a somewhat shaky start. He gave Toronto's only runs in the third inning on two hits and an error to give Perth a brief 2-1 lead.

McTaggart allowed only two more singles over the rest of the route, keeping the Toronto hitters off-balance with a sharp breaking curve ball.

The Kinsmen committed three errors behind him, but none proved costly, and his fielders more than made up for the miscues by turning in three double plays. The Belleville infield provided the finest fielding play of the game, when first Sassenian Barry Culnin scooped Paul Goodfellow's one-hop relay to complete a pitcher-shortstop-first toto killing wiping out the lead-off runner in the eighth inning.

The losers on the other hand committed three errors and two of them were directly responsible for a five-run explosion in the sixth inning that gave Belleville the win.

The losers on the other hand committed three errors and two of them were directly responsible for a five-run explosion in the sixth inning that gave Belleville the win.

Brian Coughlin's single, an error by the third baseman and a passed ball placed runners on second and third. Coughlin scored on catcher Doug Kelly's error on a live throw to the plate and Terry Meagher followed him in with some alert base running. A walk and base hits by Glenn Carleton and Craig Rump produced three more runs as the Kinsmen chased starter John Sexton.

Paul Goodfellow had solved Sexton's baffling deliveries for a double and homer that produced his club's first two runs.

Steve Moore and Brian Coughlin aided Goodfellow in the offensive department as Moore lined three singles and Coughlin banged out a double and single. Glenn Carleton, Culkin and Rump had the other hits for Belleville.

McTaggart gave up a total of five Toronto safeties, while fanning eight batters and issuing one base on balls.

Sexton, Stan Sobol and Steve Bunce were the victims of a ten - hit Kinsmen attack. They recorded five strikeouts and walked two batters. Second game of the series will be played in Toronto next Saturday.

Plane's Concrete teammates mob centrefielder Ron Urch after his two-run homer in the tenth inning gave them the South Hastings League Championship. Plane's came back from an 8-0 deficit to beat Reid 11-9 and win the best of seven final series in five games.

Intelligencer Sports

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1978

Plane's Come Back To South Hastings Title

Plane's Concrete came back against the established South Hastings "comeback team" Sunday to add the league championship to their regular season pennant win.

The Cannifton team fought back from an 8-0 fifth inning deficit to take an 11-9 extra inning win from Read and eliminate last year's champions in five games, before a crowd of close to 300 fans.

Outfielder Ron Urch was the man of the hour for the winners as he cracked a two-run homer in left field in the bottom of the 10th inning to give his team the championship. "He threw me a fastball inside," said the slender centrefielder of the home run pitch. "I thought it was gone when I hit it."

Read pitcher Harold Pascoe, who absorbed the loss in relief of starter Frank Farrell after serving up the home run pitch. Farrell was coasting along with a one-hit shutout and an eight-run lead before a solo homer by Bernie Coughlin touched off a five-run fifth inning for Plane's.

The winners added two runs in the sixth inning and another pair in the bottom of the ninth after Read had gone ahead 9-7.

Garnie Adams picked up the win in relief of Ted Abrams. Between them they allowed 13 hits, walked three batters and set 10 down on strikes.

Pascoe and Farrell was touched for 11 safeties, while walking six and fanning seven men.

Urch paced the Plane's hitters with his game-winning homer and a double, while Bob Laffman, John Tweedy and Warren Hay each had two hits. Bernie Coughlin blasted a homer and Pat O'Connor and Howard Meeks added singles.

Larry Coffey, Harold Pascoe, Paul Hanley and Peter Enright collected two hits apiece for Read, with single safeties going to Steve White, Carm Milligan, Gerry Brennan, Frank Farrell and Ed Lazier.

Kittiwake and her proud crew celebrate in Picton Harbor Saturday after their 3:47 hour sail down the bay from Belleville to take the Katie Grey cup. Launched only a month ago, the Vildrag 28, skippered by Dr. W.A.L. McDonald of Trenton and crewed by his three sons, Sandy, Bill and Don and Eben James, has shown her stern to most of the local fleet in club races this summer.

'Kittiwake' Cops Crown In Katie Grey Classic

In one of the fastest runs on record, Dr. W. A. L. McDonald's yacht Kittiwake sailed the 25 miles from Belleville to Picton Saturday in 3 hours and 42 minutes to capture the Katie Grey trophy.

Strong winds drove the racing fleet of about 20 yachts over the course in record time, and caused mild havoc in the Bay of Quinte's upper reaches.

On corrected time, Kittiwake, a C and C Viking 28, took the historic Katie Grey cup in 2.10 hours. She was skippered by Dr. McDonald and crewed by his three sons, Sandy, Bill and Don and Eben James, all of Trenton.

The winning yacht was the third keelboat across the finish line. She was preceded by Ged. Catford's Evangeline who made the distance in 3 hours, 27 minutes, and Bill Hinkle's Jungo who came in 3 hours and 39 minutes after the 10 a.m. starting gun off Belleville.

Runner - up on corrected time was Pete Fanjik's Thunderbird Tuona. Last year's winner, Varuna, skippered by Grant Rathbun of Trenton finished third on corrected time.

However, the keel boat fleet was beaten by a 18 - foot Fireball, Sixpence, skippered by Peter Cox and crewed by Roger Brown of Toronto.

Sixpence, just returned from competing in CORK in Kingston last week, sailed from Belleville to Picton in 3:15 hours. But because the race is limited to keel boats, she was not in the running for the Katie Grey cup.

Waite's Hurling Squares Finals

Pitching, which has been the strong point of the Ellis Janitors all season, carried them to a 2-0 win over Rollins Construction, last night, to even the best of seven Commercial finals at two games apiece.

Ted Waite was the game's standout as he hurled a brilliant one - hit win for the Janitors. The stocky righthander gave up four walks and recorded a half-dozen strikeouts.

A first - inning single by Jerry Hill was the only hit the losers were able to muster, and Waite was aided by errorless support by his teammates.

The winners scored in the second inning when catcher Paul Goodfellow drew a walk, moved to second on John Campbell's sacrifice and scored on a double by Terry Meagher.

Wayne McConnell threw a six hitter on the losers mound, shutting the batters and walking three.

John Campbell lead the Janitors with a pair of singles, with the other hits going to Meagher, Goodfellow, Cliff Scott and Wayne McTaggart.

Tyke All-Stars Tie OBA Series

Two games in the best 3 of 5 OBA Tyke all Ontario Championships were played over the weekend with the Belleville Towers all - stars edging Islington Teamsters 2-1 in the first game 9-8 and losing the second 8-3.

In the first game Belleville played host to the Montreal Expos in the National League while losing forced extra overtime after leading 8-5 going into the final inning.

For 3½ innings both teams went scoreless and the tension had built up as the game turned into a duel between pitchers Bob Orvac and Peter Hall.

In the 11th inning it was all over when Howie Coens scored on Andy Lupenette's sacrifice bunt.

Hall was the winning pitcher after being relieved in the fourth by Coens, he came back in overtime and held his opponents off the scoreboard. Along with Coens and Mike Burke he pitched an eight hitter, downing 18 on strikes and allowing three walks. For the losers it was Bob Orvac going all the way for a nine hitter with 15 strikeouts and one free pass.

In the second game Belleville had trouble in the pitching department. Peter Hall was out with a sore arm.

Islington after taking the lead 7-0 in the first inning tied in the third for six to go ahead 7-0. They scored their last two runs in the fourth and fifth.

The losers could only manage one run each in the fourth, fifth and seventh off superb pitching by Bob Orvac. Losing pitchers were Howie Coens and Randy Hutchinson.

The next game will be played on next Saturday at Islington.

Top hitters for Belleville were Howie Coens with a home run and two singles, Peter Hall, Mike Burke and Andy Lupenette each had two singles.

For Islington it was Bob Orvac a double and single, Hugh McMinn a triple and Brian Ellis a double.

In the Islington win the top hitter for the winners was Jim Torrance with a double and single and for the losers Mike Burke had a triple and double.

Armed Forces Title Taken In Sudden-Death Duel

TRENTON — In sudden death play here Saturday Cpl. Reg Heenan of CFB Uplands won the Canadian Armed Forces National Golf Championships.

Heenan, who missed last year's competition in Ottawa because of an arm injury, beat out the defending title-holder, Major Don Cordukes of Canadian Forces Headquarters.

Both men were tied at 154 after 36 holes of medal play on the well - conditioned Base Trenton Golf Course.

Heenan met Cordukes for a play down on the fifth hole in which the Corporal was in on three, after a precise drive 240 yds. to the right of the green and a wedge to within three feet of the tree.

Major Cordukes, driving in on the left, wound up in a sand trap on his second shot giving Heenan the victory.

Other top scorers were Capt. Doug McCarther of CFB Comox, B.C. and Capt. Ed Legace, CFB Valcartier, each with 157s.

Winning the team competition at the two-day Championship was the Zone 4 (Eastern Ontario) eight - man entry.

Participation in the Zone 4 team was largely from bases in the Ottawa-valley.

In all, eight teams, seven from Canadian regions and one representing European bases, competed here in this second national golf tournament for the Canadian Armed Forces.

Forces Best

Comparing scores after the final round of the Canadian Armed Forces national golf championship at CFB Trenton, Ont., Sept. 5, are Ottawa area golfers, Cpl. Heenan, left, and Maj. Don Cordukes. Both players finished the 36-hole event with identical scores of 154. Cpl. Heenan later won a one-hole, sudden-death play-off and individual honors. They led an eight-man, zone four Ottawa Valley entry to its second straight Forces golf title.

A forearm smash to the back of Ottawa quarterback Gary Wood's head on the first play from scrimmage Monday night touched him asleep and sent the Rough Riders reeling to a 27-21 defeat in Eastern Football Conference action at Ottawa.

The act cost Tornoto Argonauts the services of defensive end Ed Harrington for the rest of the game but set the pattern of play for the night as Toronto's Bill Symonds scored four touchdowns.

The Argo victory, their third in six starts, sent them to the top of the league with six points, the same number amassed by Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Montreal Alouettes in five games.

The three-way tie for first comes about from an earlier Labor Day game at Hamilton where the Ticats edged Montreal 21-20 on the strength of a last-quarter touchdown and field goal.

Ottawa, with two victories in six games, has four points.

"I simply didn't see him coming," said Wood after the game. He spent most of the first quarter on the sidelines as the Argos built a 14-3 lead on Symons first two touchdowns.

"I'm sure he didn't mean to knock me out," said Wood in the dressing room after the game. "It was a pitchout to the right and I'm sure he thought I still had the ball."

Ottawa coach Jack Gotta described the play as "a hammer job, but I don't want to make a stink about it."

Toronto quarterback Don Jonas contributed two scoring tosses, one to Symons and another to flanker Jim Thorpe, and kicked five converts. Dave Mann kicked two singles to complete the Argo scoring.

Wood recovered to throw touchdown passes to speedster Hugh Oldham and flanker Billy Cooper and ran 16 yards for another Rough Rider touchdown. Ivan MacMillan converted all three Ottawa touchdowns to raise his league-leading points total to 28.

The Hamilton-Montreal game, played before 28,702 fans, developed into a series of misplays until the Alouettes broke the touchdown drought midway into the fourth quarter when Dennis Duncan left a dumbfounded Ted Page in the lurch before taking a Passador pass in paydirt.

Up until that time all the scoring had come from placekicking. Hamilton's Tommy Joe Coffey had kicked two of his three field goals and added a single, and George Springate kicked two field-goal efforts.

Montreal added its TD lead on Duncan's touchdown but the Ticats replied smartly five plays later with Danny Bailey sweeping over from three yards out. Coffey's convert and his third field goal wrapped up the scoring.

Page said after the game he didn't hear the signal for man-to-man coverage during the defensive huddle. Consequently, he said, he remained in a zone defence leaving Duncan free to stumble unmolested for the score.

His redeemed himself later, however, knocking the ball loose from Montreal halfback Moses Denson deep in Alouette territory that set the stage for Coffey's third field goal.

Neither club could generate a sustained attack. Montreal coach Sam Etcheverry became disenchanted with his starting quarterback, Sonny Wade, and inserted Passador into the lineup.

It was behind Passador that the Als made their first penetration into Hamilton's end of the field about eight minutes into the second quarter.

Both touchdowns followed exciting pass-and-run plays. Passador hit flanker Terry Evanshen for 48 yards in the Hamilton 16-yard line and two plays later Duncan scored.

On the first play following the kickoff, Hamilton quarterback Joe Zuger combined with halfback Dave Fennell for a 67-yard gain to the Montreal 18 before being stopped by Al Phaneuf, the man he beat on the play.

"It was the same play that Ottawa beat us with," said Etcheverry after the game. "We were in exactly the same defence." He was referring to Ottawa's 21-7 win at Ottawa last week.

He felt that in both cases Montreal still had a chance to snatch victory except for fourth-quarter defensive lapses.

Redskins Win One For Late Lombardi

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Washington Redskins rallied to beat Miami Dolphins 26-21 Saturday night in a sentimental victory for their late coach, Vince Lombardi. The Redskins had been down two touchdowns in the opening minutes of the National Football League exhibition game.

It was the first defeat for the Dolphins after four victories in pre-season exhibitions.

Larry Csonka scored touchdowns the first two times Miami got the ball. But the Redskins rallied behind the passing of Sonny Jurgensen and Curt Knight's four field goals to turn things around. Two interceptions by rookie Jessie Kaye helped the 'Skins.

In other NFL exhibitions, Minnesota Vikings edged Cleveland Browns 24-21, Baltimore Colts defeated Detroit Lions 31-14, Green Bay Packers tied Cincinnati Bengals 10-10, San Diego Chargers overcame St. Louis Cardinals 38-27, New York Giants whipped Philadelphia Eagles 27-7, Kansas City Jets downed New Orleans Saints 27-14, Kansas City Chiefs blanked Dallas Cowboys 13-0, Denver Broncos humbled Chicago Bears 30-17 and Los Angeles Rams broke loose in the last quarter for a 20-3 triumph over Houston Oilers.

Veteran Johnny Unitas passed for one touchdown and set up another in leading the Colts over the Lions. Len Dawson threw a 30-yard touchdown pass to help the chiefs down the Cowboys.

Joe Namath completed his first five passes and played only the first half as the Jets tripped the Saints. Fran Tarkenton threw three touchdown passes in leading the Giants over the Eagles.

Denver's offence came alive against Chicago, with Pete Liske firing scoring passes to a quartet of receivers and going over for a touchdown. Floyd Little had an electrifying 77-yard run to set up Liske's touchdown.

Roughriders Live by Pass Stamp Bombs Kill Eskimos

The pass meant victory for Saskatchewan Roughriders but spelled defeat for Edmonton Eskimers in a regular season Football Conference games Monday.

The Roughriders, with flanker Gordie Barwell as the prime receiver, collected 310 yards through the air to post a 30-11 win over Winnipeg Blue Bombers before 15,43 fans in Regina.

In Calgary, before 23,310 fans, the Stampeders intercepted four Edmonton passes—all in the second quarter—and went on to defeat the Eskimos 28-13. The interceptions, made by defensive halfback Gig'Pierce, accounted for 24 points.

Saskatchewan's victory, under the direction of quarterback Ron Lancaster who rested an injured arm in the first half, gave the Roughriders 14 points, four more than the Stampeders.

British Columbia Lions are third with eight points, four ahead of Edmonton, and six more than Winnipeg.

The Roughies, who also used Don Weiss at quarterback, trailed 10-7 at the half but outscored the Bombers 6-1 in the third quarter and 17-6 in the final 15 minutes for their seventh win in eight starts.

Barwell, from Saskatoon, scored two touchdowns on long passes from Lancaster, and made seven receptions for 202 yards.

In his seventh season with the Roughriders, Barwell also set up a third touchdown when he took a 58-yard pass from Lancaster to the Winnipeg one, enabling fullback George Reed to score his third six-pointer of the season.

Halfback Silas McKinnis got the other Saskatchewan touchdown on a 13-yard pass from Weiss, Jack Abendschan, second in the WFC's scoring race with 54 points, booted a field goal and three converts.

For the Bombers, losing their sixth game in seven starts, Ed Breding scored the one touchdown on a two-yard pass from backup quarterback Ron Johnson, Gene Lakusiak added a field goal, convert and single.

Johnson called the entire game for Winnipeg as regular pivot Wally Gabler rested an ankle he hurt in an earlier contest.

Lancaster, who coach Eagle Keys said would be rested against Winnipeg unless Weiss ran into trouble, completed nine of 19 passes for 240 yards in two quarters.

Winnipeg picked up 19 first downs compared with Saskatchewan's 18. But the Roughies had a net offence of 394 yards, 98 along the ground, to Winnipeg's 232 yards. Johnson was good on 21 of 37 passes for 248 yards.

Saskatchewan lost halfback Bobby Thompson early in the third quarter with a leg injury. There was no immediate word on his condition.

Meanwhile, the Eskimos surprised Calgary fans by starting Jim Thomas at split end in place of Tom Nettles, out Sunday afternoon and waived through the Canadian Football League.

However, even with the speedy Thomas in the lineup the Eskimos had trouble penetrating Calgary's defensive line.

With Calgary leading 3-0, defensive halfback Ron Stewart intercepted a pass thrown by quarterback Don Trull early in the second quarter. On the next play, quarterback Jerry Keeling hit Herman Harrison with a seven-yard touchdown pass.

Peres followed with three interceptions, all against Rusty Clark, to set up two touchdowns by Dave Cranmer—both on passes from Keeling—and a 38-yard field goal by Larry Robinson.

Robinson also added a 34-yard field goal, three converts, and a single.

Halfback Alan Pitcaithley scored the first Edmonton touchdown, with the Eskimos trailing 27-6, on a six-yard run. Mike Eben got the other on a nine-yard pass from Trull. Dave Cutler converted Eben's touchdown.

Mets Take Second with Sweep of Expos

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cleon Jones disclaims any knowledge of the hospitter that played left field earlier in the season for the New York Mets.

"This is the real Cleon that's coming out," he said after he clouted a two-run homer in the opener and a key single in the nightcap as the New Yorkers swept a Labor Day doubleheader from the Montreal Expos, 5-4 and 5-1.

"I don't know who that other fellow was," said Jones, who was only hitting .227 Aug. 6.

"I didn't know what I was doing wrong then and now I don't know what I'm doing right," said Jones, after hitting in his 14th consecutive game and lifting his average to .273.

The pair of victories enabled the Mets to edge into second place in the torrid National League East before 11¼ games behind Pittsburgh Pirates and one-half game ahead of Chicago Cubs.

The Pirates and Cubs split their doubleheader, Pittsburgh winning the opener 8-3 before dropping the nightcap 3-2.

In other NL action, Cincinnati doubleheaders—San Francisco Giants beat Cincinnati Reds 6-3, 4-3; Houston Astros trimmed San Diego Padres 10-5, 9-4; Philadelphia Phillies stopped St. Louis Cardinals 5-1, 3-2 in 13 innings and Los Angeles Dodgers swept Atlanta Braves 4-3, 6-2.

Jones led a comeback in the opener, drilling his ninth homer in the ninth inning to tie the score at 4-4. A pair of walks followed and Gerry Grote ripped a tie-breaking single.

The Mets backed Jim McAndrew, 9-11, in the second game with a five-run second inning as Jones contributed a single to the rally. Tommie Agee drilled his 23rd homer—a three-run shot—behind Mcandrew scattered six hits.

Nine home runs were hit in the two games, Bob Moose won the opener for the Pirates—his first complete game in a month —and Richie Hebner lopped an 11-hit attack with three, and drove in four runs with a pair of homers. Bob Robertson added a homer for the Pirates and Willie Smith and Joe Pepitone cracked for the Cubs.

Ferguson Jenkins tossed a five-hitter in the nightcap for his 19th victory and also clubbed a homer, as did Billy Williams.

The Giants rallied for three runs in the seventh inning to overtake the Reds in the nightcap. Tito Fuentes drove in the first two with a bases-loaded, two-out hit off shortstop Don Chaney's glove and Bobby Bonds sped home when Chaney's throw to the plate went wild.

Bobby Tolan had a two-run homer for the Reds.

In the opener, Juan Marichal, 16-10, survived 11 Cincinnati hits while Bonds and Willie McCovey homered. McCovey also drove in a run with a sacrifice fly and Hal Lanier added a two-run double for the Giants.

Joe Morgan ripped five hits in the second game, including a key two-run double that put the Astros ahead to stay not the ninth. The second baseman added a pair of hits and scored two runs in the opener.

Bob Watson started a six-run Houston sixth inning in the first game as Larry Howard added a pair of homers. Ramon Webster had a pinch grand slam for the Padres.

The Phils jumped out for four first inning runs in the opener as Larry Bowa opened with a triple and Denny Doyle and Deron Johnson added run-scoring hits as Philadelphia ended a five-game losing streak.

Bowa won the nightcap for the Phils with a two-out, run-scoring single in the 13th inning after Philadelphia had loaded the bases with none out. Bowa also drove in an earlier run with a single.

Willie Crawford celebrated his 26th birthday with a two-run homer in leading the Dodgers to an opening game victory. Orlando Cepeda slugged a two-run shot for the Braves.

In the nightcap, Wes Parker lashed a two-run double and two singles. Alan Foster, 9-11, gained his fifth victory in six decisions against Atlanta. Chris Boyer homered for the Braves.

'Shoe' Fits First Place

DEL MAR, CalM. (AP) — A millionaire professional who rides thoroughbred horses for a living. Bill Shoemaker went back to work as usual today, unmindful he now can retire as the world's champion rider.

He had five mounts at Del Mar today and as he said after setting a record for wins—4,033 —on Labor Day: "I'll keep on riding as long as I feel good and as long as I can win races."

Willie the Shoe eclipsed by one the record of Sam Snead since 1936 by Johnny Longden, the English-born jockey who lived his early years in Tabor, Alta. He came in the fourth race on a two-year-old filly, Dares J, the favorite.

Shoemaker had seven mounts for the biggest day in 21 years at Del Mar but the only one he brought in as the winner was the winningest of his 21-year career.

Murphy Makes Club Adjustment

(AP) — "It's been a funny kind of year," Bob Murphy mused after taking down the $20,000 first prize in the Greater Hartford open golf tournament.

"I've been in position to win six times this year, finished second once, third twice, and just kicked the rest away.

"I guess I've finally adjusted to my new clubs."

It's been a long fight for the 37 - year - old Murphy, whose clubs were stolen from his car in Philadelphia a year ago. He offered a reward of "$100 a stick" to get them back, but they were gone for good.

And Murphy, who scored consecutive victories in the Philadelphia and Thunderbird Classics of 1969 — his rookie season on the tour — hadn't won since.

"I guess I was finally ready," he said Monday after shooting a final 69 for 287 and scoring by four strokes over Paul Harney, a 41-year-old club pro from Sutton, Mass.

Harney had a 67, four-under-par on the 6,568 - yard Wethersfield Country Club course, for a 271.

Tom Weiskopf, with a 67, was alone in third at 273, followed by Jim Grant and Steve Opperman at 273. PGA champion Dave Stockton and Dave Hill tied at 274.

Canadians Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver and George Knudson of Toronto were well off the pace. Vollmer finished with a 70 Monday for a 284 total while Knudson had a 75 and 290 total. Each won $174.

Twins Alyea Keeps Rolling Those Sevens

Brant Alyea and good old number seven helped keep the Minnesota Twins six games out in front of the Oakland Athletics Monday in the American League's west division baseball standings.

Alyea struck Milwaukee Brewers pitchers for seven runs batted in Monday, Sept. 7, repeating a feat he staged exactly five months earlier, April 7, when he made his debut in a Twins uniform.

The Twins edged the Brewers 7-6 in the first game of a double-header—the one in which Alyea pulled his numbers act. He added two more runs driven in in the Twins 8-3 victory in the nightcap.

The Athletics kept pace, sweeping the Chicago White Sox 7-4 and 7-5. California Angels, who had been tied with the A's, lost 4-1 to Kansas City and dropped 7½ games back.

Elsewhere, Detroit Tigers downed Baltimore Orioles 5-2, the New York Yankees nipped Washington Senators 4-3 and Cleveland Indians trounced Boston Red Sox 8-2 after losing 4-3.

Alyea started his heroics early with a grand slam homer in the first inning of the opener. He added a three-run shot in the third, his 15th of the season then singled and reached on an error. In the nightcap he singled a run across in the first and hit a sacrifice fly in the seventh.

Ron Perranoski nailed down the opener for the Twins with his 28th save and Hal Haydel making his major league debut won the second game with five strong innings in relief and also homered and doubled.

Sports on All Fronts

PORTLAND, Ore. (CP-AP) — Lanny Wadkins of Richmond, Va., won the 70th United States amateur golf cha mpionship Saturday, sinking a 20-foot putt on the final hole to clinch his victory over Tom Kite Jr. Wadkins finished with a 67-72-69-70—277 score to 69-67-71-72—279 for Kite. Gary Cowan of Kitchener was in a three-way tie for third at 284. Wayne McDonald of Oakville finished well down at 78-70-74-72—294. Cowan's final-round 72 made his tournament record 69-70-72-72—284, for a tie with Jim Gabrielsen, who had a last-round 73, and Jim Simons, with a last-day 74. Wadkins and Kite later were two of four players named to the United-States team that will compete in the World Cup championship Sept. 23-26 in Madrid. The U.S. is the defending champion in the World Cup for amateur golfers, in which 29 countries will compete.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gus Bodnar of the Toronto Maple Leaf organization, has been named coach and general manager of Salt Lake Golden Eagles of the Western Hockey League. Bodnar, 47, will replace Ray Kinasewich, who recently resigned for personal reasons. The new Salt Lake coach had been responsible for eight amateur teams sponsored by Toronto. He also played in the National Hockey League for Toronto, Chicago and Boston. In his first year he won the Calder Cup as Rookie of the Year.

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference announced Sunday three veterans have begun five-day tryouts with the club. They are offensive halfback Vic Washington, formerly of Toronto Rough Riders, tight end Bill Starr, formerly of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, and defensive end Denver Samples, formerly of Atlanta of the National League.

Ferrari Wins Monza

MONZA, Italy (AP) — Clay Regazzoni of Switzerland, driving a Ferrari 312-B, pulled away in the final 16 laps and won the Grand Prix of Italy in record time Sunday.

Jackie Stewart of Scotland, in a March-Ford, was about six seconds behind in the 41st edition of the Monza classic, which was clouded by Saturday's death of Jochen Rindt of Austria in the trials. Rindt had been considered a sure winner.

Jean Pierre Beltoise of France was third in a Matra-Simca in the Formula One race.

About 100,000 fans watched five cars race within a few feet of each other until Regazzoni streaked ahead and finished the 68 laps and 344 miles in one hour 39 minutes 6.86 seconds, an average speed of 147.83 miles an hour.

Stewart finished in 1:39:12.61, as only seven-tenths of a second separated the second and fifth places. Only 10 of the 20 starters finished.

Denis Hulme of New Zealand was fourth in a McLaren Ford, and Rolf Stommelen of West Germany fifth in a Brabham.

Datsun 1600 isn't long like a big car, but it's big inside where it counts.

It doesn't have all sorts of optional extras, because everything on it but a 3-speed automatic transmission and a radio is standard equipment. Like carpet, flow-through ventilation, front disc brakes, bucket seats, whitewalls and leather vinyl upholstery.

More important, a Datsun 1600 will go anywhere a big car will go and a lot of places a big car can't. And on the way there, it will give you up to thirty-five miles for a gallon of gas and around 100,000 miles between major overhauls.

For around $4500 you get twin 2-door 1600's. Or a wagon and a 2-door. Or two 4-doors. Or just one Datsun and a bundle for your bank. No matter which way you do it you win, when you think about it.

United Bows Out of Cup Play

Baby Crapo Says:

FAIRWAY WOOD-TEE SHOTS

Very often the fairway wood is the club by use of the tee. This is true when the target area is restricted—narrow fairways, or crowded conditions. Cost distance, blind golfers. The fairway wood is more controllable than the wood.

Deeply laden present the danger of sliding through the fairway and into the rough. A shorter tee shot instead—possibly by 2nd hand loss (see illustration, solid line).

© © 1970 PAGE, Ronny Lyn.

Next shot: Right, be a heavier, such as a good running fairway, while in well within the range of a short iron (broken line).

Finally, the ball lies, on that only one-third of it appears over the top of the clubface. And play the ball back about an inch farther than usual for a driver. Take your normal swing and you'll probably hit in a good position.

Belleville United was eliminated from Twenties Challenge Cup play in the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association over the weekend by dropping a pair of 1-0 games to the Belleville Eagles and the Belleville Parsons.

On Sunday afternoon, playing before a good soccer crowd at the Eagles new first block with their single goal in the first half of play.

The goal came as the result of the Eagles dominating play throughout the first half. Tony Gonsalves scored the only goal when he took a pass from Bob Walton.

The goal was the only one to beat the hard-pressed Don Lemass in Belleville United's nets.

Second half play was more even with Belleville United pressuring the Eagles at times. Eagle players Kitcher, Cresswell and Uddenberg were outstanding. Kitcher was injured in the final half of the game.

The Eagles will now meet the Belleville Parsons in the second round of cup play. The two teams will play Monday evening, Sept. 14.

Belleville United also dropped a 1-0 game against the Belleville Parsons at Zwick's Island yesterday.

The break finally came early in the second half when Peter Clinkard scored a disputed goal against the United Team. The goal was allowed to stand but thereupon the field marked consequent play. Finally two players were ejected from the game and the Parsons played the last 10 minutes with nine players.

Belleville United also dropped a 1-0 game against the Belleville Parsons at Zwick's Island yesterday.

Thurlow Makes Finals

Thurlow Township's peewee baseball players made it to the Ontario championship round on the weekend when they eliminated Waterdown.

On Saturday at Waterdown, a three - hit pitching effort by Bruce McDonnell enabled Foster's to defeat Waterdown 3-2. McDonnell pitched hitless ball for five innings, allowing all three hits in the sixth inning. Waterdown forfeited the second game scheduled for Monday.

Foster's only had three hits as well, singles by Ted Foster, Varley Vader and Brian Hutchinson. In all, they were enough to produce the winning runs. Eric Lockington was the losing pitcher.

The Thurlow peewees will now meet either Dorchester or Wheatly in the Ontario finals.

Oshawa Ousts SACO

The Oshawa Whitaker Sales defeated the Belleville Sacco in the third game of the OASA Bantam Zone four Championship Saturday to take the series two games to one.

Oshawa defeated Belleville 4-2 in the game at the Alemaile field.

Not even a two-run homer by Bruce Sutherland in the ninth inning could save the Belleville team from losing.

Outstanding hitters for Belleville were Sutherland, who also had a triple and Wally Dainard who hit a single and a double. Oshawa's outstanding batters were Polstick with two singles and Aldred with two singles.

Mason pitched the entire game for Oshawa tallying 11 strikeouts and allowing six hits and one walk. Sutherland pitched three and two-thirds innings for Belleville allowing three hits and two walks on nine strikeouts. Wally Hall took over for the remainder of the game for Belleville allowing three hits and three walks on four strikeouts.

Sixty Tops Field

Phil Dyble and Harold Emerson netted a sixty to top the 46 pairs entered in the local two man ball tournament held at the Bay of Quinte Golf Club Sunday.

Second went to Fred Hebdon and Mickey Peipenni with sixty-two and in third spot with the same score were Milon Doreki and Don Ernzer.

Dyble, who has been swinging a club for the past forty some years said, "we played a pretty steady game and had a lot of one putts. The only real trouble we had was on the fourteenth hole referred to as the monster because of its 605 yard distance.

Soccer Falcons Flying

Four games were played Saturday in Belleville and District Minor Soccer.

In the best of three final Falcon Juniors took a 1-0 series lead as they shut-out Oddfellows 5-0 and Falcon Peewees lost 5-3 to Beppi's Pizza. Stirling Wilson and Ed Grills each had two goals and Charles Thistel one goal to lead Beppi's to the win.

Other games saw Belleville United Mosquitos down Trenton Park 2-0 in the A division and in the B division it was Bay Skelly scoring two goals to lead Jim's Pizza to a 2-1 win over Cozy Grill.

West Hill Takes Title

West Hill Cubs climaxed a brilliant season yesterday defeating the East Hill Champions Shopping Plaza 13-5 to win the Belleville Minor Softball Association Squirt championship.

Danny Vance went all the way on the mound for the winners tossing a five hitter, striking out six and walking four. For the losers it was John Jiannopoulos giving up eleven hits on seven strikeouts and two walks.

The Cubs grabbed a solid lead in the first inning, adding two in the second, one in the fourth and five runs in the first inning, scored four in the sixth.

Lee also led the Cubs in batting with his homer and a single followed by Wilson, Vance, Taylor, Ward, Clarke, Duvall and Jalenti each with a single.

U.S. Government Lists Phosphate Content of 48 Detergents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior department listed the phosphate content of 48 popular detergents Saturday, affirmed that phosphates pollute lakes and asked housewives to draw their own conclusions when they go shopping.

Commissioner David D. Dominick, whose Federal Water Quality Administration issued the statement, denied in a telephone interview that he is suggesting housewives boycott high-phosphate detergents.

Dominick told a reporter: "We're not in the business of telling the consumers what they should or should not do. We're in the business of giving them legitimate scientific information and letting them draw their own conclusions."

Phosphorous, found not only in detergents but also in sewage, fertilizers and industrial wastes, speeds up the natural aging of lakes by nourishing the growth of undesirable water plants which use up oxygen needed by other forms of aquatic life.

The agency tested 23 detergents earlier this year and now has added 25 more to expand the usefulness of the list "for comparison among detergents," the news release said.

The department listed results as percentages of sodium tripoly phosphate, STPP for short, the most widely used form of phosphate in detergents, although "not all products contain STPP."

The statement said the results "may differ from those which had been published by sources outside the federal government" because a more accurate method was used and because different numbers result when the findings are expressed in terms of other compounds.

Pre-soaks: Biz 73.9 per cent; Enzyme Brites 71.4; Amway Tri-zyme 71.2; Axion 63.2.

Laundry detergents: Blue Rain Drops 63.2; Salvo Tide 49.3; Amway Oxydol 49.4; Bold Water All powder 45.4; Ajax Laundry 44.6; Cold Power 44.5; Punch 44.2; Dreft 41.8; Rinso with chlorine bleach 41.0; Dab 38.5; Dutch Boy 38.3; Bonus 37.5; Breeze 37.3; Oxydrill 36.2; Fab 34.8; White King with borax 34.7; Royalite 31.7; Island Pal soap 16.8; Wisk liquid 14.2; Par Plus 4.3; Addit liquid 1.9; White King soap and water All liquid, less than one per cent.

Cold-Stream 34.3; All 34.0; Calgonite 49.4; Electrol 34.8.

Household cleaners: Ajax 36.4; All-purpose 39.5; Mr. Clean 0; Cascade 27.6; Whistle 3.1; Pinesol less than one per cent.

Automatic dishwasher detergents: Amway 60; Bonstrom, Downy and Amway Dish Drops, all less than one per cent.

Miscellaneous: Snowy Bleach 36.4; Borateem, Dowsy and Calgonite 49.4; Electrol 34.8.

Wood-fibre Congeals In River

SPANISH, Ont. (CP) — A new form of pollution, described by commercial fishermen as a congealed wood-fibre, has recently appeared on the Spanish River.

George Kerr, Ontario energy and resources minister, had a look at the scum during a week-end cruise of the river, and said: "that's just terrible."

A pailful of the fibrous material was skimmed off the surface of the water to show the minister, on a fact-finding cruise aboard a cabin cruiser piloted by Cpl. Evan Gilmour of the Ontario Provincial Police.

One commission official said the caked fibres have probably lain on the river for years, and were driven to the surface by gasses formed through decomposition.

The OWRC spokesman said operators of Eddy Forest Products Ltd., blame for the pollution, have begun a program to reduce the amount of solids entering the river at their plant in Espanola.

Raw Sewage Pours Into Moira River

Main Break Being Hunted

By Ian Robertson
Staff Reporter

The Moira ran blood-red yesterday, a couple of hours after the Ontario Water Resources Commission started dumping 125,000 gallons of raw sewage into the river every hour.

The river's complexion has improved . . . but the sewage still flows. Its cessation depends on the discovery of a break in the west-side sewage force lines, which occurred Friday, while the Tatham Co. was installing a 24-inch force line beside the existing 18-inch line.

Don Little, OWRC sewage treatment plant supervisor believes dynamiting caused the break.

When the break occurred late Friday afternoon, the OWRC attempted to call in construction firms to repair the damage but because of the late hour, workmen couldn't be found.

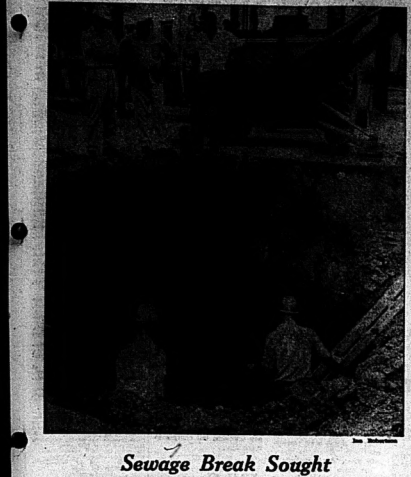
Over the weekend the wastes were still being passed through the lagoon plant, but the sewage slowly filling the construction hole. City public works employees were also hired yesterday to locate and repair the damage at OWRC expense. Before this could be done, the pipe carrying the sewage had to be "shut off" to allow workmen to dig. As soon as they started work, raw sewage had to be pumped into the river.

"We had no choice, there was no other place to pump it," Mr. Little added.

When the flow was diverted into the river, it carried with it all the sewage released from American Optical's holding tanks.

Contained in the sewage was a red chemical, "carmelite's rouge" which colored the surface of the Moira a bloody red.

Mr. Little explained that the chemical helps break down the phosphates and nitrates in the sewage but that the OWC was requested American Optical to refrain from releasing the holdings until the break is repaired.



When it was first known that the sewage would have to go into the river, a truckload of chlorine tablets were brought from Toronto for use in treating the effluent.

The chlorine is mixed in the wet well at the pumping station before the wastes pass through the pumps.

"This flow will not affect Belleville's drinking water; the flow is well below the city water intakes," the supervisor said.

Work on the break site will continue throughout today and until repairs are accomplished.

"At that time, we will investigate the cause of the damage," he continued.

Sewage Break Sought

While workmen dig in the muck-fouled hole on St. Paul Street, OWRC plant supervisor Don Little discusses the problem of sewage diversion with public works employees. The break, which occurred Friday, necessitated the diversion of 250,000 gallons of sewage each hour into the Moira River while workmen frantically dig in an attempt to find the break.

Freedom of All Sought

Red Cross Empowered To Negotiate Exchange

GENEVA (AP) — The International Red Cross Committee said it opened negotiations with Palestinian guerrillas today on behalf of the British, Swiss, American and West German governments.

A spokesman said the Red Cross has received a mandate from the four countries to negotiate the freedom of about 118 hostages held captive in the Jordan desert in their hijacked Swissair and Pan World Airline jetliners.

In return for their liberty, the Red Cross is authorized to agree to the release of seven members of the Popular Front for the liberation of Palestine held in Britain, Switzerland and West Germany, the spokesman said.

But he stressed that there will be no separate deals for the release of certain nationalities among the hostages.

"We will only negotiate for the release of all passengers and crew regardless of nationality," he said.

The Palestinians are demanding the release of Arab prisoners in Israeli jails as part of the ransom. The Red Cross confirmed that it has not had any approach from Israel, which has refused to join in any exchange and has condemned the willingness of the Swiss and German governments to release their prisoners.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Three main weather regimes dominate Ontario. The first is the remains of Tuesday's frontal system that still hangs over southern Ontario. The cloud and fog from this low will move slowly out of the area toward the southeast during the day. Associated with this clearing is a ridge of high pressure which lies across the central Great Lakes. Cloud and rain have now moved into northwestern Ontario ahead of a low moving out of the Dakotas. This low moving out of the west is the key to the weather for the next few days as fairly cool air will spread across the whole province in its wake.

Fighting Resumes In Jordan

AMMAN (CP) — Palestinian guerrillas and Jordanian soldiers battled for the second day in northern Jordan today following the collapse of a brief ceasefire concluded Tuesday between the guerrillas and the Amman government.

The central committee of the Palestine Guerrilla Organization repudiated the ceasefire early today, charging that after it was supposed to have taken effect, Jordanian troops attacked commando outposts near Irbid, killed 40 guerrillas and wounded many more.

Scattered shooting also was heard in downtown Amman and in the area of the Jordan Intercontinental Hotel, the temporary home of many of the 122 women and children released by the guerrillas holding two hijacked airliners and 178 hostages at a desert airstrip northeast of the capital.

Arab Guerrillas Seize BOAC Jet

More Hostages Seized

BEIRUT, Lebanon (Reuters) — A hijacked British airliner carrying more than 100 persons, including four Arab guerrillas armed with dynamite, took off from here today for the commandos' desert airstrip in Jordan.

A total of 198 passengers and crew from two Western airliners hijacked Sunday already are being held hostage there.

Word reached the British foreign office that the airliner landed safely today at the guerrilla - held airfield.

Sources close to the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said there that the Front, which stormed Sunday's mass hijacking, seized the BOAC plane, which carried at least 46 Britons, in order to exert pressure on the London government to free female Arab guerrilla Leila Khaled.

The plane was on a flight from Bombay to London. It was seized shortly after it took off from Bahrain, a Persian Gulf island, for Beirut.

Before the plane took off from Beirut British Ambassador Alan Eddon went to the control tower and pleaded in vain with the hijackers by radio to let off the women and children on board.

There were believed to be about 30 women and several children, including at least one baby.

The hijackers also refused a request from the control tower that two guerrillas who boarded here—a man and a woman—be escorted to the plane by a security man.

This apparently was to prevent the guerrillas from smuggling aboard bombs with which the plane could be blown up after landing, as a Pan American jumbo jet hijacked to Cairo was Monday.

The hijacker in the plane laughed and said: "Don't worry, we have all the dynamite we need."

When the plane was on the ground here, the hijackers threatened to blow it up if any attempt was made to seize control of it.

The VC-10 took on 10,700 gallons of fuel and headed old.

The hijacking was the first ever of a regularly scheduled British airliner.

The hijackers told the control tower that the destination was "Revolution Airport," the airstrip in the desert northeast of Amman to which a Swissair DC-8 and a Trans-World Airlines Boeing 707 were hijacked by the same group Sunday.

The front reiterated a warning of the possible consequences to the British hostages if London did not free Leila Khaled.

In London, BOAC said that 32 Britons were among the 49 passengers who boarded the plane in Bahrain. Of the others, three were Americans, two were Indians and 12 were from Bahrain.

The nationalities of the other passengers were not immediately known. All told 118 or 117 persons were aboard.

The Guerrillas are here for peace talks, sir.

Egyptian Army Put on Alert

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Egypt has placed its forces along the Suez Canal on the alert to stand by in full combat readiness after Israeli's withdrawal from the Middle East peace talks, the Beirut newspaper An-Nahar reported today.

Army leave was cancelled and defences around Egyptian surface-to-air missile sites were heavily reinforced to face possible Israeli attacks, the paper said in a dispatch from its Cairo correspondent.

Air Travel Banned For Top Officers

WASHINGTON (CP-AP) — The U.S. armed forces, concerned over the growing number of airline hijackings, have urged senior officers and other personnel with knowledge of classified or sensitive information to avoid commercial flights and find other means of travel.

The army, navy and air force, in separate but similar directives, recently advised personnel to take trains, buses or other means of surface transportation if they are unable to catch military flights in areas where hijackings are possible.

"This could be almost certain to be the way these hijackings are occurring," a defence official said.

Secret NATO documents were on board the hijacked Pan American Airways 747 jumbo jet blown up by Arab guerrillas at Cairo airport Monday, a spokesman for the Unified States delegation to NATO said today.

Fifteen-mile Slick Threatens Fishing

For Another Story See Page 13

The slick of bunker C oil from the Irving Whale was described as about 75 miles long and five to eight miles wide as it drifted at one-third of a mile an hour early today, pushed by five-to 10-knot easterly winds.

Premier Louis J. Robichaud of New Brunswick said Tuesday night weather forecasts indicated there was no concern for at least 10 hours and military personnel were standing by at Chatham, N.B., and Summerside, "should the situation change."

A top-level team of transport department personnel had taken charge and everything possible was being done to "minimize the effects of the leakage," he said in a statement.

Dr. John Anderson, director of the fisheries research board's biological station at St. Andrews, N.B., said the slick was threatening what would amount to "millions of dollars" in landed fish value.

Hees Says Stanfield Has Confidence of MPs, Needs No Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — George Hees, chairman of the Conservative caucus, said today party leader Robert Stanfield has the confidence of the caucus and that a vote of confidence in his leadership is unnecessary.

Mr. Stanfield said as he entered the caucus meeting that he will not seek a vote of confidence.

Jack Horner, Conservative MP for Crowfoot who attended an unannounced meeting of Prairie MPs in Saskatoon, said he has full confidence in Mr. Stanfield's leadership.

"I know of no rebellion in the party," he said.

"We can win the next election with Mr. Stanfield as leader," Mr. Horner added in ringing tones.

About 60 MPs gathered for the meeting, including the majority of those who attended the Saskatoon affair.

Mr. Stanfield said he is going to lay down ground rules for regional meetings.

The caucus meeting would last well into the afternoon, Mr. Hees said.

Party sources said Mr. Stanfield was prepared to take a tough stand on the unity issue as a result of the Saskatoon meeting.

Reports from that meeting indicated that the leadership of Mr. Stanfield came under some fire at the western members assessed their party's position. Sources say the party leader wanted to tackle the criticism head-on at today's caucus meeting.

Mr. Stanfield, during his recent Alberta visit, already had private talks with Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot), who helped organize the Saskatoon meeting.

While the meeting was described as friendly, Mr. Stanfield was reported to have clearly stated his objections to unauthorized party meetings which result in public bickering over the leadership question.

The sources say that no disciplinary action is planned against any of the MPs taking part in the Saskatoon meeting.

Mr. Stanfield's approach, they say, will be to suggest that the Saskatoon session be forgotten, but that it never, never be repeated again. Anyone with criticisms to make was to be invited to state his views in caucus.

Should Mr. Stanfield ask for a vote of confidence, the sources said it was almost certain to be unanimous. There is said to be a no overwhelming consensus within the party to avoid further public discussion of any internal differences.

Former leader John Diefenbaker, who attended the Saskatoon meeting, is not attending this caucus. He has not attended caucus since Mr. Stanfield became leader in 1967.

County Crime Docket Clear

Hastings County yesterday drew high praise from an Ontario Supreme Court judge as it completely with a few serious crime rate.

The commendation came from Mr. Justice E. A. Richardson as he opened the current Supreme Court session in Belleville.

Only one criminal case earlier had been listed for hearing on the assize docket of 107 civil and divorce actions.

The charge — indecent assault — had been transferred to another court, then heard by the Supreme Court free of any criminal cases.

Whisky gloves — symbolic of a crime free docket — were presented to Mr. Justice Richardson by assistant Crown Attorney Glen Dales.

Mr. Justice Richardson said the absence of major crime in Hastings County contrasted with the situation in other communities, particularly larger cities.

"It speaks very well for the good behavior of the people of this county," he said. "This is an excellent record and I'm sure there's no place on the continent that will have any better record, and I congratulate the people of this county."

The assize docket lists 23 civil litigations — most of them involving traffic accidents — and 85 divorces, 17 of which are contested.

Juice Canners Phasing Out

PICTON (Staff) — Edgewater Canners Ltd., Northport, one of Prince Edward's largest producers of apple juices and citrus fruit drinks plans to phase out its operations here by the end of the year, Hugh Pollard, president of this long established canning company, said today that the plant will consolidate with its sister plant in Weston, Ontario.

Pioneers in canning fruit drinks, Edgewater Canners handled a large volume of surplus apples in the county suitable only for juice making. In its early years the factory canned several fruit and vegetable crops but later turned its attention solely to mixing juices.

Happy Results

There was good reason for pleasant acene shared by Mayor Russell Scott and Unemployment Insurance Commission regional director J. L. Stevens yesterday. UIC statistics show operation of federal centre since its move to Belleville a year ago, has generated millions of new dollars in local economy.

UIC Move Proves Boon to City

By HARRY MULRALL
Staff Reporter

One year ago the Unemployment Insurance Commission officially opened its Ontario regional office in Belleville.

As a result, the Quinte economy today is richer by more than $5 million.

That's the estimated value of goods and services purchased in the Belleville area as a direct result of the UIC operation.

There have been other, less direct benefits.

The newly-built UIC office centre on East Dundas Street is a sizable assessment entry on city tax rolls.

And Mayor Russell Scott notes the UIC as the "biggest, white-collar industry in the city's history", located in Belleville "without cost to the municipality."

"The end of its year's operations here also has wider significance, the mayor believes.

The UIC came here from Toronto. The move to Belleville shifted the focus of a large federal administrative complex from a big-city environment.

"How it's proven to be successful," says Mayor Scott, "and an example of what can be done by other branches of government if they come to a city like Belleville.

"This was a first in decentralization. And it's working. That's the most important thing."

Discussion of the immediate and potential significance of the federal government move came yesterday as the mayor and city officials met with UIC regional director J. L. Stevens and his staff to assess the anniversary of the operation.

The local impact of that one year is dramatically underlined by statistics released by UIC officials.

"In the past year," states the UIC report, "operations of the UIC in Belleville have resulted in expenditures of more than $5,250,000.

Among the highlights:

Salaries totalled $2,753,000 — $2,341,000 received by permanent staff and just under $600,000 by casual help.

UIC employees purchased homes with a total value of $2,425,000 and paid $250,000 in rentals.

"In addition," says the UIC report, "more than $2,500,000 stores, service stations and other local concerns, in the normal course of day-to-day operations.

Integrating its operations into the community also generated more cash flows from the UIC fount. The commission spent $46,400 in accommodation and food services and $34,000 for day-to-day business supplies.

The UIC centre is manned by a permanent staff of 266 workers — 77 of them locally recruited since the move to Belleville.

During the year, the centre has employed 422 local workers as casual help. At present there are 176 workers — all from the city — being employed.

Of these, 70 are students.

The move to Belleville also stimulated a local housing boom, says the UIC report.

Of the 188 employees transferred with the centre, 97 purchased homes" in the community" while the remainder are renting.

The move also has paid a public relations dividend for the city.

"The name of Belleville," concludes the UIC report, "is constantly in the minds of all employers, large and small in Ontario, since they are aware that the regional office of the UIC is situated here."

Rezoning Application Now Requires $25 Fee

TRENTON (Staff) — Applications for rezoning in Trenton must be accompanied by a $25 fee.

Trenton Council decided Tuesday that the work of the town planning officer should be supported by those using his services.

No charges have been levied in the past with the result that parties have not always acted on changes they have requested.

Councillor Paul Tripp contended that those seeking zoning changes were not always serious in intent but that a $25 processing fee would "stop frivolous applications".

In last night's session, however, councillors rejected a resolution by members of the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board that its members should be compensated with a $10 stipend per meeting. The board met 16 times last year and expects to have a revised town plan ready by Oct. 31.

One of the grounds for the stipend request was the fact that members of the court of revision, committee of adjustment, the Public Utilities Commission and Police Commission are all compensated.

The majority feeling was that a line had to be drawn somewhere or all voluntary boards and committee work must be compensated. This was felt to be undesirable.

Picton Passes Loitering Law

PICTON (Staff) — A bylaw to prohibit loitering in a public place has been passed by members of Picton town council.

It specifies persons shall not "lounge, loaf, loiter, or stand as an idler on any public sidewalk or street or in any public place obstructing its use."

The penalty for violation of this law is a fine of not less than $10 and not more than $300. The bylaw drew general approval from councillors with the exception of James Bird, who suggested the $10 minimum fine was "far too low."

"Why not say not less than $100 or we'll never stop people from doing this," said Mr. Bird.

Mayor H. J. McFarland said that there is a staggering volume of unsold fines across Ontario, adding "you'll get $10 quicker than you'll get $50."

Deputy Reeve Donald Thompson supported the $10 figure, remarking "some day you'll get two or three women with baby carriages, and they're obstructing."

Boat Adrift, Where Is Owner?

PICTON (Staff — Hackleberry Flats, where are you?

Town police today reported the recovery of a fibre-glass boat adrift in the weeds of Picton harbor yesterday afternoon.

The owner of the craft, equipped with a 40 horse-power outboard motor, cannot be located. Painted with the name "Four Acres" the boat has temporarily been stored at Stephurn's Marina.

Dogcatcher Criticized

TRENTON (Staff) — A letter of complaint against Trenton's animal control officer Don Tucker, was read in Trenton council Tuesday.

The communication from Douglas Lee of Bay St. alleged that Mr. Tucker "harassed his child" on the "pretext of dog nuisance."

Mr. Lee charged that the dogcatcher entered his property in pursuit of the family dog, that the owner alleges had not left his lot.

According to Mr. Lee the animal control officer went to the door of his Bay St. residence in connection of the Lee children about bar dog.

"More and more people are becoming upset," he added although the town's assistant clerk Arden Royce, said that Mr. Lee complaint had been the only one received at the municipal offices.

Don Tucker in a letter of reply called the allegations against him false and said that Mr. Lee had to "drum up the letter."

He said in his formal reply that he had not entered the Lee property.

However, the assistant clerk while reporting on the matter said that in a telephone conversation Mr. Lee had mentioned that he had gone to the door of the Lee residence.

No action was taken on the matter.

Mayor Duncan McDonald responded that one problem, at least, still remains.

Mr. Kelcheson noted offices lives in Stirling and Trenton residents should not have to pay telephone toll charges to reach him.

Fill Cost Questioned

TRENTON (Staff) — A $700 expenditure for fill was questioned by councillor Stan Kelcheson at Trenton Council last night.

Mr. Kelcheson indicated that the amount had been registered against the Recreation Dept account without its authorization.

Mayor Duncan McDonald said that earlier this year he had received a complaint about the condition of Bay St., and Lewis St. playgrounds.

The mayor explained that fill was needed under playground equipment on the sites and that management of the Community Gardens was contacted to look into the situation.

As a result of his conversation with Gardens' management, Mr. McDonald indicated that they had gone ahead and procured fill, apparently $700 worth, to fortify the playground situation.

Council Supports Library System

PICTON (Staff) — Town councillors have agreed to support a county library system for Prince Edward following discussion of its establishment and operational costs. This proposal, under consideration by county council, must have the approval of three-quarters of the local municipalities before it can be developed.

Cost figures for the suggested library system were compiled by county council and have been forwarded to Prince Edward's 10 municipalities for their examination. A $4,000 provincial establishment grant has been withdrawn but the Lake Ontario Regional Library System has endorsed an $8,000 grant for a one-year period to assist in the purchasing of books and furniture. A provincial grant of 65 cents per capita or $13,700 is recorded. It was pointed out that if the county library system is to be cost effective in Prince Edward this year the balance of the funds would have to be raised by taxation.

Councillor James Bird, who remarked that he voted "with misgivings" for the library system observed, "The idea is essentially good for it does improve facilities. I think the costs will go up considerably but my mind is open on the matter." He added that the library system's budget of $61,900 to be raised through taxes in its first year of operation was probably substantially underestimated.

The budget schedule for the county library system's first year of operation includes funds for the establishment and operation of three county branches and the maintenance of the four existing county libraries. A second schedule presented operating costs, grants received and circulation of the four existing county libraries excluding Milford library. A third schedule emphasized the results of the decentralization libraries provided last year by the Lake Ontario Regional Library System.

If a county library system is formed, it will be guided by a seven-member board including the county warden and six members appointed by county council. Three of these appointed "members must be county councillors."

Mr. Bird noted that last year, when travelling libraries were introduced in Prince Edward, 2,000 volumes a month were reported in circulation. "It's a pity if this is denied to people if they can't come to one of the three main centres," he said. He commented that if county council felt the library system was important to Prince Edward as a whole he was willing to withdraw his objection.

Town councillors agreed to the proposal and requested clerk Andrew Jarvis to inform county council of their decision. Prompt action has been stressed to make establishment of the county system possible by January 1, 1971. If eight municipalities in Prince Edward lend it support.

132-day Walkout

Stewart-Warner Strike Finally Over

The longest work strike in Belleville's recent labor history is over as employees of Stewart - Warner Corp. of Canada Ltd. today awaited job recalls.

The 132 - day walkout dating from April 28 — ended last night as members of United Auto Workers Local 1838 narrowly approved the company's latest contract offer.

The margin of approval was under-this.

Frank McKay, Local 1838 president, said 51 per cent voted 50.4 per cent in favor of returning to work under terms of a new 18-month agreement.

UAW and management negotiators were to meet immediately and begin organizing a back - to - work schedule, said Mr. McKay.

The schedule would be based on seniority, he also said, and the company "more or less indicated" it will attempt to phase workers back on the job in the next three days.

Robert Reid, chief operating executive at Stewart-Warner, said the company will do all it can to return operations to its long - idled MacDonald Avenue plant to normal.

"We have no fears of the operation," said Mr. Reid Monday night. "Our planning now is to get the plant opened and the people back as quickly as possible."

The end of the long-drawn dispute came after day-long discussions yesterday between union and company officials — a negotiations process dating back to last December when the contract talks first started.

Mr. McKay said the new contract is an 18-month agreement, dating from Sept. 1 to March, 1973.

The agreement grants a 7% per cent pay increase the first year and five per cent for the remainder of the contract term.

Mr. McKay said it would be difficult to break down the percentages into cash equivalents because of the various pay schedules at the plant.

Other benefits include an extra statutory holiday. The company also agreed to pay 50 per cent of group insurance, said Mr. McKay.

One Street, Two Names

Is it Catherine or Cathaline?

The spelling is different, but despite what the street signs say, the West Side residential artery running from the river to the fairgrounds is all the same street.

The street signs with the "Catharine" spelling were placed on corner houses years ago and a number of them still remain.

But newer street signs erected on steel standards between the sidewalk and roadway show the spelling changed to "Catherine."

City records and the city directory favor the latter spelling as the correct one.

But the old street signs with the alternative spelling still remain and apparently residents can take their pick.

Councillor Critical Of PUC Spending

PICTON (Staff) — Town councillor Margaret Ackerman scored the last word in last night's discussion of a special committee meeting with the Public Utilities Commission ordered to clarify its responsibilities, Mrs. Ackerman instigated this meeting in July when she criticized the apparent failure of the PUC to turn back surplus funds to the town.

A special council committee including Mayor H. J. McFarland, a member of the PUC, Deputy reeve Donald Thompson, and councillors Mrs. Ray Reid and Margaret Ackerman met with PUC chairman Jack Ward, PUC commissioner Vernon Pearse and manager Cleland Blakely.

Mrs. Ackerman stressed dissatisfaction with the PUC in an earlier submission to council adding: "If this elected town council has no control over the PUC-earned surplus, and this appears evident as the motions I made in council were not abided by, as a taxpayer and elected member of this council, I request a municipal board inquiry into the operations of the Picton Public Utilities."

The matter mentioned in her proposal requested that the PUC turn over surplus funds to the town and delegate representatives to council to reply to the question "Has any money raised by debentures or revenue been invested or deposited outside of the town of Picton without the town's knowledge or consent for the sole future use of the PUC?"

Mrs. Ackerman commented that she felt it was time for public council following the request. Also, the PUC chairman failed to provide figures for the amount of money invested and the interest received when questioned.

The councillor stated that one year had passed since her motions came before council and in that time, the PUC had purchased a $19,000 truck.

Although the committee reported that "it is the general conclusion of the committee present that the commission is discharging its responsibilities in the best interests of the ratepayers," Mrs. Ackerman questioned this decision. She remarked, "I thought that the Public Utilities Act was drawn up as a guideline for the PUC run by the town of Picton. The meeting made it apparent that the PUC isn't abiding by certain bylaws and the committee is not going to see that they do." The meeting proved that if nothing else, she asserted.

Mayor McFarland interjected, "I've sat on the PUC for 28 years and when something like this comes up there's nothing to it. It's just like the news police investigation — that cost about $22,000, and roughly 4 mills."

Retorted Mrs. Ackerman, "I still feel the police investigation was warranted. I don't feel it was out of line even if it did cost a lot of money. We have trained police on the force now and two new trained policemen recently hired."

This investigation was prompted last fall by a request from Mrs. Ackerman when she felt members of the Picton police force did not respond properly to a complaint she had registered with them.

Her criticism of the PUC's suggested 'negligence' in turning over surplus funds was offset by deputy reeve Donald Thompson's explanation of their actions.

"If we had a PUC that was going crazy with money it would be a control. A separate bookkeeping system would be required and the PUC would have to meet with council before spending any of the money. I'm satisfied with the way things are handled. Debentures must be paid off twice a year and the PUC saves up and turns its money over to the town clerk for this purpose."

Architect's Model of New School

Bayside School Building Begins Within A Week

Construction of the new $4,438,620 Bayside composite secondary school should get under way within a week.

Last night, Hastings county board of education shaved $34,235 off the original construction costs and authorized signing of a contract with Konvey Construction Company for erection of the school.

Bayside Secondary is the last school in the province to receive vocational grants for construction. Grants for vocational departments were done away with shortly after formation of county boards in 1969.

The Hastings board also has the distinction of receiving the largest vocational grant ever awarded by the province — $1,677,786 of the total cost of the school.

This leaves a sum of $1,504,000 to be raised by debentures.

"Our theoretical, vocational pupil loading, at 70 per cent of the total calculated student population, is the highest that we have ever had accepted by the department of education for a normal composite school," noted I. D. Boigon of the architectural firm of Boigon and Heinonen, designers of the school.

"We feel this was achieved largely due to the persuasive talent of your director, as well as our planning," Mr. Boigon told the trustees.

Cost per square foot is calculated at $22.25.

"This is an exceptionally economical figure for a building where the major academic areas are air conditioned, and where a large percentage of the school is devoted to vocational shops," the architect said.

The building is an open plan school, tailored to the individual student's abilities and objectives.

"In this type of design, the various departments, while named on the plan, are not necessarily static in their named areas," Mr. Boigon reported.

"Therefore, the space must be continuous, similar in a way to a factory type of building, where one operation can move into the area allotted to another operation should the requirement be there," he went on.

Moveable partitions, which can be handled by two people are included in the design in order to set up different sized teaching spaces from time to time. Because the partitions are about five feet in height, carpeting on the floors is to reduce noise was essential.

In the initial stages of design, the board called for a building planned for community use and shared use of facilities by the two elementary schools on the site.

With this in mind, the architects provided entrances at various points throughout the building, so that night school students, for instance, could come in the shop entrance without having to walk through the rest of the school.

Similarly, those using the gymnasium for sports events can reach the area through its own entrance, and elementary school pupils using the library can go directly into it through another entrance.

A hub heating area common to all three schools on the site has been provided.

Eventually, the school board envisions a campus-type set up at Bayside, with space left south of highway 7 for an administration building.

The school will accommodate about 1,200 students, in keeping with board policy of holding secondary school enrolment to that figure. A portion of the building is expected to be ready for use by September 1971.

Parkside Drive Subdivision Prompts Council Debate

TRENTON (Staff) — "To suggest that council is responsible for this engineering idiocy is ridiculous" councillor Ted Parker concluded, as Trenton Council discussed the controversial sewer, road and curb building along Parkside Drive.

One problem along the street, however, seems to have disappeared. Flooding of the street is no longer taking place.

Councillor Neil Robertson suggested that this may be because the Public Utilities Commission had fixed three or four leaks in the water main along McGill St., which runs on higher ground to the north - east of Parkside.

Flooding may have been caused by an underground stream, according to councillor William Patrick.

The town Council decided that if the flooding returns to the street its developer, Wasil Sidor, will be asked to install a section of storm sewer across Parkside Dr. into a parkist yet undedicated to the town.

Curbs along Parkside Drive do not meet the approval of the town engineer.

He told council last night that from the intersection with McGill St., the curbing on Parkside is defective for its entire length, except for a portion about 180 ft. long.

One portion of the roadway, where the flooding took place earlier, is about three feet above the curbs. Driveways are also a few feet above the curbs in front of two lots.

Gas lines have been installed above the level of the curbs, in a situation described by councillor Neil Robertson as "a joke".

Arthur Campbell town engineer, indicated that curbs were in at the level determined by the subdivision plan but that the roadway had not been lowered, although he suggested that Mr. Sidore was aware that the road should be lowered.

A solicitor for Mr. Sidore is preparing two proposals to solve the problems of the controversial Parkside Drive situation; these will be presented to council in the next week.

School Tax Decrease 'Unlikely'

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

School tax increases, which have amounted to 10 to 15 per cent annually, for the last two years, are expected to drop to two or three per cent next year.

The prediction made by Dr. J. R. McCarthy, deputy minister of education in Toronto, was greeted with less than enthusiasm this morning in Belleville.

"How can we achieve any degree of equality of education under these conditions?" asked Eric Runacres, director of education for Hastings county.

He noted that this county's educational spending is below the guidelines set by the province — $509 for elementary pupils and $1,000 for secondary students.

"We are spending well below the provincial per pupil average," he said.

Dr. McCarthy said the baby boom following World War II and the public's hunger for education in the late 1950s and '60s put the Ontario school system under tremendous strain.

But, he said, the school population now is starting to decline and the time may come when annual education cost increases can be held to two or three per cent.

But Mr. Runacres said he foresees no significant population decrease in Hastings county for some time to come.

The birth rate decline is just now beginning to show in kindergarten registrations, but the secondary school population is increasing, as the last of the -baby boom children reach adolescence. New industries are bringing more people into the county cancelling out the natural school-age population decrease due to the falling birth rate.

Dr. McCarthy blamed the annual increase — never less than 10 per cent in the last 10 years — on higher teachers' salaries and more expensive labor.

Local educational administrators see no lowering of salaries or labor costs.

"This year we are paying only 4/10th of the teachers' salary increase negotiated last spring — the portion due September through December, 1970. Next year we will pay 100 per cent of the increase, which will considerably increase expenses. And all employees will be seeking another increase in 1971," commented Mr. Runacres.

With the price of material, supplies and equipment, going up by five per cent each year, the director thought Dr. McCarthy's two or three per cent increase ceiling unrealistic.

"I think he is talking about the distant future," said Mr. Runacres. "If we are to continue to provide quality education here, in a part-of rising costs for everything else, a tax decrease seems unlikely."

Like Fish in Aquarium

MPs Cagey on Armor-Plate Glass for Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP has recommended that for complete safety in the Commons MPs should be escaped collectively in armor-plate glass.

The Commons procedure committee, which is studying security measures, has not commented on the recommendation, made at a closed meeting of the committee.

The 12-member committee will report its study in the new session of Parliament, beginning next month.

Informed sources say the RCMP guaranteed MPs' safety, but only with an armor-plate glass screen dividing the wall of the chamber from the public and other galleries of the House.

So far, MPs have shown little inclination to adopt such a rigid security system which would force persons in the galleries to peer through glass as them like fish in an aquarium.

There have been a number of incidents in recent years which prompted the security review. From time to time, objects are thrown from the galleries to the Commons floor.

Three years ago, a bomb went off in a washroom, killing the man carrying it. He was on his way to a public gallery after fusing the bomb.

The Commons protective staff has taken more security measures. Pockets are overcoats, for instance, have to be left in the corridors outside the chamber.

But hundreds of police would be required for a complete security check on all visitors.

MPs do not favor such a plan, however, and some compromise is being sought which would not destroy the generally easy-going nature of Commons proceedings.

The British Commons is looking at security measures after a tear gas canister exploded on the chamber floor in May.

Australia is also looking at the problem. It had an incident similar to one in Britain in May when women militants chained themselves to gallery seats.

Dairy Princess

Dairy princesses get to be dairy princesses with a combination of intelligence, personality, good looks and, of course, knowledge of the modern dairying art.

Dianne Gunning, 18, of Tweed, has all these qualities, as well as the experience of two years as the Hastings County title-holder.

Congratulations then to Miss Gunning, who has brought honor to her family and community, and now embarks on her wider responsibilities as a provincial representative of the dairy industry.

She comes to her duties at a time of continued economic pressure on the dairy and agriculture in Ontario generally, with one firm — Quinte Milk Products of Wellington about to go out of business — and with the farming community faced as ever with the need to remain competitive.

It will be Miss Gunning's task to focus attention not only on the sphere she represents, dairying, but on the province and its industry generally. She will have such an opportunity during the winner's traditional visit to Britain and as she fulfills commitments here at home.

Harmless?

We hear so often that marijuana is not habit-forming and relatively harmless compared with heroin and other "hard" drugs; that it should be legalized and so forth.

But how then can we explain such a phenomenon as that of a United States soldier in Vietnam picking up his carbine and shooting them all to bits, then reloading to finish them off. The soldier, as recently reported, had smoked pot before and had found it pleasurable; but until this incident he had not gone off the deep end.

Another man, a sergeant, had had a bomb placed under his pillow as he slept by fellow GIs whom he had criticised for smoking the stuff.

Even some Strategic Air Command pilots are reported to have been on pot, with what awesome possible consequences one can only imagine, say in the event of planes being armed with A-bombs.

Then again, consider the tragedy in Michigan recently of Gary Rasco, 27, and Linda Wright, 18, found murdered and stabbed in a Detroit suburban home where Miss Wright rented a room. Their bound and gagged bodies were found by a friend and he is thought the slayings occurred during an alleged marijuana party.

At best, marijuana apparently results in nothing more than a feeling of heightened sensitivity and pleasure. At worst — and especially in persons of uncertain mental stability — it can lead to hellish occurrences such as those described above. We have heard too of it resulting in fits of depression, such as led to the shocking suicide of a 14-year-old Calgary girl some months ago.

If this can happen in a country (we are talking primarily of the United States) already overburdened by violence, a land where it is not safe to walk the streets at night or go to bed with unlocked doors, what greater aggravation of this problem could be anticipated if marijuana were legalized? Bearing in mind that crime at every level has risen in Canada too, as we have been reminded by the deliberations of Canadian police chiefs in London, Ontario.

The Expo Scene

Man and His World is over for another year and it is interesting to reflect on this remarkable successor to Expo 67. Whether it proves to have been any more of a satisfactory happening from a financial standpoint must await the final tally, but there is no doubt that the old Expo setting, and the various pavilions, even if changed from 1967 days, retained something at least of the earlier magic.

One found that the Tunisian pavilion for example, one of the most attractive and interesting in 1967, was but a shadow of its former self, and the restaurant where exotic dancers once entertained diners was closed. There was representation however in the arts and crafts of Spain, and particularly in the exhibitions of flamenco dancing in the building that housed the Scandinavian countries' exhibits in 1967.

Flamenco dancing is perhaps the greatest manifestation of the dancing art in its power to move and excite an audience. The Latin response to it is natural for it reflects the fiery temperament, but even the phlegmatic Anglo-Saxon responds happily, recognizing in it emotions which in his case are merely repressed. Such is the peculiar characteristics of his upbringing. The mood of the audiences at Man and His World proved that.

Flamenco too is a reproach to every half-alive human being, to the apathetic and the many of us who ruin our physiques with excess living, with drugs, alcohol or whatever. It is a thing of beauty and grandeur, an art form in the great Latin tradition.

Capt. Alfred Dreyfus of the French army was convicted by court-martial for the second time 71 years ago today—in 1899. He was condemned to 10 years on Devil's Island where he had been imprisoned since 1895. The public was amazed that he was found "guilty with extenuating circumstances" for treason because the forger responsible for the first conviction had already been detected and had committed suicide. The French government pardoned Dreyfus at once but not until 1906 did appeals in court cancel the first conviction. Dreyfus served in the First World War and was made an officer of the Legion of Honor.

Adventure on the High Seas

(Letter to Mrs. Thompson's advice column in The Globe and Mail)

I am constantly thrilled and entertained by accounts in the press of such adventures as the recent crossing of the Atlantic by Thor Heyerdahl in a papyrus boat.

This event brought about two paragraphs a day in the newspaper, yet the moonlight filled the pages. I can understand the danger being much less on the water — but to me the daily adventure with the sea was far more interesting and thrilling. And I wish more had been written about it. I suppose Heyerdahl will write a book about his discoveries and we will learn more then.

Another exciting event we are hearing little about is the 700 mile journey by Dr. Murray Newman, north of the Arctic Circle to try to capture five narwhales.

It is good to know men are still interested enough in this planet to search out its mysteries. A pity the exposers south of the border don't concentrate on the marvels of earth rather than poking through the dust of a dead dark alleins out-of-the-way place like the moon.

Armchair Explorer

It would cost a lot less, too, but with U.S. resources and vigor so boundless maybe it's better that they strike out into the universe. If all their energies were turned toward visiting the mysteries of earth, in about two years there wouldn't be a mystery left.

Ideology and The Generation Gap In The Soviet Union

Regina Leader-Post

Communist leaders devote a great deal of attention to the ideological upbringing of youth. Among other things, they hope to cultivate in young people a staunch resistance to the "decadent" temptations of the Western world.

They seem to be fighting a battle they cannot win.

As in the permissive countries of the West, Russia also has a generation gap and father - son problem, even though Soviet propaganda persistently deny it. Young Russians, cynical about official Communist ideology, are increasingly eager for emancipation from their conservative elders.

They are not growing up in the same social circumstances as did their parents. Their economic conditions are better and since the relaxation of the police terror they are making new demands on society.

One of the demands that particularly disturbed the Stalinist Marxist - Leninists in the Kremlin is for universal sex education.

Commercial exploitation of sex in Soviet movies and theatres, the publication abroad of the Communist party's strict censorship, Stalinism and pornography are said to be virtually non - existent in literature.

However, young Soviet citizens are increasingly in revolt against the heavy hand of the police in the Kremlin, they condemn pornography or the commercial exploitation of sex but favor frank discussion of sexual problems, especially in sex education in schools.

Komsomolskaya Pravda, the official newspaper of the young Communists, recently got thousands of letters of protest from youngsters in all parts of Russia after it had published a story on the subject.

Indeed Lyons of St. Thomas' Rectory, left today to enter upon a course of study at Havergal College, Toronto.

Evelyn Coulter is spending her vacation in Toronto.

Isobel Lyons of St. Thomas' Rectory, left today to enter upon a course of study at Havergal College, Toronto.

The article severely criticized "the growing belief" of young Russians that chastity is a relic of the past." Equally false, said Komsomolskaya Pravda, is the widespread notion that a girl can rescue her honor by rushing into marriage with the man she knew only casually.

The newspaper also complained of that a growing number of young men have "an animal approach to love and sex and that coarseness, boorishness and the impermissible use of force toward a woman cannot be condoned.

The popular Soviet writer Lev Kassil, has written that there is real need for sexual education and frank discussion of love in schools, "so that young people are not obliged to turn to inexperienced people with their romantic problems."

Kassil and other aging reformers in Russia are still only voices crying in the wilderness with their demands, as the influential Marxist-Leninist Sochialnaya Industria" that sex is a natural and innate part of the human make-up and therefore needs no special elucidation.

The Communist ideologists will not concede that 53 years after Lenin established the collectivist state in Russia the "new Soviet man" that was to have emerged is little more than a myth.

They stubbornly refuse to acknowledge that young Ivan and Natasha, born and reared under communism, are not so different from their contemporaries in the capitalist West.

Sacred Cows Here Too

Now If India may Come to Do A Program on Canada!

Ottawa Journal

Oh wad some power the giftie gie us
To see ourselves as others see us!

Robert Burns. India needs you. For that matter, so do we all.

The Indian government demanded that the BBC cancel a television series on India's poverty, saying it would show religious rites. The BBC refused, so-India closed its New Delhi office.

Censorship is wrong in practice, and hardly workable anyway. Many Indians, after overtallsie on the til - for - tat basis of reading Westerners' views of ourselves through Indian eyes. Canada, for instance, offers unlimited opportunity.

Canadians also have their offbeat religious cults.

Sex cults? Watch them frolic at the rock festivals.

Our principal temples of worship will be found on certain streets, like Bay Street in Toronto and St. James in Montreal. As for poverty, it can be surveyed within five minutes' walk from either of these streets.

Canada, like India, officially disavows the caste system. And as in India, we have it nevertheless. Our untouchables are the Indians, the North American variety.

Like Indian government demanded that the BBC cancel a television series on India's poverty, we also have our Brahmins. In the money cities they are rich and powerful. In Ottawa they meditate in the upper echelons of the civil service. They could be filmed in that way. But television will not down-town streets, carrying attache cases in the hand and important documents and sandwiches; the latter are for use when the Brahmins are not lunching at their inner sanctum, the Rideau Club.

Canada has no sacred Ganges in which to bathe. In fact, we have almost no rivers for bathing; they are all polluted or, as we say, totally polluted.

But we welcome the television crews. Or dare we?

Manpower Plans Census for Next Year

Summer Jobs for Young People Increasingly Scarce

Montreal Gazette

More obviously has to be done than has been done to provide summer employment for students. The federal government committed $27.9 million to creating 20,000 openings, almost half of them in the public service. For all that, an estimated 50,000 youngsters hit the roads this summer — some, admittedly, intent on doing their thing but most because they had nothing else to do.

It would have been a bad summer for employment in any event. The policies of restraint pursued by governments at all levels dried up many of the jobs that might otherwise have been available from government and business. It has been made worse by the increasingly larger proportion of youngsters in the population.

This trend will persist for some years yet. Studies by the federal manpower department suggest that the crest of the wave of youth hasn't progressed beyond elementary school age. Births in 1960, the peak year, totalled 480,000. Enrolment in high school through to post - graduate levels is expected to increase this year by 6.3 per cent and the figure will continue to rise through the seventies.

The manpower department plans to take a census of students who will be seeking jobs next summer when they enrol next month. The results should give some idea of the dimensions of the problem. What still then need to be done is to find ways which more adequately resolve it than was done this year. Government should enlist the support of both business and labor in this effort. It can't do the job on its own.

Some of the larger Canadian companies have been studying the problem on their own. They have been able to devise programs, ranging from pollution surveys to co - the - job training for future permanent employment, which could readily be implemented. Some some form of assistance, possibly through tax relief, to offset the added costs. They are making work, in most cases, but in a manner which can yield constructive results.

The unions' help is needed in breaking down, for purposes of summer employment, seniority and other contractual restrictions which work against provision of temporary jobs. The unions must see that they have as much at stake in the provision of summer employment for students as business and government.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

If a large, flying insect comes into your car, while you're travelling, try to "keep your cool" says the Ontario Motor League.

Many motorists have followed natural impulses and panicked under similar circumstances. Consequently, some of them wound up in traffic accidents.

Insects are basically of the stinging variety such as bees and wasps — are known to frighten most people, children in particular. This fright can turn into mindless hysteria should a person find himself suddenly entrapped with a flitting bug in such close quarters as an automobile's interior.

Rather than attempting to swat the interloper, which might involve the driver in taking the big aggressive, the OML recommends that the driver of the "trapped car" take the first safe opportunity to pull completely off the road and stop. Then, passengers and driver should quickly exit.

The doors should be left open until the insect has found its own way out. This usually does not take long as it is just as horrified by the experience as its accidental travelling companions.

* * *

If you carry credit cards with you when travelling, think of them as cash. Report lost or stolen cards immediately, in writing, to the issuing company. Unless you report stolen credit cards, companies and courts will hold you, as the card holder, responsible.

Be dependable and predictable, say the Ontario Motor League. Let others know your intentions for turning or changing lanes.

Always check your directional lights after driving onto or off a freeway. Because the curves are gentle, your steering wheel may not have been turned sharply enough to switch off the turn signals. A blinking turn indicator is misleading to other motorists and could cause an accident.

Lights are often overlooked as a safety device, but at night a brake light or turn signal is the only warning the driver behind you has that you are going to stop or turn. Have all the lights on your car checked regularly.

The Ontario Motor League reminds drivers that following the vehicle ahead too closely leaves too little room for safety. The recommended following distance under ideal conditions is one car length for every 10 miles an hour.

Drivers should allow a car pulling a trailer plenty of room since that driver is handicapped by greater stopping distance. Motorists also should remember that it takes greater clearance ahead to ass a car and trailer than it does to pass just a car alone.

Your car should be given a thorough checkup before you start a long drive. The speeds maintained in freeway driving and the distance between service stations requires motorists to have their cars in top condition.

Takeover of Canada by U.S. Is Depicted on CBC Program

TORONTO (CP) — In a fictional documentary on CBC television Tuesday night, Canada meekly handed itself over to the United States.

Projected as a 1976 event, the peaceful merger was pictured as the result of overwhelming American domination of Canada. According to the dramatization, Canadians had elected a prime minister on platforms of "recognition and acceptance of reality" and then had voted in a national referendum to join the U.S.

Stanley Burke, former CBC news announcer, presided as head of a news team reporting Canada's decline as an independent nation.

At the end of the hour-long film, shown in prime time, the Canadian flag was lowered on Parliament Hill to be replaced by the Stars and Stripes.

The film, Countdown Canada, was made on a slim budget by York University for educational television. It was written by Robert Fothergill, director of the Toronto university's television centre.

"There are no plans to show the film in the United States. However some viewers in American border cities may have seen it.

Cec Smith, director of information services for the CBC, said 173 persons had called the CBC switchboard in Toronto in the first half hour after the show.

He described the reaction as "medium" and said 47 calls were favorable and 126 unfavorable. The majority of those opposed said the idea of a merger with the U.S. was ridiculous while those in favor said it was "a good idea to get people thinking about this kind of question."

"A few called in during the program and wanted to know what it was all about," he added. "There were no panic calls but they were just puzzled."

Several times during the program the word "dramatized" was super-imposed over the film.

In the most famous case of dramatization, Orson Welles and other actors made a radio broadcast from New York in 1938 of H. G. Wells' science fiction story The War of the Worlds, about a Martian invasion of earth. Thousands of listeners, the program were wild with fear, some fleeing their homes, others preparing to fight the invaders.

The CBC dramatization Tuesday night ended with the announcement:

"This has been a dramatized documentary. What you have seen has not happened. It is a fictionalized account of what some Canadians think might happen some day."

According to the film, the majority of Canadians accepted the union passively.

According to the film, Quebec had already seceded from Canada. In a film clip from the fictional Radio-Television Quebecois, a coalition of radical nationals and American political refugees called for repeal of the amalgamation act and an election review bord including representatives from Peoples Republic of China, Soviet Union, Peoples Republic of China.

The dramatization moved to Winnipeg where Larry Zolf and Barry Callaghan were arguing over the nationalism encouraged by historian Donald Creighton, the Toronto Daily Star and J. J. Greene, minister of mines, resources and energy. Mr. Callaghan said it had all been a waste of time.

The president of the U.S. said the merger completed the historical process begun when the United States signed the Declaration of Independence in 1776.

Insurance Saving Is Claimed

BRAMALEA, Ont. (CP) — Howard Pawley, credited with drafting the Manitoba auto insurance plan, says it will save Manitobans $5 million each year and "if Ontario had the same legislation I would estimate that about $30 million could be saved."

Mr. Pawley, minister of municipal affairs in Manitoba's NDP government, was addressing an NDP nomination meeting in this Toronto suburb Tuesday night.

He said money collected under public auto insurance was being used for public utilization in social development and such things as debentures for municipalities.

Donald MacDonald, leader of the Ontario NDP, said that although he is withdrawing as party leader in October he will still take an active part in the party.

Jury Urged To Settle Pay Claims

TORONTO (CP) — Robert D. Perkins, a Toronto lawyer, believes wage disputes could best be settled at a hearing before a judge and jury.

Mr. Perkins, who has represented employers in Toronto-area labor disputes for 11 years, has forwarded his views by letter to several Canadian political figures.

Mr. Perkins said Tuesday he thinks unions would favor the judge and jury bargaining forum because it would give them a "sophisticated and socially-acceptable, role as advocates".

Letters outlining Mr. Perkins' plan have been sent to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Saskatchewan Premier Ross Thatcher, Ontario deputy labor minister Thomas Eberlee and the federal Prices and Incomes Commission.

Justice for Poor Essential - - Turner

HAMILTON (CP) — Without justice for the poor there is no just society, Justice Minister John Turner said Tuesday night.

He told a lawyers' meeting that several measures to improve the relationship between citizens and the state will be coming before this fall's parliamentary session.

"And some day we may get around to psychological eavesdropping," he said, citing the use of truth-serum as an example.

John Turner Quits Driving

HAMILTON (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner told a meeting of lawyers Tuesday night that "I'm not against drinking—those who know me know that."

"But if we drink we shouldn't drive and if we drive we shouldn't drink," he added. "I've exercise my choice; I've given up driving."

Germans to Spend $3 Billion In Aircraft and Space Field

BONN (AP) — The West German government plans to pump nearly $3,200 million into the aircraft and space industry over the next five years to help overcome the country's virtual stagnation in the field since the end of the Second World War.

The main thrust of the program, outlined in a report to the Bundestag (parliament), is support for three aircraft projects being developed with other countries.

The projects are a multi-role combat aircraft, which is a fighter plane for the late 1970s being developed with Britain and Italy; the French-German A300B Airbus, and the VFW-614, a 40-passenger short-range aircraft with Dutch and British co-operation.

The largest part of the financial commitment for the 1976-76 period, about $2,500 million, has been earmarked for military projects, mainly the fighter.

This plane, still on the drawing board, is expected to put into practical use the German industry's research on short takeoffs and landings. It is to replace in the late 1970s the United States-designed F-104G Starfighter and the Italian-designed Fiat G-91, now basic equipment of the West German air force.

Ann Landers
Columnist Advises A Full Confession

ANN BABY: Rocks you've got in your head. What kind of advice did you give the kid who got messed up with his homework project? Dear "uncle" nothing is too old nor too young for a child to learn about the facts of life. Your answer to the girl who asked you how to tell her parents that she's "in the family way" was disgusting. Really . . . "do, but I've got an uncle who's very fond of me."

Your advice to the groom — to lay all the cards on the table before the wedding was ridiculous. Did I hear her? I never uncork love letters around since the world began. Would it have been honest to put the Count of the Nile in jail for getting married? Is no cause an easy rap to get off the hook by confessing to a little "discretionary episode" which is fairly standard in most families? Get with it or leave it. — I.M. Sorry

DEAR L.A.: Fairly standard? According to whom? I had two uncles and there wasn't a funny one in the bunch. Certainly I would not have advised the groom to make such a confession, but in this case, when the family found out about the "discretionary episode" uncle took the heat — and the knock and "the muck" was the talk of the town.

Do have an uncle? Or does her family avoid him like the plague? Is he a cause or any rap to get off the hook by confessing to a little "discretionary episode" which is fairly standard in most families? Get with it or leave it. — L.A.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a foreign-born woman with more than one college degree. I am also beautiful. My marriage was going poorly after one year so I consulted psychiatrists, clergymen and two doctors. They all said, "Divorce him." After five years of sickness, frustration and two beautiful children, I took their advice. It didn't work. My husband was determined to use the children to hurt me, I could not stand to see them suffer so the following year we remarried.

I do not consider him a husband. I view him instead as a bad neighbor. I no longer attempt to communicate. I have many friends to fill my life and I never burden them with my problems. I am studying music, art and philosophy, growing every day, spiritually and intellectually. My homeland is growing too — fatter, uglier, and more alcoholic. When we go out together socially I feel as if I am dragging a buffalo.

Please don't say, "Why don't you leave him?" That is not much! The question carries the unspoken implication that I am to blame for his alcoholism. I wish to make it clear he was drinking like a fish when I married him. I realize nobody can help me. I am trapped until he dies. But can you tell me why an intelligent, beautiful woman should have such a rotten life? — NO EXIT.

DEAR NO: I cannot tell you why your life is so "rotten" but I can raise some questions that might provide you with insight. Why would a woman marry a man who "drinks like a fish;" and after having freed herself from what sounds like a living hell, she did not consider "a mere ex-cause" 'I did it for the children" is one of the most overworked excuses in the world. The phrase has a noble ring to it, even heroic, but more often than not, it's untrue.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: There's a $10 bet riding on your answer. You are going to be the sole judge. If a man is walking down the street with his wife and his mother and he trips and goes to work with, who should be introduced first — the wife or the mother? — BATTLE WEARY.

DEAR BAT: The mother should be introduced first — unless the wife is older.

Bride's Wish Is Informal Reception at Wedding

By DORIS CLARE

Dear Doris: Our daughter is getting married in September. Our home is on the shore of a lake, but we have a big church service with the reception following. We want an informal gathering for our friends and relatives at our home.

I have a church group to cater. Will put a small bride's table up on the lawn somewhere in front of the house with the cake and some flowers.

I thought we could serve punch (alcoholic and non-alcoholic) as soon as the guests reached the lawn from the reception line. Then we would have alcoholic etc. for a half hour or so and then when they were ready for their wine glasses, have the toasts, the grams and cutting of the cake. Then all the guests would have a bunch of sandwiches and sweets. Some guests will stay for a while, some will leave early.

Do you think this would be acceptable? — Interested.

Dear Interested: Go ahead. For too many receptions turn out formal and stiff. Your way makes it easy on the bride to circulate and talk to her guests.

Remember, however, that you are giving a wedding reception, not a lawn party. Don't be afraid to charge admission. Ask your minister to announce from the pulpit that you are having a reception and that tickets are available at the church office, advocates, at $5 per couple. Or, if you prefer, you can send out invitations. Either way, you'll be able to cover the cost of the reception.

Dear Doris: I have been married for 19 years and I have put down everything for my husband that I possibly can. I have been a total stranger. Regardless of my efforts, I am the only one who calls me names. I would like anyone to hear.

During the first and years of our marriage I was without bedroom. Other neighbors offered help, but my husband will kiss me goodbye and call me an some sweet names. Then he comes home and I am greeted with a cold shoulder.

When I was a child I was forced to eat fish until I came to hate it. I can eat it now if I have to, but I can't stand the smell. Recently I let no roasting up on the roof vake of fish can damage that. This has caused many feelings for my husband have gradually died with every inflict. I would like to separate, but no amount of reading or counseling can change that.

He says my cold indifference has ruined our marriage, when my feelings are just the things he made them to. — Disgusted.

Dear Disgusted: Why wouldn't a temper tantrum be to blame his victim? Your big mistake was in taking that first angry blow. I know women who would have walked out right then and there. The departure would have been permanent unless an abject apology was forthcoming; and that would have to be followed by a distinct change of heart.

Love does die, when it is battered to death. Yet a counselor could help you see your part in this. Why did you write to me, if you had no hope for the future?

Dear Doris: Just a word to the lady "Clear This Up" about her daughter being baptized. The Bible says, "Believe and be baptized," so you see you should wait till she is of age to want to be baptized and believe in Christ.

Proper Cooking Time For Vegetables

By MARY MOORE

Vegetarians can fly their colorful banner centered with a salad for today. It is vegetables — Canada's own at their peak.

CORN

Consider corn on the cob: 1) To cook it on the cob requires only the length of time needed to bring it to a boil then it is done for the milk is set. Longer cooking starts a hardening, tough. Never boil corn more than 1 min. 2) Cut off the cobs. Corn from cob and measure. Add about ¼ the amount of chopped fresh green pepper. Saute gently in butter until peppers are limp but not brown. Serve sprinkled with salt and pepper.

CAULIFLOWER

Stop overcooking cauliflower. Start undercooking it. To retain its flavor and vitamin C, cook only until it's slightly crisp. Lovely with cheese sauce.

CARROTS

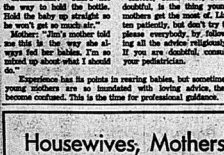
On a vegetable plate carrots show their color to best advantage if cut in strips. Serve them with butter and salt and pepper or glazed: For 4 large cooked carrots cut into strips or chunks mix together ¼ cup light brown sugar, ¼ cup hot liquid in which carrots were cooked, 2 tbsps. butter, ½ tsp. salt. Pour over heavy cooked carrots which have been drained (reserving and measuring liquid) and simmer or bake covered, turning once or twice until nicely glazed — about 1 hr.

BROCCOLI

Here is another vegetable where length of cooking time is important. Cook only until fork tender at stem. Broccoli should retain its bright appetite appeal, especially to children whom you are training to like all vegetables.

TOMATOES

Tomatoes are at their best fresh and ripe and raw but color is so wonderful chef's cannot resist them as additions to vegetable plates. Crumbed Tomatoes: Wash firm large tomatoes. Do not peel. Cut in halves crosswise. Place on broiler rack on sheet of foil. For 8 tomato halves brown crumbs and if desired ¼ tsp. oregano, ¼ tsp. MSG. Bake until heavy with thin brown until golden under broiler burner for about 1 min.



WEDNESDAY

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Grandmother: "That's not the way to hold the bottle. Hold the baby up straight so he won't get so much air."

Mother: "Jim's mother told me this is the way she always fed her babies. I'm so mixed up about what I should do."

Experience has its points in rearing babies, but sometimes young mothers are so inundated with loving advice, they become confused. This is the time for professional guidance.

Advice, some wise, some doubtful, is the thing young mothers get the most of. Listen patiently, but don't try to please everybody, by following all the advice religiously. If you are doubtful, consult your pediatrician.

Local Women Form Club

A charter member to be, of the newly formed Sales and Ad Club for women in Belleville, Alderman Jean Smith signs application form, at the organizational meeting of the club, held last evening at the Sun Lock Gardens. On the left, Mrs. Jane Ann McCaw, chairman of the local steering committee, John Hutchinson, regional director, Kingston, and Mrs. Mary Lou Archibald, Peterborough, welcome Mrs. Smith into the club.

Organization Meeting of Women's Sales and Advertising Club Held

Disapproval of the current liberalization movement for women was stressed by Mrs. William Archibald, Peterborough, speaker at the first meeting of the Women's Sales and Advertising Club of Belleville on Tuesday evening at the Sun Lock Gardens.

As she spoke to a capacity audience, Mrs. Archibald felt women should not challenge the men's world in the labor field but maintain prestige that commands respect. As the chairman of the resolutions committee for the Canadian Federation of Sales and Advertising she expressed to the prospective members present, the advantage of active participation in the club which provides social education, better service in business, better profits and a greater satisfaction from life. Eight members of the Peterborough Club accompanied the guest speaker. The local Sales and Ads Club president Bruce Lynch was also in attendance.

Mrs. Gerald (Jane Ann McCaw) chairman of the steering committee welcomed the new members and outlined the basic fundamentals of the club. She expressed the desire for a successful organization in Belleville linking cities like Ottawa, Peterborough, Toronto, Winnipeg, Hamilton and other Women's Sales and Advertising Clubs now established across Canada.

John Hutchison of Kingston Region 2, Director of Federation brought best wishes to the Belleville club on behalf of the Federation and complimented the club on their progress and felt confident that the new Women's Sales and Ads Club of Belleville would reach their plateau of success.

On October 6, the local club will hold their chartered night at Club Caesars affiliating them with the Federation of Canada. All the executive for Federation have indicated their desire to attend. Guest speaker at this time will be Keith Garrett, president of CFASC Toronto.

The executive and club directories will be installed at this meeting and promises to be to be the highlight of the club's activities for the year.

Club membership is still open until September 30 for those women who are interested in becoming a part of this club. One may obtain an application by contacting Mrs. McCaw at 968-9980.

Nonagenarian Not Old Fashioned

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Mrs. George Meisinger is 90 years old, but she still regularly attends Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church seven blocks from her home.

During the summer, the spry elderly woman usually goes to church twice a week. During most of her life she went every day.

"But these last three years I haven't gone in the winter. And I don't go every morning this year yet, with my walking. . . I always liked to go to mass. I always did."

She isn't old fashioned as one might expect a 90-year-old to be.

She accepts the changes in the church without complaint.

"I don't care a bit for the changes. You can't make it any different. You have to go right along. I have my own way anyway."

She said she doesn't find she has to go to confession any more although she used to go every month. "The last twice I went I had nothing to confess but I told him to give me absolution to forgive all the sins I did in my life."

She doesn't think priests should marry because "they have too much to do to tend to their congregations that they don't get time to spend with their wife and children."

"And then again it really doesn't make any difference to me."

She thinks there must be a heaven and a hell and isn't afraid to die herself, though she admits she was once, "I can tell you one thing though, I'm going to live till I die."

New Type of PE Project

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — How many different ways can you pick up a bean bag, without using your hands?

The answer's important to three Simon Fraser University professors who completed a three-year project designed to make physical education in schools more kinds-minded.

And the project head Dr. Glenn Kirchner says the bean bag is just one of many props teachers can use for the new individualized approach.

He says that their methods are superior to the traditional way of teaching PE because it prevents children from becoming bored with assigned group activities and allows poor students to do their best without fear of failing.

Dr. Kirchner and Professors Jean Cunningham and Eileen Warrell spent three years developing methods and working with the children of Porter Street elementary school in nearby Coquitlam.

The result is a 246-page book explaining the new concept, along with three pamphlets on volleyball, basketball and track and several films.

The authors have toured B.C., other provinces and the United States explaining the methods with these teaching aids. "We had unanimous support from elementary school teachers for this method," says Dr. Kirchner.

Top Fashions for Fall

The girl has on a super long cardigan which is top fashion for autumn. This one is by Hogg of Hawick, Scotland, in two-ply washable shrink resistant pure new lambswool. The man on the left is wearing an attractive combination of British worsted cloth and leather. The suit was judged to be the best lounge suit entered by a provincial tailor at the annual competition among Britain's bespoke tailors. And on the right is the double-breasted suit made by Fred Watson of Threadneedle Street, London, which was awarded the gold "Dandy" Trophy as the "Suit of the Year" in the annual competition among Britain's bespoke tailors. Made from a close striped dark blue British worsted cloth, the suit appears to be leading a return to the double-breasted style once again. Nearly 200 garments from Britain's leading bespoke tailors were entered for the competition.

'Bat' Girl At Toronto Museum

TORONTO (CP) — Most people would rather have nothing to do with bats, but Judy Egerton only spends her days with them, she actually finds them "beautiful," "fascinating" and "gorgeous."

The 23-year-old curatorial assistant in the Royal Ontario Museum has been the museum's bat girl for almost two years.

Miss Egerton is responsible for identifying and cataloguing bat specimens that are sent in to compliment the department's 23,000-specimen bat collection.

Miss Egerton's boss, Dr. R. L. Peterson, spent about two months earlier this year collecting about 1,500 specimens in Cameroon, West Africa, and she says she hopes a few new species will be identified.

"The more obscure the place they originate, the more interesting the specimens are," she says.

Miss Egerton earned her BA in biology from Carleton University in Ottawa in 1967 and has begun to work towards an MA at the University of Toronto.

She and her co-workers have tried to make pets of several bats at the museum.

"At first we had to hand-feed them," she says, "although some of the male bats have been able to eat on their own, eventually.

"Vampire bats are easy to keep. They just need blood, so you go to a slaughterhouse to get their food."

Most species of bats are found in the tropical regions, and only eight exist in Ontario.

Miss Egerton says most people express shock when they learn she works with bats. But one person finds it perfectly natural: her boy-friend. They met over a collection of bats.

Four Newcomers Are Picked for Seven-member Yukon Council

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — Yukon voters elected a seven-member territorial council Tuesday, picking four new faces and returning two members of the last council in the over-whelming debate.

Defeated were Jean Gordon, who lost her seat despite a win in the Mayo district, and J. O. Livesey, council speaker, who was soundly beaten by Liberal Hilda Watson, a teacher, in Carmacks-Klunane.

Re-elected were Ken McKinnon, Norman Chamberlist and Don Taylor. The newcomers are Mrs. Watson, Liberal Clive Tanner, Mike Stutter and Ronald A. Rivett, the bookkeeper who thumped Mrs. Gordon.

The councillors will name two of their number to the territory's executive committee, a move Yukoners hope will lead to rule from Whitehorse instead of Ottawa. Mr. McKinnon and Mr. Chamberlist are the favorites.

Term of office for the new council is four years, compared with three for previous councils. No date has been set for the next session but it usually opens here in the second week of November.

At least 68 per cent of the 7,500 eligible voters turned out in cold weather and snow at 37 polls scattered through 207,000 square miles. This compared with 65 per cent of 5,200 voters in 1957.

Four remote polls did not report Tuesday night but the ballots could not change standings, Official count will be Sept. 15.

For the first time, 18- and 20-year-olds had the vote in electing the Yukon's equivalent of a legislature. Though its term is four years, federal Commissioner James Smith can dissolve it at any time.

There were 21 candidates. Five ran as Liberals, breaking the tradition of all candidates running as independents, despite rejection by their party (and the Conservatives) of the idea of using party labels.

Two councillors did not seek re-election: John Dumas in Whitehorse West and George Shaw in Dawson.

Two councillors will be named later this year to the executive committee, joining Mr. Smith and his assistants, R. A. Hodgkinson and G. R. Fleming. These three men are appointed by Ottawa.

The council got full-time jobs in the $20,000 range and are expected to oversee administration of education and health and welfare. Yukoners are already referring to the two as cabinet ministers.

Ottawa originally proposed to put one councillor on the committee but bowed to pressure and made it two. It's accepted here that the federal government will now be pressed to increase that number.

THE MAN IN THE PANAMA HAT by Elizabeth Kimball

The man in the Panama Hat is Stephen Leacock — and Elizabeth Kimball is his niece. She invites the reader to look, as it were, through a hole in the hedge, to watch Leacock with his family and the people who worked for him. She says it best herself in the introduction. "Seeing him then, and with eyes not wholly awed, it is hoped you may come to know my uncle as a person rather than a personage."

THE SPITFIRE BENDERS by Ronald Seth.

Probably the best-known exploit of the Psychological Warfare Branch in World War II was the sending of actor Clifton Brown, an exact double of General Montgomery, to Gibraltar while Monty was making D-Day plans in London. This and other incidents planned and carried out by PWB are described in this book.

COUNTRY EDITOR'S BOY by Hal Borland

Hal Borland is a writer distinguished for his perceptions of nature and animals and his power as a novelist. His latest book is a sequel to High, Wide and Lonesome. By now his parents have moved to Flagler, Colorado, and the author is entering his teens. A charming account of a boy's maturing and a way of life which no longer exists.

EXCITING RAILWAY JOURNEYS OF THE WORLD by K. Wescott Jones

Here is a travel book with a difference. Mr. Jones is an inveterate traveller who "adores steam engines, hates diesels but will settle for electrification." He describes trips taken on five continents, including five Canadian routes. There are the Ivory Bullets of Japan, the Rheingold route across Europe and the narrow gauge mountain trains of India.

THE TOM THOMSON MYSTERY by William Little

In July, 1917, Tom Thomson's body was found floating in Canoe Lake in Algonquin Park. The verdict at the time was accidental death by drowning, but there has always been controversy as to how he met his death and when he was buried. Judge Little became interested in the mystery while visiting Algonquin Park, and having a profound admiration for this great artist's work set out to review all the evidence available. This book is the result of Little's painstaking research.

TIPPING THE SCALES by Henry Cecil

Today it is unthinkable that anyone would try to sway an English Judge's decision by slipping him 50 pounds. But it was not always so. Tipping the Scales is a story of judicial corruption going back to the twelfth century. The stories told illustrate so well the struggle which has brought about the kind of justice enjoyed today.

GOLD! GOLD! GOLD! by Eric Rosenthal.

A small strip of Veld in South Africa known as the Rand, has produced more than half the world's gold reserves. The discovery of gold changed a rural community into a country dotted with gaunt and boom towns, blazing with gold and diamonds and as wild as the Barbary Coast. It also resulted in the great city of Johannesburg, the confrontation of Cecil Rhodes and Paul Kruger, and eventually the Boer War.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"Our con-opener was recalled by the factory because of a defect, so we'll have to set out."

Priest Golfs With New Heart

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. Edward Madigan, 50-year-old priest, recently received the heart of a small girl in an operation last April 21, went golfing Tuesday against doctor's orders.

"There'll be hell to pay if this girl's heart fails," the smiling Father Madigan remarked when reporters and photographers found him on the golf course. "I'll have eight doctors on my neck."

He spent most of his time riding the golf cart, and stopped playing when he found himself tiring.

But what Father Madigan didn't know was that club starter Harry Fogg had placed doctors in golf parties ahead and behind the priest.

Regional Government Is Seen Helping Conservatives Rule

OSHAWA (CP) — A consultant to the City of Oshawa suggested Tuesday night that the system of regional governments in Ontario could help the Conservative government maintain political control in these regions.

James Paxton is preparing a report for the city on the role Oshawa should play in regional government in the area immediately east of Metropolitan Toronto which includes Whitby and Ajax.

"I believe that urban areas as they exist might disappear and the provincially-created regions will dominate," he said in an interview.

He said this could help the Conservatives maintain political control in the affected areas, particularly since the province appoints the first chairman of each new regional government.

Mr. Paxton also suggested that regional governments might curtail the political power of Metro Toronto by denying it room to expand and include more voters.

Mr. Paxton had been allowed to spread its boundaries, the political force—mostly Liberal and NDP (New Democratic Party) —would have eroded the Conservative strength in rural areas," he said.

"Just look at the map of southern Ontario and you'll find the regional government are based on purely political divisions, not cultural, social or economic" as was recommended by a transportation study.

Mr. Paxton also said regional government could mean an increase of one-half mill in taxrates, while resulting in fewer services for residents of southern urban areas.

Lakes Parley Opens

Twenty Years Ago Boundary Commission Foresaw Dirty Water

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty years ago the International Joint Commission forecast some dirty years for the water of the Great Lakes unless Canadian and United States governments co-operated in fighting pollution.

The commission was formed in 1909 by Canada and the United States to study boundary waters and see that the waters "shall not be polluted on either side to the injury of health or property on the other."

Today, representatives from five Great Lakes states, three provinces and both federal governments sit down to have a look at what has happened to the water in the last 20 years.

Most agree it has not been good.

They know about the raw sewage, muck, slimy algae, oil drilling, mercury poisoning and DDT.

Government officials admit there has been a lack of cooperation between the governing bodies in setting down uniform methods of pollution control.

That was the reason Premier John Robarts called this meeting, which he has named the Great Lakes Environmental Conference.

In attendance will be Premier Roberts, representatives from Manitoba, Quebec, Ottawa and Washington and governors William Milliken, Michigan; Raymond Schaefer, Pennsylvania; James Rhodes, Ohio; Edgar Whitcomb, Indiana; and Richard Ogilvie, Illinois. Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec will attend a conference dinner tonight.

While the conference will deal mainly with water pollution it will also examine pollutants in the air and on the soil.

Smog and carbon monoxide are familiar air pollutants, but scientists such as Glen Paulson of the department of biometrics at New York's Rockefeller University say only 10 per cent of the dirt in the air is known chemically.

Delegates also will be confronted with the fact that the United States has set standards on only 426 of the more than 2.5 million chemicals man has introduced into the world.

Barrie Charged with Dumping Raw Sewage

TORONTO (CP) — A charge has been laid against the city of Barrie for refusing to obey an order to stop dumping raw sewage into Kempenfelt Bay, the Ontario Water Resources Commission announced Tuesday.

The commission, charged that the city continued dumping sewage into the bay for a full week ending Aug. 13 despite an order to stop. Maximum penalty is a $1,000-a-day fine.

An official of the Simcoe County health unit said the sewage contained so much human excrement that it could not be measured. The testing instruments can measure human coliform counts up to 2,000 units. The permissible limit for swimming water is 100 units.

Neil Fox, Barrie works superintendent, said the dumping had occurred, but described it as a "minimum amount" which he estimated at 1,000,000 gallons dumping during a 20-hour period.

"But the OWRC knows all about it," Mr. Fox said. "I don't know whether we had a letter from them or not, but I'm sure there was verbal permission at least."

George Missingham, OWRC district engineer, said he received a letter from Barrie engineers asking that the city be allowed to bypass sewage into the bay while renovation work was being done on a pumping station.

"I not only refused permission, but expressed amazement that they would even make the request."

Jamieson Plans Tough New Oil Pollution Law

OTTAWA (CP) — Stringent new regulations aimed at preventing oil pollution of Canadian waters will be introduced in the Commons this fall, Transport Minister Don Jamieson said Tuesday.

The legislation will be a firm attempt to prevent oil spills like the one caused Monday by the sinking of the barge Irving Whale in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, Mr. Jamieson said.

New legislation will put the responsibility for pollution squarely on the shoulders of the polluters, Mr. Jamieson said.

"I'll be as tough as the law permits and when it's not as tough as I think necessary, I'm sure I'll get the support of the House of Commons to make changes."

The minister said officials from his department have been in touch with K. C. Irving, the wealthy Canadian industrialist whose firm, Irving Oil Co. Ltd., owns the sunken barge.

He did not elaborate on what action, if any, Mr. Irving plans to take to clean up the oil, spilled from the barge.

Oil Barrier Tested

HAMILTON (CP) — A pliable boom of lightweight material that can be quickly put into use and lengthened as needed was demonstrated Tuesday as a means of controlling oil spills in harbor waters.

Arctic Residents Agree to Allow Exploration for Oil

SACHS HARBOUR, N.W.T. (CP) — Residents of Sachs Harbour have agreed to allow oil companies to begin exploration work on Banks Island Oct. 1, despite their earlier threats to seek a court injunction to halt exploration.

The decision was made during a meeting with government and oil company officials in this community about 900 miles north of Yellowknife.

However, there were charges Tuesday that Eskimo trappers were pushed into a decision they didn't want to make.

Agnes Semmler of Inuvik, head of the Committee for Original People's Entitlements, said her organization was not invited to the session.

"The people at Sachs didn't know the government was going to ask them for a decision—they were pushed into it," she said.

Following a meeting with Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien last month, the Sachs Harbour Trapping Council spoke of seeking a court injunction to halt exploration and asking him to proceed with the matter.

Pesticide to Be Banned

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal agriculture department will ban food-crop and other uses of the pest killer DDD, also known as TDE or Rhothane, it was learned today.

The ban on use of the pesticide goes into effect Jan. 1.

This chemical, along with the pesticide DDT, was singled out by a government inquiry in the United States last year as pesticides which should be virtually eliminated within two years.

Home for Retarded Children Is Result of Years of Effort

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Happy Halfway House is for children.

But its dominant presence is adult — and one adult in particular: its administrator, Mrs. Grace Ince.

The reason:

"We're all here for the children," says Mrs. Ince. "If you don't love them, don't work with them . . . We're all a team."

The spirit of Mrs. Ince's team is reflected in the environment. And environment is basic to the operation of such an undertaking.

Happy Halfway House at 29 East Moira Street is a home for retarded children.

As such, it is unique in modern Belleville.

In an Ontario-wide perspective it also is a unit of a distinctive grouping.

In an era when direct government involvement in every social field need be taken for granted, there still is a role for such private enterprises.

Licensed by the province's social and family services department, such homes for retarded infants provide a personal service not yet readily available from government-operated sources.

Mrs. Ince opened her home in March, 1967. With her background it was an almost inevitable undertaking.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Velleman, whose retarded infants' home at Plainfield was a pioneer project in the field.

Mrs. Ince, having lived much of her life in Montreal, worked at her parents' Plainfield home before coming to Belleville to start her own operation.

That was in 1966 on the Carnilton Road, site of the first attempt to launch a boarding home for retarded infants.

It was also a slow-starting project. Mrs. Ince says she wrote to more than 1,000, mostly in the Toronto area, hopefully informing them of her service. The reply was one-fifth of one per cent — and no infants.

But Mrs. Ince, apparently, is not so easily discouraged from gaining a goal. She was after all, she frankly admits, "nearly 50" when she achieved an earlier objective: to become a practical nurse.

She continued to seek contacts for her home services in early 1966.

Shortly after, she received her first child from the Children's Aid Society. Just two months later the CAS in Toronto assigned her as foster parent for two more children.

Then, with the future taking a more positive tinge, she set out looking for other quarters. The Carnilton Road, predominantly a commercial area, she felt, was not an ideal location for a boarding house.

Finances weren't the only problem to securing new premises. She recalls one woman who seemed eager to sell her property — until she heard it would be used for retarded children.

Finally, in February 1967 she arrived at East Moira Street, a location, with pleasant gardens sloping to the Moira River — and the project entered a new phase.

Expanded quarters permitted her to take in more children, and apply for a provincial government licence — a mandatory move once five children are in care, says Mrs. Ince.

With Happy Halfway House finally a reality she began receiving young residents from another source. The provincial government's hospital at Smiths Falls started sending patients — some of them teenagers.

Now — two years later — the patients have returned to government care. Mrs. Ince said she discovered her undertaking wasn't "just the type of facility" for such patients. The children she wishes to concentrate on are mongoloid youngsters — taking them from infancy, through nursery school to more serious phases of training.

She now has 14 charges in her care, ranging from 13 months to a little more than five years. Her objective is a 20 — a number which still permits the "personal touch," she believes basic to a successful environment.

Her goal, says Mrs. Ince, is to develop the children's abilities through the years to the point where they can be trained for certain jobs — useful projects "which will contribute to their own ego."

This is a new social concept in its training of mongoloid children, says Mrs. Ince" one that is being tried elsewhere.

"I'm convinced it can work. If it doesn't, I'm in the wrong profession," she declares.

But developing such a program through all its phases creates a demand for physical facilities.

At present, she's contemplating an extension to Happy Halfway House to include a nursery school and dormitory. As yet, it's moved little beyond the contemplative stage.

Cost of such a facility might be about $50,000. Mrs. Ince estimates — and ways of raising such capital are a current concern for herself and the home's board members.

(The 12-member board — Happy Halfway House was incorporated as a non-profit charitable organization this year — is drawn from the community. It includes a doctor, a lawyer, an accountant.)

Somebody — "a retired waitress," says Mrs. Ince, but no definite fund-raising method has yet evolved.

However, her confidence of public response to any such future project was warmed recently. A note she found in Mrs. Lee Hicks, of Picton — one of the 18 staff workers who help operate the home in three daily shifts — launched a tentative, localized appeal.

At Riverside Speedway, near Brighton, Mrs. Hicks and another home worker circulated among the fans with jars after having an appeal announced on the public address system. They collected $147 on the spot — money which will be used to purchase a piece of play equipment, now in use in the home's garden.

"It makes me feel that people are willing to give," says Mrs. Ince. "I think it's people's realize that these children are going to be something. . . I think that these children are not so much different than their own, that they have needs and wants . . . I think they'll be willing to give. We want to prove that the retarded can be made useful, and be absorbed in the community."

UCS Head Visits Drop-in Centre To Get Opinions of Youth

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Officialdom dropped in to The Second Stage last night on a fact-finding mission to discover what the young people themselves want in a youth centre.

Isidore Cooperman, executive director of United Community Services, sought youthful opinions on the running of a drop-in centre, but his remarks led to no clear-cut answers to offer.

His visit to the Front St. centre was the outgrowth of a meeting three weeks ago, when 50 community leaders met to discuss the future of the drop-in centre. At that time, no young people were represented, but the group was assured they would have a chance to express their views as UCS prepared a report on the subject.

Their chance came last night but Mr. Cooperman found lack of agreement on the method of operating the centre.

Some of his informants among the 70 young people in attendance were in favor of full-time professional adult supervision. Others wanted to run the centre themselves, through a committee system. Even though reminded by Roland Belanger, present operator of the centre, that the committee system had failed in the past.

Mr. Belanger noted that the club ran at its smoothest when it had a paid manager in attendance.

"We have to have somebody who lets people do their own thing, but establishes law and order in a low key," he said one youth. "This place had been through three or four committees. They fall apart in a month. You can't rely on a committee — you have to rely on one person and that's wrong."

He added that one person is indispensable to handle the full-time responsibility of the club — a larger staff is needed.

Another youth added that "the regulars observe the rules" of the centre.

"Then some Joe Crackpot comes in from out-of-town with a bottle of wine and he has to be stopped immediately before the club falls apart," he said.

"How do you stop him if he's twice your size?" queried a voice from the audience.

Mr. Cooperman got concrete answers to his questions about the ideal club.

It should, the young people agreed, be a two-storey building, with rooms for games, crafts and television on the ground floor and a place to listen to music and talk on the second floor.

And the drop-in centre habitues agreed that the city and its merchants should support the centre financially.

"They support sports, why shouldn't they support us too?" they asked.

There was unanimous agreement that the centre was a vital service in the community.

Mr. Cooperman noted that the present quarters would be taken over by the landlord at the end of this month.

"What has the centre meant to you? Will you feel its loss?" he asked.

A chorus of replies came from the floor.

"There's not much to do now in Belleville; close this down and there will be nothing."

"Kids would be back sitting on the bank steps."

"There would be lots of crime in Belleville."

The merchants would start complaining again and people would end up in jail."

"I'd be back out on the street."

"I'd end up in jail — half the kids here would."

"All this club is to the straight adults out there is a place to keep the hair."

Mr. Cooperman remarked that complaints had been registered about panhandling outside the drop-in centre.

"What's the cause?" he asked.

"It's the chicks and guys on the street with no homes and no jobs who panhandle," he was told.

"But, where do you sleep," the director asked.

"Under bridges, in churches, parked trucks, laundromats," he was told.

Mr. Belanger's announcement that the centre would be instituted at the centre because of the opening of school brought groans.

The new hours are 3:30 to 11 p.m. Mr. Belanger said, because keeping the centre open during school hours is discouraged some to skip school in the past.

The earlier closing was necessary because parents would complain if children were not home at a reasonable hour.

"If you stay out late, parents will complain and the centre will close," said Mr. Belanger.

"Why not let the parents look after the school kids?" asked a youth. "What about the people over 18 who are not in school? Do they close the hotels because some woman's husband stays out late?"

The pressure was on press at the meeting was defended by Mr. Belanger after the opposition of some club members.

"Why do we need a reporter?" they asked. "The Intelligencer has hindered us more than it has helped in the past."

Mr. Belanger said the complaints about the press, several said later, were letters to the editor in opposition to The Second Stage.

"People are afraid of what they don't understand," Mr. Belanger told the group. "The public must be informed, otherwise we will have only the loud and confident we have faced in the past."

Ameliasburg to Vote On Liquor Outlets

AMELIASBURG (Special) — On Monday, December 7 voters for the first time in the township's history will be able to decide whether they want liquor sold in the municipality.

Last night council, with deputy reeve Norman Post absent due to illness, passed a bylaw authorizing a liquor plebiscite for election day. The question the electorate will be asked to determine "Are you in favor of the sale of liquor under a lounge licence on a licensed premises?"

Balloting for the municipality is confined to owners and tenants who are permanent residents. Summer cottage dwellers are not eligible. The necessary 60 per cent majority is needed to make opening outlets possible.

A check of early records in the township office revealed liquor was not sold legally in Ameliasburg prior to the Temperance Act which took effect in 1916.

In dealing with Jack Allin's sub - division in the Peat's Point area, council favored supporting the recommendation of the Ontario Municipal Board which ruled in this case the lot sizes would be one acre in area to comply with agricultural zoning.

Harold Bonier and his son Donald appeared before council for guidance in making a zoning change from agricultural to commercial. Their proposal involves a parcel of land fronting on the bayshore road where they have established a retail outlet and intend to market farm produce and other food lines. They were reminded that people living within 400 feet of the property have the right to object to the application.

A communication asking council to consider the rezoning of the Weller's Bay cheese factory property was prompted council to study the benefits of changing the zoning of additional property in the same area north of Consecon with the one application.

The inquirer advanced the prospect of converting the former processing plant and operator's residence by the senior's edge into a marina, boat storage with a food take-out facility on the premises.

Council also called for extra time to study township solicitor J. D. Templeman's suggestions for strengthening summer cottage zoning.

A load of cedar rails for burning in campfires at government supervised Outlet Beach broke into flames and was destroyed on a truck en route. Hillier township is being asked to pay the bill for Ameliasburg firemen bringing the blaze under control because the fire was noticed and reported after it had crossed the boundary between the two neighboring townships. It was so close to the line the storm was turned into the Ameliasburg firehall instead of the Wellington department responsible for Hillier fire protection, councillor (acting fire chief) Arnold Wetherall explained.

Museum curator Harry Risdee reported summer attendance up over the 3,000 mark was a new record.

New construction continues in the township. The report for the month of August shows 13 building permits issued for farm buildings, houses and garages valued at $76,850.

Posters Permitted

Permission was granted yesterday by Belleville Public Utilities Commission to the United Community Services to erect 25 "Share the Warmth" posters on downtown utility poles.

At the same time as permission was granted to the UCS, the commission was reminded by Mayor J. Russell Scott that there is a bylaw prohibiting the posting of all posters on street poles unless permission is granted by the city through the PUC.

'Scotsman' Visit Stirs Nostalgia In Steam Buffs

All the nostalgia of a bygone era returned to Belleville yesterday in the form of a 1923 British railway engine, the "Flying Scotsman," which steamed into the CNR station shortly before noon.

To railroad buffs this grand lady of steam holds more than a reminder of the past. She is officially recorded as being the first steam locomotive to travel more than 100 miles per hour, a feat she achieved in 1934.

The origins' "Flying Scotsman" was a nickname given to the 4-6-2s expresses from Kings Cross in London to Edinburgh in Scotland. This title was officially bestowed on these trains in 1927.

The name was also given to the third engine designed by Sir Nigel Gresley. A total of 80 of the A3 class engines were constructed.

Throughout its 24-million-mile history,this engine built up a reputation for glamor. Her trial runs established the forementioned record together with an as-yet-unbroken time of 14 minutes in cover the 183 miles between London and Leeds.

In 1963, the engine was withdrawn from service and declined to fall under the cutters torch. A British businessman, Alan Pegler, purchased the "Scotsman" from the scrap heap that same year, and fulfilled a dream he had held since first standing on her at the age of four when she was on display at the Wembley Exhibition of 1924.

"I knew at the time that this style of engine would disappear (when British railways began dieselizing steam in 1955) and sure enough, all but this one have been cut up for scrap", he explained yesterday.

"Between 1935 and 1963, when the last main-line tour was run by British Railways, more than 20,000 engines have been cut up."

Unlike Canada, which still allows special steam trains to run, Britain officially announced that steam-hauled specials were to be discontinued in Nov. 1967. Through a special arrangement with British Railways, Mr. Pegler arranged to run his steamer on the rails until April 1971 when the discontinuation becomes complete.

During her North American tour both in 1933 and since 1969 she has drawn millions of people to view her wherever she stopped.

Now, the British Trade Tour has taken her across the continent on the rails of almost every railway company.

Following her visit to Belleville yesterday, she will be on view at the Science and Technology Museum in St. Laurent Blvd. in Ottawa from Sept. 2 until Sept. 13.

From there she goes back through the United States on another tour.

Free Tickets From Mayor

PICTON (Staff) — Free midway ride tickets will be distributed among all public school children this weekend by Mayor H. J. McFarland during radio station CJBQ's five coverage of the county fair. This broadcast, made possible by Mayor McFarland, will begin at noon this Saturday and continue until 2 p.m., covering the highlights of activities on the grounds.

All public and pre-school youngsters will be admitted to the fairgrounds free of charge throughout the three-day show, Prince Edward County's senior citizens also will be guests of the Agricultural Society during the fair. Most of them will arrive in cars or buses chartered by the managers of local nursing homes. Five nursing homes plan displays of handicrafts done by residents with special ribbons awarded to the winners. These exhibits will be placed in the Curling Club where the ladies' work section is this year displayed.

Cosy Grill Trumps Queens

Dairy Queen found out the hard way that 'close doesn't count' as Cozy Grill struck for two runs in the seventh inning last night to give them an 9-7 edge in the first game of the best four of seven Belleville Women's softball finals.

Tied 7-7 going into the final inning Pat Robson doubled with one out. Pitcher Sandra Claus proved she didn't want the game to go into overtime by capping her pitching counterpart for a game-winning hope run.

The winners were led at bat by Verna Miller with a home run and triple, Sharon Francis with two doubles, Pitcher Sandra Claus and Verna Hill also homered.

For the losers it was pitcher Barbara Breadner striking the ball for a triple and two doubles followed with lone doubles by Doris Lockwood, Hope Lockwood, Cathy Brown and Sharon Hannah.

Sandra Claus who went all the way on the mound for the Cozy win had a sixteen hitter, striking out three and walking as many.

Her, counterpart Barb Breadner did much better but it didn't show that way on the score sheet. She pitched an 11 hitter, downing seven on strikes and allowing only two free passes.

Face Crucial Doubleheader

Mets Could Repeat Winning Formula

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It was one year ago today that the New York Mets swept a twi-night doubleheader and, for the first time in their adventurous young lives, moved into first place in the National League's East Division.

A combination of circumstances, some of it their own doing and much of it Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago Cubs, has placed the Mets in a position to celebrate that anniversary on top of the heap again-provided they can sweep another twinighter.

New York moved to within one-half game of the first place Pirates Tuesday, whipping Montreal Expos 10-5 while third place Chicago, only one game behind, walloped Pittsburgh 19-3.

The Mets, who've won four straight and seven of the last nine, play a twi-night doubleheader against Philadelphia Phillies tonight while the Pirates entertain St. Louis Cardinals. A sweep by the Mets would assure them of at least a share of the lead, regardless of what the Pirates do. Chicago played an afternoon game against Montreal.

Elsewhere in the National League Tuesday, St. Louis whipped Philadelphia 6-3, Houston Astros outlasted San Diego Padres 10-7, Atlanta Braves edged Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 and Cincinnati Reds tripped San Francisco Giants 5-4.

The Mets exploded for six runs in the eighth inning against the Expos with Ken Boswell's bases-loaded double driving home three and reliever Tug McGraw's bases-loaded single producing three more.

McGraw worked five strong innings of relief to nail down the victory but needed ninth inning help from Ron Herbel after Bob Bailey tagged a three-run homer for Montreal.

The Pirates, meanwhile, who've been out of first place only two days since July 11, absorbed another whipping from the Cubs.

Bill Hands scattered eight hits and Chicago collected 15 including three each by Randy Hundley, who drove in three runs, and Ron Santo, who drove in two.

Steve Carlton pitched a four-hitter and contributed two timely hits to St. Louis' attack as the Cardinals bung one to third place in the East by whipping Philadelphia.

Rich Allen homered for St. Louis while Deron Johnson and Joe Lis connected for the Phillies.

Doug Rader and Bob Watson drove in three runs apiece as Houston bung on to beat San Diego. Rader had two singles and his 21st homer and Watson ripped two singles.

Nate Colbert and Clarence Gaston each tagged two-run homers for the Padres.

Orlando Cepeda ripped a three-run homer in the first inning and that was all George Stone needed as Atlanta bested Los Angeles.

Bobby Tolan's bases-loaded double drove in three runs in the second inning, leading the Reds past the Dodgers.

Ray Washburn picked up victory with seven innings sharp relief after taking over for Jim Merritt, who strained his pitching elbow in the first inning. Merritt is not expected to miss a pitching turn.

Rooker Gives Angels 'Royal' Treatment with Three-Hitter

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pitching a no-hitter crossed Jim Rooker's mind for a brief instant but the Kansas City Royals left-hander quickly dismissed it when he remembered the night of June 4.

The 27-year-old fireballer retired the first 16 California Angels batters before Joe Azcue snapped the string with a single and Rooker had to settle for a neat three-hitter as the Royals trounced the Angels 12-0 Tuesday night.

"The no-hitter came to my mind but I didn't let myself get concerned by it," said the Royals' second-year man.

"I had a no-hitter for eight innings on June 4 and not only didn't I get it, I wound up losing the game . . ."

The New York Yankees eventually won the June 4 game 2-1 in 12 innings.

Tuesday he didn't walk a batter and struck out seven.

The Royals backed him with a 17-hit attack, including four hits apiece for Bob Oliver and Lou Piniella as the Angels fell to their fifth straight loss.

In other American League contests, Baltimore Orioles topped Detroit Tigers 6-3, Milwaukee Brewers edged Minnesota Twins 3-2, New York tripped Washington Senators 7-3 and Boston Red Sox nipped Cleveland Indians 4-3. The Oakland Athletics and Chicago White Sox were idle.

Boog Powell drove in three runs with a two-run homer and single and Frank Robinson slugged a homer in the Orioles' triumph, sending Mickey Lolich to his 17th defeat. The left-hander has won 12.

Phil Roof clubbed a two-run, two-out homer in the ninth inning, giving the Brewers their victory and stopping the Twins winning streak at five. Tony Oliva had his 21st homer for the Twins.

The Yankees drilled 16 hits, including three by Ron White and Ron Hansen as the New Yorkers took their fifth straight. White drove in three runs with a pair of triples and a single and scored twice.

Pitcher Ken Brett slammed solo homer in the eighth inning snapping a 3-3 tie in the Red Sox victory. Rico Petrocelli and Joe Lahoud also homered for Boston while Buddy Bradford had a three-run shot for the Indians.

Do Sex and Soccer Mix?

LONDON (AP) — Does sex mix with soccer?

That's the question in British sporting circles, and according to one of England's top soccer coaches the answer is: "No."

Harry Catterick, manager of the Everton team, champion of the English First Division, started the bedroom debate by claiming that sex was slowing down his team's attack.

Three of his star players got married this summer and that's why the championship team has lost six of its first seven games, he says.

"We always have stop watches on the players," Catterick complained, "and the ones who married during the summer have been more sluggish than the others."

The newly-married soccer men, Joe Royle, Colin Harvey and Howard Kendall, refused to get into the argument.

But Mrs. Maureen Harvey, a pretty, 21-year-old blonde, and wife of one of the players whose performance started the debate, protested simply: "It's not true that it has put Colin off his game."

Womens Rights Movement Hits Wimbeldon Tennis

LONDON (AP) — Wimbledon will review its prize money policies at the end of the year, Mrs. David Mills, secretary for the tournament, said Tuesday when informed of a possible women's revolt in professional lawn tennis.

Margaret Court of Australia, winner at Wimbledon, was among women players who threatened Monday to boycott future tournaments because of disparity in purses.

"We have never had any grouses from players over prize money," said Mills. "The women's awards are just half of the men."

"It's discrimination," said Rosemary Casals of San Francisco. "We expend the same amount of energy. We practise as much, we play just as hard. We contribute our share to the success of the tournament."

Mrs. Mills disputed that contention, however, at least at Wimbledon.

"A mathematician has worked out that men competing at Wimbledon play twice as much tennis as the women and in some years three times as much," he said.

Raimey, Reed Leading Battle For Conference Rushing Crowns

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For a guy whose knees were suspect at the start of the season, Dave Raimey has been getting around pretty well.

The sprawling Toronto Argonaut fullback went through a certain amount of pre-season torment and during the Eastern Football Conference club's opening game against Ottawa seemed destined for a repeat performance.

Raimey, 29, maintained throughout his ordeal he would be just as effective once the recuperative period was over. How he bridged the gap has the figures to confirm his recovery.

After six games he tops the EFC in rushing with 423 yards on 88 carries for a 4.8 average. He leads his running mate, Bill Symons, by 91 yards in Canadian football's statistical season this week.

Symons, however, has carried 81 times for a 4.63 average.

Only EFC rushers within hailing distance of Raimey's average are Ed Shuttleworth of Hamilton Tiger-Cats with 7.2 (268 yards on 37 carries) and Gary Wood, Ottawa Rough Riders' quarterback with 7.1 (249 yards on 35 carries).

In the Western Conference, Saskatchewan's George Reed continues as the country's top rusher. The Roughrider fullback, en route to his seventh straight 1,000-plus rushing year, has 1,005-plus yardage, has carried 154 times for 548 yards and a 4.4 average.

Jim Trenton of British Columbia Lions has a 5.5 average, ranking the ball-400 yards in 88 tries.

B.C.'s placekicking specialist, Ted Gerela, is the CFL scoring leader with 61 points. He leads another WFC Kicker, Jack Abendschan of Saskatchewan, by nine points.

In the EFC, Ottawa's Ivan MacMillan, 31, of Alexandria, Ont., is the conference scoring leader for the second straight week with 28 points.

But he's getting pressure from team-mate Hugh Oldham, defending champion Tommy Joe Coffey of Hamilton and Symons. Each has 24 points.

Jim Thorpe of the Argos has a big lead in the East's pass-catching department with 32, followed by Oldham with 22 and Hamilton's Dave Fleming with 19. Big Herman Harrison of Calgary Stampeders leads the WFC pass receivers with 36, one more than Edmonton Eskimos' Terry Swan.

Wood, the former National Football League star who was expected to take several games to adjust to the Canadian field, has taken an early season lead among Eastern passers.

The Ottawa gridder has thrown 141 times and completed 76 for 1,324 yards. Another first-year man, Toronto's quarterback Don Jonas, is in the runner-up spot with 81 completions in 119 attempts for 1,058 yards.

Jerry Keeling of the Stampeders has established himself as the passing quarterback in the West. He has tried 221 aerials, completed 113, and moved the ball 1,579 yards in the air. Another veteran, Ron Lancaster of Saskatchewan, has covered 1,597 yards off 36 completions.

TORONTO (CP) — A chestnut-colored colt by Buckpasser was sold for, $180,000 Tuesday night to millionaire Charles Engelhard of Far Hills, N.J. It was the largest sum ever paid for a Canadian-bred yearling and came on the opening night of the Canadian Thoroughbred Horse Society summer yearling sales that end Friday. The colt, bred by E. P. Taylor's Windfields Farm of Toronto, is out of Northern Queen, a winner of the Canadian Oaks and a daughter of Nordic. The sales opened with reserve bids on 64 colts and fillies. Remainder of the 305 yearlings will be auctioned off during the next three nights. Twenty-seven yearlings went Tuesday night for a total $626,700, averaging $23,285. Last year's first-night sales totalled $600,000 and averaged $27,238.

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Western Football Conference announced Tuesday the acquisition of Gary Lane, a four-year veteran of the National Football League. Lane, 27, a six-foot-one, 215-pound quarterback, played three years with Cleveland Browns. He was traded to New York Giants during the 1978 season and this year went to Los Angeles Rams. Lane, a graduate of University of Missouri, was obtained by Roughriders in a trade that transferred playing rights of Wally Dempsey, former Saskatchewan linebacker, to British Columbia Lions.

London Bids For CFL Team

TORONTO (CP) — A London, Ont. group headed by Bob Harris, a land developer, made its first official bid Tuesday to obtain a franchise in the Canadian Football League.

The bid came in the form of a letter of intent read at the regular meeting here of the Eastern Football Conference. The letter, signed by Harris, who also is president of London Lords in the senior Ontario Rugby Football Union, requested details of procedure for final application, and other information for entering the league.

The meeting, attended by representatives of all four EFC teams, authorized CFL Commissioner John Gardner to answer the letter and to obtain more specific details about the London application.

The Harris group announced a week ago that it would seek a CFL franchise for the 1979 season. Their plans call for construction of a new stadium with a seating capacity of 30,000 costing $5 million.

Gardner said last week that the most possible date a decision could be made on a London franchise would be next February at the full CFL meeting.

Artist on Duty

Stuart Wilson, associate professor of architecture at McGill University, puts the final touches to an architectural watercolor of downtown Belleville. Together with 30 students, he and Gentille Tondino, artist and life drawing instructor at McGill, are viewing the city's architecture during a 10-day visit. "We picked Belleville because of the wide range of things we are interested in. We had to pick a place with a chance to express ourselves visually," he explained.

Clapham Wins Kinsmen's Draw

PICTON (Staff) — A $1,000 sweepstake draw sponsored by the Picton Kinsmen was won yesterday by Picton building contractor Harry Clapham. Organized by the service club in July the cash draw offered three prizes, the runner-up a $200 bonus was Mrs. William Sanders, Wellington. Third prize, valued at $50, was Donald Johnson of Picton. The draw was made yesterday by Mayor H. J. McFarland at Prince Edward Yacht Club.

Chairman of the sweepstakes, Sheldon Whitehead, noted that 1,100 tickets of the 2,000 printed were sold in the first campaign. Several Kinsmen felt that the cash draw, behind by previous other fund raising programs such as bingos, probably would not be repeated. Club members remarked that tickets had been left on sale in stores throughout Prince Edward County but very little "on the street" selling had been used to push the draw.

A highlight of "drawing for dollars" was a $100, donation to the Picton Kinsmen Club made by Mayor McFarland. He was warmly thanked by club president Ron MacDonald and given a copy of The Cross and the Square, a book relating the history of the Kinsmen Club during the past 50 years.

Prizewinner Harry Clapham also donated $100, of his cheque to the service club. He added that the balance of the money would be used for a family holiday this winter.

More People Visit Parks

PICTON (Staff) — Small groups of holidayers visited Prince Edward's four provincial parks last weekend to say goodbye to the summer. Parks superintendent Robert Davison reported that approximately 15,000 persons swarm and sauntered at Outlet Park last week. Sandbanks Park recorded a week's attendance of 5,000 with 2,000 vacationers while North Beach Park attracted 1,720 visitors.

Although the campsites at Outlet Park were not filled on Labor Day weekend the popular vacation spot this summer has recorded a marked increase in campers and visitors. Last year 318,676 tourists and local residents enjoyed park facilities compared with 322,043 holidayers this year. Sandbanks Park reported a similar growth in the number of vacationers visiting the dunes. Figures for 1969 showed that 57,319 persons stopped at the park while this summer 96,727 attendance are recorded. North Beach Park also has become a favorite summer place, this year reporting 80,068 visitors compared with 67,344 last season.

The park season in Prince Edward County officially closes September 30 when crisp fall days make it impractical to relax on the beach.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Many Suffering From Anxieties

Heart disease is the great killer. You would think that most of my mail would be from readers who suffer from heart disease. But many weeks, questions about the heart are topped by those asked by others who are scared of the anxiety sufferers.

This is not surprising. As Dr. William Menninger has said: "No one, no matter how calm and complacent, is immune to psychosomatic effects if the emotional strains get tough enough."

Here is a letter of advice for anxious patients, by one who has known the agonies of anxiety.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My heart aches for the girl who wrote you recently how much she was suffering from anxiety. Perhaps you can pass on these suggestions to her:

1. Put away tranquilizers. They are a dizzy drug. Mild lethargic and can become a chronic crutch. They are not for you.

2. Be sure your sugar count is right, enough and worry often trigger your glands (adrenals and pancreas) into upsetting the sugar balance in your blood.

3. Become involved in something interesting and worthwhile. Volunteer to help in a pilot. When you see people really sick, you not only help them, but not feel so miserable yourself as you realize others can be sicker. Help someone who is old or alone. Make recordings for the blind. Read good books.

4. Pray. Set aside a quiet moment each day to think things over and ask for help. Say the 23rd Psalm to yourself and think of what it means.

5. Don't stop going places even if you are scared. Sit in the aisle seat or near the door so you can leave in a hurry if you wish. The sooner you become the boss over this "enemy" of yours, the better you will feel.

It can be done. Setbacks will occur, but always come out punching. Anything worthwhile is worth fighting for. You have four good reasons (according to your letter in Dr. Steincrohn's column) — your husband and three boys.

6. Ask yourself what you are afraid of. When you have these awful anxiety attacks you think you are going to die. But you haven't, have you? So make up your mind to keep fighting. You are too wrapped up and concerned about you and your feelings and your breathing, etc.

7. If you are in a car and bothered, stick your head out of the window with the wind blowing in your face. If you get dizzy while shopping, chances are you are overbreathing (hyperventilation,) so hold your breath and let it out slowly.

I've tried all these things. They have helped me. Perhaps they will bring you comfort, too. — Mrs. G.

COMMENT: I agree with all these excellent suggestions except one. Tranquilizers do not necessarily become permanent crutches. They are available, during the stress of anxiety, in helping the patient.

Too many patients refuse to take "dope" (which they call tranquilizers or sleeping pills) when prescribed by their doctors. Crutches are necessary when nerves are temporarily "fractured."

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have an irregular heart beat. My doctor wants me to take quinidine. Is it dangerous? — Mrs. D.

Comment: It is commonly prescribed in heart irregularities. Under a doctor's supervision, I don't see why it should be dangerous. It is more hazardous, for example, to allow such a heart irregularity as auricular fibrillation to go untreated.

Red Forces In Vietnam On Move

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces have stepped up their attacks in the northern sector of South Vietnam, and the South Vietnamese commander for the area said today that up to 15 North Vietnamese regiments are waiting for a chance to advance into the populous coastal lowlands.

The attacks indicated some North Vietnamese units already have pushed out from the mountains toward the populated region.

The South Vietnamese commander of the 1st Military Region, Lt. Gen. Hoang Xuan Lam, said up to 15 North Vietnamese regiments have been spotted in the sector waiting for opportunities to advance into the 200-mile stretch of coastal lowlands running from the demilitarized zone southward past Quang Ngai City.

Such a force would total more than 45,000 men at full strength, intelligence estimated, but informed sources said it is unlikely that all these regiments would be at full strength.

In Cambodia, the biggest government offensive of the war there, a drive to lift the siege of Kompong Thom, was reported stalled by cuts in the road to the provincial capital 80 miles north of Phnom Penh.

The government force left Skoun, about 30 miles south of Kompong Thom, on Monday, and was reported to have advanced only about six miles by today.

The Cambodian command also reported that a Communist battalion attacked a unit of Cambodian paratroops Tuesday between Siem Rep and the Siem Reap airport, in northwest Cambodia near the Angkor Wat ruins. A spokesman said nine paratroops and nine Communists were killed.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Two Standards for Child

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

(During his vacation, we are reprinting selections from Mr. Harris' latest collection of columns in book form Leaving the Surface.)

We're all aware of the double standard about sex, but few are aware of the even more pervasive double standard about children. I thought of this the other day, while listening to a man talking about the "shiftless" young people in the slums.

This man, I happened to know, has a son who is lazy and not overly bright. Yet he has a responsible and well-paying job with a firm owned by a friend of his father's. The lad was about to flunk out of school, and was given another chance by the summer. He finally got his diploma from a third-rate prep school and managed to enter a fourth-rate college, where he barely squeaked through. He has had all the advantages a young person could have — in parents, home environment, counseling, financial support, special schools and camps and money. Yet, with all this help, his job is still largely a matter of nepotism. Left to himself, he would sink.

Now this is unfortunate, but no disgrace. He is simply not a very energetic or mentally gifted person. But his deficiencies are not being camouflaged by his protective environment.

While this is an extreme example, it is by no means an unusual case of what happens among the more affluent, when their sons find it difficult to cope with the competitive world. Everything possible is done to lift them up to the level of the family's expectations.

But we have a double standard about other people's children — especially if they come from the disadvantaged classes. If they lack parental supervision, have a poor home environment, go to consuming, inferior schools, and not much motivation for success — we still expect them to make it on their own, or we condemn them for "shiftlessness."

If the children of the privileged were thrown into the same cultural cesspool, there is no earthly reason to believe they would do any better; in fact, even with their advantages, many still find it hard to make good marks and meet the world head-on. It is a tough race today, even with all the help available.

What is remarkable about the slums is not that so many fail, but that so many rise. That even a minority is able to surmount the nearly-killing environment is a tribute to human tenacity and courage and talent. The ones who make it have to be twice as good as anyone else; and how many of our children could we say that of?

Bedside Manner -- Political Style

Dr. Richard Potter, MPP Quinte, is treated to bedside manner, Ontario cabinet style, by Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, after belated arrival at Tory Tea event yesterday. Four cabinet ministers, scheduled to participate, were stalled in Toronto by aircraft problems, arriving more than two hours late. However, they were in time to discuss public affairs with citizenry and Dr. Potter . . . confined to home with back ailment. (For details, see Page 3.)

Little Chance Is Seen Of U.S. Using Force

WASHINGTON (AP) — High-level Nixon administration officials say privately there is almost no chance the United States will use military force to free airline passengers held hostage by Arab guerrillas.

But with new developments almost hourly, officials say the administration is considering every line of approach and closing the door on none in an attempt to gain the release of the more than 300 hostages, including several Americans.

The White House announced six air force C-130 transports carrying medical teams have been dispatched to an allied base in Turkey, near the Syrian border and about 70 minutes' flying time from the Jordanian desert where three hijacked jets and the hostages are being held.

The move was described as a precaution in case the hostages can be removed.

White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler refused to discuss whether the United States is moving other military equipment or troops nearer the Jordanian desert airstrip.

The only U.S. forces in the immediate area are 1,800 marines with the 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean, and a 1,000-man airborne brigade in West Germany.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A storm centre now over central Lake Superior will move rapidly northeast across northern Ontario today. Most of southern Ontario is clear with the exception of a few fog patches. Cloud will however spread east ahead of the cold front and thunderstorm activity is expected with its passage is most localities. Temperatures south of the front will reach near 80 in the warm air in some spots but cloud will keep most readings in the 70s.

Hospitalization Premiums Stable

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton said Tuesday there will be no increase in hospital insurance premiums for at least one year, despite a rapid increase in hospital costs.

Mr. MacNaughton was commenting on a survey which showed that bed costs at some Toronto hospitals had more than doubled in the past five years.

The delay in any increases was made possible, Mr. MacNaughton said, by a $51 million provincial budget surplus.

The survey showed daily standard bed rates in Toronto had increased to as much as $87 from $30.50 in 1965.

Broken Sewer Mended

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

"Raw sewage is no longer flowing into the Moira River."

This announcement was made today by Don Little, OWRC sewage treatment plant supervisor, following a 18 a.m. test run on the repaired sewage main on St. Paul Street.

"We are now completely operational again," confirmed Mr. Little.

City workmen, who were called in by the OWRC on Tuesday, completed placement of a band around an elbow break on the 18-inch pipe this morning.

Work began late Tuesday afternoon to locate the break which occurred Friday. When-ever workmen descended to the bottom of the street hole, the OWRC was forced to divert 125,000 gallons of raw sewage per hour into the Moira River.

With the test run completed and the repairs approved, there had been a total of approximately 16 hours of bypass pumping into the river.

This brings the total of effluent pumped into the river to approximately 2,000,000 gallons since bypassing was first made operational late Tuesday.

City workers located the break at 5.15 p.m. yesterday, eight hours after resuming intensified digging at the site. Work again resumed this morning at 6 a.m., when the flow of sewage was again diverted into the river.

Installation of the pipe strap took place three hours later.

Mr. Little earlier this morning expressed his opinion that the repairs might not be completed until this afternoon but work moved ahead at a faster rate than expected.

Further work will continu. until tonight, with workmen re closing the repaired pipe in a cast of concrete. But the flow of sewage will continue to be sewage plant while this addi-tional work is done.

Toronto officers of the OWRC yesterday sent Gerry McKenny of the Kingston sanitary engineering department to investigate causes and effects of the line break.

Plane Crisis Is Not Solved

AMMAN, Jordan (CP)— The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine today extended by 72 hours its deadline for the release of seven Arab guerrillas held in Europe.

The decision to extend the ultimatum to 2 a.m. GMT Sunday (10 p.m. EDT Saturday) was made at a meeting of the Front's high command Wednesday night, and a Red Cross mission negotiating the release of three hijacked planes and about 280 passengers was informed.

The original 72-hour ultimatum set after the guerrillas hijacked two airliners to a desert airstrip in Jordan Sunday was scheduled to expire at 2 a.m. GMT today (10 p.m. EDT Wednesday).

An indefinite extension was announced Wednesday night after a third airliner, a British Overseas Always VC-10, was hijacked to the airstrip Wednesday.

The guerrillas released 21 Arabs and also freed a British Jew thought to be one of the Arab passengers. Jordanian army buses took these freed to the Intercontinental Hotel in Amman.

A Front spokesman said that in extending the ultimatum pe-

Big Tanker Abandoned Off Oman

LONDON (Reuters) — The crew of the giant 100,000-ton tanker Aquarius was reported to have abandoned ship today after a collision with a Russian vessel off the coast of Muscat and Oman.

A distress signal from the Russian ship, the 3,547-ton Svetlogorsk, asked all ships in the area to assist her, Lloyds shipping agents said.

The reports said the Liberian-registered vessel was on fire and sinking. At least one seaman is missing.

An RAF patrol plane reported that the Russian ship had suffered extensive damage.

Amman Battle Rages

AMMAN (CP) — Heavy casualties were feared in the Jordanian Arab guerrilla and the Jordanian army battled through the night despite appeals for a ceasefire from both sides.

Guerrillas in the Jordanian capital said the fighting centred on the Amman airport, the Jebel Hussein Citadel, the royal palaces and other sections of the city. They said many houses were destroyed.

The guerrillas said soldiers in 10 scout cars attacked the headquarters of the Popular Democratic Front, a radical guerrilla organization, but that they were repulsed and four of the cars were destroyed.

Exploding rockets and bursts of machine-gun fire were clearly heard early today in Jebel Amman, where most government departments and diplomatic missions are situated.

The new fighting kept Amman in a state of tension and gave it an air of a besieged city as the bitter army-guerrilla crisis dragged the country into chaos.

The city was almost completely paralyzed with no stores open and no taxis on the streets.

In parts of the capital where the guerrillas predominate—and they seemed to be everywhere —rocks, rubbish and barbed wire blocked streets.

Telephones in the city were still working but telephone links between some Jordanian towns and between Amman and the outside world were cut.

Government's Experts Agree

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Canadian International Paper Company could install one of the biggest industrial operations in Quinte history without fears of environmental damage, company officials said last night.

The assurance was given community leaders at a Belleville meeting called by CIP to outline pollution control safeguards which would be built into proposed giant kraft mill operation . . . a briefing which, for the first time, also revealed the rich potential of the scheme for the Quinte economy.

Provincial government officials at the meeting reinforced CIP claims that satisfactory pollution control standards would be met before any decision to operate is confirmed.

No decision has yet been taken on the project — studies of which link the kraft mill, possibly on Prince Edward County's Lake Ontario shoreline, to a huge pulpwood supply operation in the Bancroft area.

And no decision will be taken before 1971, the CIP executives emphasized.

But, if the decision is positive, CIP will build a mill operation so technologically armed with air and water pollution safeguards it will set a model for the pulp and paper industry, the meeting was told.

"If it does go ahead, you will be sure we build an ultra-modern plant that will contribute to the economy of the area, without sacrificing quality of air and water environment," said L. H. Wittenberg, assistant operations vice - president.

CIP, he said will "preserve the scenic and recreational value" of Lake Ontario.

The meeting, called by the company after the mill proposal, sparked local anti - pollution reaction, drew close to 30 local, and provincial government representatives, business and community organization spokesmen to the Sun Valley Motor Inn.

The session also saw the local representatives cross examine a five - man panel of top company executives, sent to Belleville to outline the proposed scheme and dispel what one of them called "several misconceptions" about the CIP project.

The date which emerged during the two - hour meeting gave this outline of the scheme's local economic potential:

The total operation would directly create 1,600 new jobs — 775 at the kraft mill, 700 in woodcutting in the Bancroft area and 75 at a chipping mill near Bancroft.

Payroll at the kraft mill would run to an annual $3 million — with an average wage of about $10,000. The Bancroft-area operations would pay out about $7 million a year.

The project would create a demand for supporting industries and services that could employ anywhere from 1,800 to 2,000.

But the bulk of last night's meeting was given over to detailing CIP assurances that environmental hazards of the operation would be kept under control.

Officials from the Ontario Water Resources Commission and the Air Management Branch of the energy and resources department also told the meeting that CIP must meet provincial government anti - pollution standards before being allowed to go ahead. Frequent environmental monitoring would be made to ensure continued efficient operation of pollution safety equipment.

The CIP executives reiterated that much technological progress divides plants built in the past and modern mill operations.

British Plane Hijacked

Map shows the route of a British Overseas Airways Corp. VC10 jet plane that was hijacked Wednesday shortly after departing from Bahrain, an island in the Persian Gulf. The plane landed at the desert airfield held by the guerrillas near Amman, Jordan. Two jets, one belonging to TWA and the other to Swissair, are still being held at the desert strip, with part of the passengers being kept as hostages.

Education Minister Admits Some Counties Have Edge

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The man who fathered the concept of equality of educational opportunity for all Ontario school children now admits that some are more equal than others.

William Davis, Ontario's minister of education said yesterday that some method must be worked out to bring the poorer counties up to the level of the wealthier ones, who entered the county boom period with higher standards in buildings, equipment and courses.

This year, Mr. Davis' department limited the increase in educational spending to 15 per cent, or more than in 1971. This was more than adequate for those counties near metropolitan centres that already had modern, highly sophisticated school systems.

But this year's controversial grant formula, under fierce criticism from county boards in predominately rural areas such as Hastings, may be maintained for another year, he indicated.

"Development of a radical base," as Mr. Davis put it, may have to wait for a year or more, but he denies that Hastings and similar counties were "short shrift by" in the past two years.

"Looking across the province, Hastings is not penalized," he insisted.

The committee held the line in 1970 spending as Hastings did, and were limited by the same 15 per cent ceiling that is faced.

"On balance, we're quite content with the progress of the county board system," he indicated. "But of course, there is still a lot to be done."

Mr. Davis denied that the increase in educational spending might be limited to next year in two or three per cent.

Dr. J. R. McCarthy of the planning branch indicated last week that falling birth rates and levelling enrolments in elementary schools would reduce the annual increment for education to two to three per cent from the 10 to 15 per cent experienced over the last two years.

The minister agreed that costs have been going down, on a provincial average, for the last two years, but the two to three per cent annual increments in spending won't be reached until some time in the future.

"I don't think so," he replied, when asked if the Hastings planners indicated a narrow government tightening of the purse strings during the next few years.

His prediction of a drop in the birth rate will put the elementary schools in 1975 to 77, but in many areas, including Hastings, the increase, if agreed, this would be offset by a population increase due to movement of people into the area.

The problems facing educators in Ontario are shared by others throughout North America, Mr. Davis said.

"The biggest issue, on a continent-wide basis, is finance, followed by the issue of flexibility — who will be responsible for the system," he said.

"People fail to remember that in Ontario the educational spending has increased by 10 to 15 per cent each year" he added. "The entire fabric of Ontario would have interrupted by that much in 1969 and 1970, without the formation of county boards of education."

Neither was any action taken on a Bruce county resolution asking that a uniform speed of 60 miles per hour be set on all two - lane highways in Ontario built to DHO standards.

Reeve Reeve Burton Morton said the present variation of speed limits was confusing, especially to tourists.

From his own home to Highway 401, a distance of only 15 miles, Reeve Morton said that speed limits ranging from 30 to 70 miles per hour were posted.

Council turned the resolution down on the grounds that it would be left to the discretion of the police to enforce.

Leak Located

City workmen under contract with the OWRC laid bare the ruptured section of sewer force line on St. Paul Street at 5:15 p.m. yesterday. Diversion of sewer wastes from this point resulted in approximately 2,000,000 gallons of sewage flowing into the Moira River. Repairs were affected earlier this morning and at 10 a.m. the regular flow into the sewage treatment plant was resumed.

Resolutions Considered By County Councillors

Hastings county council would like to see an increased deposit on returnable bottles to assure their return.

Yesterday council members concurred in a county of Lennox resolution which asked that such deposits be increased as a means of reducing the littering of streets, parks and beaches, caused by broken bottles.

If the deposit was increased, the resolution claims it would encourage the return of bottles rather than have them carelessly discarded.

The county fathers also concurred in a county of Essex resolution asking that the provincial government be petitioned to consider providing the same provincial aid to those counties and local governments that are providing the same services being subsidized in the regional municipal grants bill.

No action was taken however on a Victoria county resolution asking that the welfare bounty be increased by $8. or on a Perth county resolution asking that county board of education be abolished and return to the former public school system, except that board members be elected, not appointed.

Labor's Role Growing In Community Affairs

Bread and butter aren't the only concerns of modern, organized labor.

New trends are cooking — as an emerging event in the Quinte district indicates.

Just five weeks from now, a day-long seminar on pollution is being planned for Loyalist College and the Quinte Labor Council.

Part of a province-wide, one-day program, it will be the first event of its kind in the Quinte area.

But its significance is even broader than its theme.

It emphasizes new directions being taken by organized labor — a growing involvement with community problems not specifically tied to the traditional industrial role of labor.

It's a trend confirmed by a ranking Ontario labor administrator, Henry Weisbach, director of education for labor councils for the Ontario Federation of Labor.

Mr. Weisbach, in Belleville this week to confer with Loyalist officials on the pollution seminar, indicated a broad - and-butter issues are not now the only interests of industrial society now is being extended on a broader social front.

Labor has been involved with various community - oriented projects.

"We have now established a straightforward policy where we feel it's not only our responsibility to help people who are organized, but help those who are not in a position to help themselves," says Mr. Weisbach.

Labor always was concerned with a wide-range of social issues, says Mr. Weisbach. The difference now is a shift of emphasis in seeking action.

Now, labor increasingly is working in co-operation with other community groups toward common goals.

It's not a departure from standard pursuits of organized labor, but a "branching out into other activities".

These could include poverty and housing, says Mr. Weisbach.

The current Ontario - wide pollution seminar is an example of the trend, he says.

"It's the first time that we have a concerted effort between the community groups and the labor movement. And we hope this will lead to community action with all groups."

Pollution, however, is an environmental concern.

"We feel it's a very important factor," says the labor administrator. "Because if we don't do anything about pollution now, 30 years from now we won't have a thing to worry about."

The seminar, set for Oct. 17, is being deliberately shaped to emphasize the importance of individual civic responsibility in the anti-pollution crusade.

Its organizers are aiming to involve a cross-section of citizens from the 74 municipalities in the four-county region served by Loyalist.

Hopefully, after the seminar these participants would return to their local communities more aware of a personal responsibility for anti-pollution action.

This emphasis is important, organizers feel, since pollution problems vary in different areas and solutions should be locally-oriented.

The Quinte Labor Council and Loyalist officials have been working more than six weeks to evolve a seminar program and details are expected to be finally approved in the near future.

Comment Refused On Superintendent

Ontario's education minister flatly refused yesterday to comment on the tangled affairs of Hastings and Prince Edward counties Roman Catholic Separate School Board.

"I don't want to talk about that," he said, when asked about the suspension of the separate school superintendent, F. B. Allore last May 8.

Reason for the action, precedent - setting in Ontario, was never made public by the board.

However, under provincial legislation, a school board cannot dismiss an official with inspector's papers. It can suspend, but the superintendent's employment cannot be terminated without the approval of the department of education.

No decision on Mr. Allore's position has come from the Ontario department of education.

Since May 8, the local separate school board has continued to pay the superintendent's salary of about $600 a week.

Planning Area Board Members Are Selected

Formation of the Hastings County Planning Area as recommended by Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, is a step nearer reality as a result of action taken yesterday by county council.

At the session, council approved the report of the county planning and industrial committee recommending appointment of nine members to the planning area board.

Board members will be William Shannon, Earl Hawley, Mack Douglas, Delmont Card, George Lyons, Cecil Woods and Warden John Wilkes — with Gordon Wilman and Donald Rodgers who will represent the four county municipalities of Stirling, Frankford, Sidney and Thurlow in the proposed Planning Area.

Planning Committee chairman William Shannon told council that with approval of his report and subsequent passing of a bylaw establishing a planning board, it was hoped to get on with the work as necessary in the area.

The question now before the committee, Reeve Lyons said, was whether it should hire (a) planning consultants (b) staff only or (c) a combination of consultants and staff.

"The committee has mixed views on this matter and has decided to ask the advice of the department of municipal affairs," Mr. Shannon said.

The proposed board members would act only for the balance of 1972, following which new members would be named for 1971.

Quinte Sea Cadets Second in Ontario

The Quinte Royal Canadian Sea Cadets Corps has placed second in competition among Gilfarlo corps following inspection during the summer, it was announced this morning.

Belleville's cadets received 94.4 points out of a possible 100 to stand in second place behind the Sudbury cadets who received 97.3.

The competition is judged on the basis of a corps inspection, a sailpast, cadet activities and the condition of their headquarters and craft.

Boy Hurt By Truck

TRENTON (Staff) — A five-year-old Trenton boy received head lacerations and multiple bruises yesterday when struck by a telephone service truck.

Peter Rolf of 44 Marmora St., walked onto the street into the path of the vehicle driven by John Cooper, 61, of Belleville. Charges have not been laid against the driver.

Traffic was unusually heavy at 4.55 p.m. when the accident occurred, due to closing of the old Dundas St. bridge late in the afternoon.

With bottlenecks lining the route across the MacDonald Bridge to the Memorial Hospital, the Rolf boy did not arrive there for treatment until 5:30. He was treated and released.

flod at the request of the International Red Cross, the Front holds Britain, the United States and other countries concerned responsible for determining the fate of the three detained planes and their passengers.

The Front in giving the extension wished to provide more chance for the concerned parties to act responsibly, he said.

Britain and the United States should understand that their pressure and activities will not serve the interests of the passengers and the three planes, he added.

The spokesman said the Front leaders and the Red Cross mission were expected to meet today, but added there will be no further extensions of the ultimatum.

The passengers went through an agonizingly tense and cramped night in the three blacked airliners in the Jordanian desert, apparently unaware their captors had granted them a stay of execution.

For 197 captives aboard a Swissair DC-8 and a Pan World Airlines Boeing 707, it was an ordeal they already have gone through for three previous nights.

With two of the countries ready to meet the guerrilla demands—Switzerland in principle and West Germany without any pre-conditions—only Britain's continued detention of Arab girl guerrilla Leila Khaled apparently stands in the way of a negotiated settlement for the release of the European and American on board the planes.

It was to force Britain to comply that the Popular Front seized the VC-10 and forced it down in the Jordanian desert, after a stop to refuel at Beirut.

Closing of Trenton Bridge Causes Massive Traffic Jam

By KEN SMITH
(Staff Reporter)

TRENTON — For block after block, vehicular traffic was at a standstill on Trenton's principal streets yesterday afternoon.

Rows of cars and trucks piled up on both sides of the Trent as all crosstown traffic was forced to move by way of the MacDonald Bridge.

The old Dundas St. bridge was blocked off for two full hours from 4 to 6 p.m. because of sewer construction on Dundas East in front of the Municipal Offices.

The Dundas route is still the most popular east - west route and its closure brought chaos.

On Marmora Street, Sidney, Front, Division and Dixon Drive the situation was the same — nothing moved.

Red, yellow, green, red, yellow, green - the lights changed again and again as the traffic stood still. Edging forward a few inches became a sensation.

Everyone in town seemed to be converging on the new high - level viaduct over the Trent - converging with little success.

Town Police were not on hand to direct the traffic. Although police were aware of the situation - in part because of telephone complaints - no officers were available to direct the no - rush 'rush hour'. It was an unusually busy day in provincial court and the men were required there.

Although closure of Dundas bridge was advertised, it still took much of the town by surprise. Cars and trucks still moved down the Gilmour Hill, heading for the old silver crossing, only to be turned back, back to a bottleneck.

Certain questions were being asked by those caught up in the chaotic situation.

How are the fire trucks going to get across the river in a disaster? What are they going to do if there is a bank robbery over here and the police are over there? What if somebody has to go to hospital in a hurry.

One lad, Peter Rolf of Marmora St., did have to go to hospital following an accident in which he was hit by a truck near his home. However, his injuries were not serious.

Dundas St. was scheduled to be stopped up again today, from 7 a.m. through to 6 p.m. as work crews replace sanitary sewers so old they have collapsed.

Today workers are digging up the area immediately to the east of the Dundas bridge. Ontario and Bay Streets will also receive new sanitary and storm sewers in the project that already sees a massive crater gouged into Dundas East in front of the Municipal Office Building.

The detour situation is disrupting Trenton life, adding as much as an hour to the getting - home - time of hundreds of citizens.

Historic Automobile A Belleville Visitor

A 64 - year - old Renault, one of the historic "taxis of the Marne" which rushed Allied troops to the front during the closing months of World War I has been a drawing card in Belleville for the past two days.

The old French taxi, built back in 1906, is part of the Renault Caravan which Tuesday and Wednesday marked the official opening of George Parkhurst Motors Ltd., as Renault dealers for the Belleville area.

All Renault models including the sport version 15-1300 "Sierra" are on display at the dealer location.

The Renault caravan gives the history of the French auto manufacturing firm in capsule form. Louis Renault, the firm's founder, built his first car in 1898, and developed his first propeller shaft, driven cars as compared to the chain drive previously used.

For instance, the old 1906 taxi has a three gear transmission, propeller shaft and centre drive differential, the same as most modern - day vehicles.

Today, outlines of vehicles later, Renault has gone the complete circle and has dispensed with the normal propeller shaft drive concept in its familiar mid - rear drive front wheel, front drive and rear engine either back or front wheel drive picks.

Renault cars are assembled at St. Bruno - south - of Montreal, Prices per its various models range from $3,495 to $7,895, representing the manufacturer's suggestions for the 1971 models.

Ministers Delayed But Party Goes On

Today; Dr. Richard Potter says he may retain someone to read his teacup before staging his next public tea party.

But it's doubtful if even a seer could have forestalled the last - minute dilemma that caused the Quinte MPP to make the quip in the wake of yesterday's events.

Sept. 9 was the day Dr. Potter set aside for opening his home to the public for tea and political confrontations with four Ontario cabinet ministers.

The public turned up on time — more than an estimated 400 flocking to the Potter residence on the Massassaga Road. As scheduled, they started having tea at 2 p.m. Only the cabinet ministers were missing, stalled in Toronto by a technical breakdown.

Originally, the four ministers—Education Minister William Davis, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Economics and Financial Affairs Minister Bert Lawrence and Provincial Secretary Robert Welch — had geared themselves to arrive in good time.

As planned, they boarded an aircraft at Toronto International Airport to fly to Belleville. Then, just before take-off the pilot detected engine problems.

The ministers were forced to wait while an alternate aircraft was found, and plans, rapidly changed to permit a landing at CFB Trenton.

It all took time and finally the ministers did arrive — about 4.40 p.m., more than a half-hour after the scheduled end of the tea party.

However, there was still time—and guests—remaining for political confrontations.

As planned, all four ministers mired in with the guests, listening to and answering criticism of provincial government policies, explaining legislation and taking in nuggets of information.

"We had some very good questions — some answers that, hopefully, will explain things anyway," remarked Mr. Davis later.

Dr. Potter himself could not directly participate in the events, since he was temporarily confined to the home with a back ailment, but chatted with a steady stream of visitors through the afternoon.

"Everything turned out pretty well — and I was certainly pleased with the number of people who came here," he said.

Education Cost High at Loyalist

Cost of educating a student at Loyalist College is higher than at most of Ontario's other 19 community colleges.

"Loyalist is operating with something less than an economical base in regard to numbers," said education minister William Davis yesterday.

But, he told supporters at Dr. R. Potter's meet-the-ministers tea, the per student cost will eventually be reduced to the provincial average as enrolment increases.

The minister noted that the student-staff ratio at Loyalist is 4 to 1 in answer to a suggestion this was the case.

"The ratio is higher than 4 to 1," Mr. Davis said. "You are forgetting the night school extension and Manpower included in the total, the rafter programs. When they are tin rises."

Mr. Davis classed Loyalist as a "developing college".

"We had to decide whether or not to have a college here to local needs, when the student enrolment initially would be lower than at other places," he said.

"If we restricted the number of courses, the result would be a narrow educational base. This in the long run would discourage student enrolment. We had to accept higher costs in the first five or six years of operation in order to have a viable operation in the long term, in the interests of the students."

(Loyalist is now in its fourth year of operation.)

"Economy of scale operates in education too," Mr. Davis said. "Certain sized institutions operate more economically than others. The student-teacher ratio in some courses at Loyalist is low, but the alternative is local people having to some other institution."

Mr. Davis said he "doubted that Loyalist would ever become a degree-granting institution".

The degree syndrome is not relevant to society today," he stated.

College officials said today that "the minister had adequately covered" the subject by pointing not that to provide a college for the Quinte district, initially student-body would be higher than in established large colleges in metropolitan centres, but not out of line with other smaller community colleges in areas of similar populations.

"Mr. Davis indicated his awareness and appreciation of this when he commented that all colleges were expected to grow to the point where any cost disparity would disappear through increased enrolment," the statement continued.

The college spokesman said enrolment will be higher this year than last. With registrations not yet completed, officials expect the total enrolment for day, night, extension and Manpower students to reach 1,200.

The spokesman said per student cost figures were not immediately available.

Mr. Davis hedged when asked why Loyalist's board of governors' meetings are not open to public and press as it's county board of education's meetings are.

"Community colleges are totally financed from a central source and the governors are all appointed, not elected," he said.

The provincial government provides all the funds for community college operations.

The Hastings county board receives about 66 per cent of its funds from the provincial government and the remainder from local tax levies.

Six Years Added To His Life Term

BRIGHTON (Staff) — A Joyceville escapee appeared in provincial court here yesterday facing two charges of car theft and robbery.

Douglas Whitney, 30, fled from the medium security institute September 1 with two other inmates.

Last of the trio to be captured, Whitney stole a Trenton taxi Saturday after hiring it on the Wooler Road.

The taxi driven by Howard Chase, 59, of Trenton took the convict to the Brewers' Retail outlet before Whitney took over the cab and $18 in petty cash carried by the driver.

When found by OPP Const. Vermeer on a side road near Warkworth, the escapee had run out of gas and was guzzling beer in the car.

Six years were added to his lifetime sentence of prevent've detention yesterday. The convict with a long police record beginning in 1937 was described as an "habitual criminal".

Hijack Menace

What is to be done about aircraft hijackings, the political blackmail now being developed almost to a fine art by Arab commandos? The lives of innocent people are at stake and the blowing up of a Pan American jumbo jet, even though emptied of its passengers, at Cairo, is an indication that the commandos are in earnest.

Aircraft diversions to Cuba which have set the pattern in recent years pale into insignificance with the Arabs' holding of passengers for ransom for the release from jail of fellow terrorists.

Behind these activities is the Arabs' desire for liberation of their Palestine homeland. Leila Khaled, the young woman involved in an abortive attempt to hijack an Israeli jet the other day, has put it this way: "The Israelis threw us out of Palestine in 1948 (the year the Jewish nation was established), when I was only four years old. Hundreds of people were killed when the Jews came in, and we fled to Lebanon."

That of course is in the long ago, but Miss Khaled's fanaticism (she described her part in an earlier hijacking as "perfectly normal thing to do") is of the kind which among others of her generation in the Middle East, as well as in places like Northern Ireland, perpetuates old hatreds and solves absolutely nothing.

As for the mechanics of air piracy, it is clear that existing counter measures are nowhere near effective. Not surprisingly, the Israelis seem to do the best in this regard; they have security guards aboard their planes and Miss Khaled's male companion was killed by one in last Sunday's incident. The terrorists who blew up the Pan Am jumbo jet at Cairo had earlier been turned away at Amsterdam by El Al officials. Warned by the Israelis, crew members of the U.S. jet searched the men and their luggage before takeoff, but found no weapons. The Israelis seem more astute in this sphere and they obviously know an Arab and potential terrorist when they see one, particularly in a place like Amsterdam. From a photograph the men look typical of such a breed. As for the jumbo jet crew having to do the searching, this is eloquent of another flaw in security. The U.S. crew should not have had to do the work of the country involved, namely Holland.

Hijackings then pose a very grave international problem. Arming of crews may now become a necessity. Despite the indignant protests of a Palestine guerrilla spokesman in Beirut that El Al's lead in this regard is "a gross violation of international law." Screening of passengers, and especially Arab nationals, must be much more stringent. Closed-circuit television enabling the cabin crew to see the passengers might be a help; costly yes, but then aviation is now giving up in-flight movies because of their expense and because they are not universally popular. The money saved could go into the TV system. Computers could help plot the pattern of hijackings; many such incidents (and this seems to apply to a lot of untoward events) occur on weekends.

If hijacking of aircraft cannot be stopped, by these and other measures, the prospect of international aviation and the safety of the travelling public will be gravely jeopardized. As it is, air piracy is having repercussions on insurance underwriters and a representative of Lloyds of London says a review of the situation is pending.

Outside the Window

Train journeys can be as interesting or monotonous as you make them. Some areas offer more in the way of scenery than others but whatever the locale a due interest in ones surroundings can be revealing.

Not very prepossessing places. The terrain between Belleville and Montreal for example runs the whole gamut between natural, well-kept landscape and views of the St. Lawrence around Brockville and Prescott, to grim marshland, not to mention lacklustre, polluted streams and rivers and dismal, unproductive looking land.

There is the inevitable hand of man in wrecked cars, metal dump, decaying buildings around railroad stations and on a dull day like last Sunday there is an air of desolation that hangs heavy on the spirit. The sun goes down but the spectacle of the vermilion sky in decline does little to lift the oppressiveness of the outside world.

It is a capsule of our modern, polluted world that one sees outside the rail car (the interior of which may itself need a good scrub and new upholstery) and looking at some of the land one wonders how many million acres of similar terrain are going to waste across the country. This is the world the travel posters do not show.

After Ottawa's Tax Reform Retreat

Opposition Leader Stanfield Needs Another Issue

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — If you listen carefully and the wind is blowing from Parliament Hill, you might just be able to hear some of the Liberals laughing.

They are that pleased with themselves.

They think they have done in "poor Bob Stanfield," as they have taken to calling the Conservative leader.

But "poor Bob" it could turn out, has quietly outfoxed them.

Here is how . . .

In between sympathetic chuckles about "poor Bob," they are asking themselves "what ever happened to him?"

And then, even more hilariously, they are telling each other that he has gone the way of his once - big but now slowly-diminishing issue: the White Paper on Taxation.

That is, they laugh, into the discard where all non-issues go.

The White Paper, they recall in self-congratulation, was his one big chance, and only because they are too smart for him, he has muffed it.

The White Paper, even the Liberals now concede, was politically explosive.

When Finance Minister Ben Benson first triggered his tax time-bomb last winter, few of them then realized that it could tick slowly away, detonating just at the moment to blow them out of power in the next election.

The Finance Minister initially was puffing in pride of his Paper, so enchanted with what he saw as its social significance that he swore while there might be a few minor adjustments here and there, the basic principle to "redistribute income" was inviolate.

And so was almost everything else in the White Paper.

But then taxpayer howls went up from all the voters all over the country except the very poor and the very rich.

Which was just about everybody who would be casting a ballot in the next federal election — everybody except single people under $1,400 and married persons earning less than $2,800.

Business big and small was howling, too. The trades and professions were perturbed.

But it was the individual taxpayer who caused the Government enormous political grief.

When the first price the White Paper was examined the tax "relief" of which Ben Benson was so proud turned out to be not that really great.

The basic exemptions for income tax were being raised, sure, but how high?

For single people from $1,000 to $1,400 and for the married from $2,000 to $2,800.

Big deal!

But for all the others — except the very rich, the lucky minority in the $80,000-or-better bracket — it was going to be murder with the new rates.

"Poor old Ben Stanfield" put it best.

The White Paper, warned the "Quiet Man," was simply a huge tax grab disguised as "reform" by the silly Ben Benson whom he obviously regarded as a big-time confidence man.

Benson, cried Robert Stanfield in alarm, picking his words for maximum voter impact, was sackering the poor, sugaring the rich and "sacking it to everyone else."

Good politically punchy line, that.

The Government did not care for the sound of it a bit because somehow "poor old Bob" was beginning to talk like a man who gauges the taxpayers instantly understood.

To be sure that as many voters as possible could hear it and understand it, Stanfield jacked his beg and went travelling to spell it out from platforms coast to coast.

Since then, for Ben Benson it has been one long, slow retreat. And it has not been out of any new-found consideration for the overlooked taxpayer. More likely, it was that Stanfield was getting through.

He has backed off his mining tax grab, well, not all the way but far enough to show that "Bumbling Ben" Stanfield had been getting to the bottom of it.

He is backing off his initial "we are sticking to our tax guns" position.

And most of all, he has backed off on his original attempt to skim more taxes off everyone's income simply to fatten the Government's purse.

Now, he promises, he will adjust the rates so that the Government will not be grabbing a nickel more.

And everyone is raising hip-hooray. Except the Liberal ranks. The taxpayers celebrating out of relief. And the Liberals' jolly-good-fellowing themselves because as they see it, they have rid the ground out from under "poor old Bob," leaving him, with nothing to stand on.

It has not dawned on them yet that Stanfield and the taxpayers are coming out winners . . . and is that not what an Opposition is for, to fight for the taxpayers and win?

Stanfield has won the tax fight without an election.

And if he can beat the Government at this vaunted White Paper, why not on other bread-and-butter issues?

Save the Mini!

Minds with But A Single Thought

Brockville Recorder and Times

The save - the - miniskirt forces have acquired a potent ally — medical science. Well, one practitioner of the science, anyway.

If health were the only consideration, he says, the midiskirt would stay and the midi and the maxi would be outlawed.

This is the opinion of Dr. Harry J. Johnson, noted author of health books and articles and chairman of the medical board of the Life Extension Institute, the nation's oldest and largest health examination facility.

The reason the miniskirt is preferable, he says, is because it gives the body freedom of movement, which should be basic in clothing. The miniskirt also tends to promote pride in the body, and this is important in a nation where overweight is a major health problem.

Diana Ricardo in The Vancouver Sun

A lot of people spent a lot of money, a lot of time, and a lot of hard work trying to convince 2,300 visitors at Winnipeg Centennial Centre that the midi is in . . . the midi is out. The gala fashion show presented by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union tried very hard (maybe too hard) to establish their aim — the midi is the message.

They didn't succeed.

If indeed the controversy over skirt lengths is really over then why is the fashion industry working as hard, at such great expense, to convince us of the latest? Wouldn't you think it would speak for itself?

Richard Needham in The Globe and Mail

Now, the fashion, so we're told, is the midi skirt . . . and women are supposed to buy and wear them this fall. But suppose they refuse? Suppose they insist on their right to continue wearing minis and (if they can manage it) micros?

For one hope they do. I would take this stand not as one of those Playboy - type characters who drool over female flesh . . . My stand is one of principle — the right of women, and men, to buy and wear the clothing they prefer . . . Like a lot of other people, I believe that fashions are very largely determined by men who hate women, and who want women to feel and be unattractive. Certainly, the younger women to whom I have been talking think the midi will have this effect on them, make them look old and frumpy.

Letter to The Globe and Mail

I hereby take the pledge (yours, NEVER) to be caught dead or alive in the parade of ugly clothes the fashion industry is trying to pawn off on us!

As a busy mother of four, I refuse to drag around in an extra half-yard of material. My husband thinks short skirts are great. And, anyway, who wants to look like the Russian Revolution Revisited?

So I hope all the ladies who hate the new Ugly Look won't herd together behind the fashion industry. Our own men are more important. Right?

TODAY IN HISTORY

September 18, 1976 . . .

Austria signed the treaty of St. Germain with the victorious Allied powers 51 years ago today — in 1919 — and the largest land empire of Europe was formally dissolved. By the treaty the Habsburg monarchy abdicated in 1918, Galicia, Bukovina and Transylvania, Hungary and Bosnia had thrown off Austrian rule and Serbia. The huge empire gave way to a republic of less than eight million people. It was forbidden forever to rejoin Germany except by permission of the League of Nations. But there was continuing pressure for the new Austria, and Chancellor Dollfuss was assassinated in 1934.

1963—Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black nullified a sentence imposed by a lower court and ruled that the University of Mississippi must admit Negro James Meredith.

1937—More than 1,500 cases of infantile paralysis with 58 deaths were reported in Canada in an epidemic that began in June.

Arab Guerrillas Have Free Hand

Aircraft Hijackings Aimed at Middle East Chaos

WASHINGTON (CP) — Despite the growing spectre of blackmail replacing diplomacy in international conflict, the immediate gut-reaction of many observers of the current aerial hijacking drama is to prevent further bloodshed at any cost.

The thrust of what appeared to be the majority opinion was to give in to the demands of the Palestinian Arab guerrillas, ensure the safety of the passengers held aboard the two hijacked planes forced down in Jordan and then seek to prevent a recurrence of such outrages.

A minority opinion, it seems, was that it would be folly to capitulate. To do so would open the door to blackmail unlimited.

As the debate went on in the capitals of the five countries most immediately involved in the crisis—Israel, the U.S., Britain, West Germany and Switzerland—it became apparent the lack of time in which to work out a common reply was a major problem.

Switzerland immediately bowed to demands that she release from prison Palestinian guerrillas held there. As others debated, Israel reiterated that she would not yield.

U.S. officials under "intense pressure" from American Jewish groups, privately conceded that a more co-ordinated approach might have been possible had not Switzerland acted alone.

In the broader view, the hijackings—following Israel's withdrawal from peace talks until the military status quo altered in its favor—seem to have inflicted a terrible blow to the new American initiative for peace in the Middle East.

The new talks were on shaky ground from the start but these two weeks of negotiations, in the view of many observers, could quite likely prove fatal.

Aside from lack of time to work out an accord for dealing with the guerrillas, the confusion that surrounded their demands and terms and the legal status of the various countries involved—particularly Jordan, made clarity impossible.

All parties apparently agreed that any overt rescue attempt would result in guerrillas blowing up both planes. As far as the U.S. was concerned, a state department spokesman had said there were no contingency plans for action by U.S. armed forces to move to the rescue.

There are no generally agreed group rules for such terrorist activities that in the recent past have included hijacking U.S. planes to Cuba, other aircraft to foreign countries, and the kidnapping of various embassy nationals in several Latin American countries to gain the release of political prisoners.

In general, in cases involving Americans the U.S. has neither urged nor discouraged the release of such prisoners to ensure the safe return of U.S. victims.

The New York Times, which has consistently taken a hard-line pro-Israeli stance in the Middle East crisis, says:

"It is long past time for the airlines and governments of the world to declare a boycott of the Arab states, to refuse to let Arab planes land anywhere in the world and to refuse to fly non-Arab planes to those countries that do not forcefully have been made outlaws in the Arab lands."

This reflects the demands of airline pilots, but many observers suggest such punishment would have little effect on Palestinian guerrillas, who do not govern, do not operate airlines, and whose main aim is to create chaos in the Middle East.

Dry Land Sailor

This steel hulled boat, enroute from Toronto to Ottawa, came a cropper yesterday north of Belleville when supporting framework on the highway float gave way. The driver swung off 401 to get assistance but "while negotiating the ramp at Highway 14 the framework buckled completely allowing the boat to tumble onto the median. Picture shows crane hoisting boat back onto the truck.

Any Quinte Kraft Mill Would Be Model

The pulp and paper industry had become noted for pollution, said P. N. Bowie-Evans, CIP operations vice - president.

"However, I would ask you please don't judge mills in 1970 by mills built in 1920. There is a tremendous difference between the two," he said.

"Pollution in our industry has been assisted with a very broad brush," added F. J. Gifen, air and water management vice-president. "People have the impression that all mills are the same in the degree of pollution. This is not true."

Pollution potential varied with site, product, plant age and equipment, he said.

But the most technically-detailed outline of what safeguards CIP proposes to install in the Prince Edward kraft mill — if the project goes ahead — came from Mr. Witteberg.

The CIP official listed more than a score of specific control devices which, he said, would be built into the kraft mill to control environmental contamination — installations at preset estimated to cost about $7 million.

In substance, Mr. Witteberg gave this outline of the functions planned to control air and water pollution at the Lake Ontario site:

Water quality of the lake would be protected by a chain of devices from the mill's taste. Suspended solids would settle in a clarifier and later be treated. Effluent then would be channelled into a large lagoon — a site of about 40-50 acres — and be stored about five days. It would then be pumped through a submerged pipeline and jets through a diffuser "well offshore" into Lake Ontario.

The diffuser would provide a high dilution ratio before the effluent is finally dispersed into the lake. The dilution ratio count would be 80-1. Cost of the diffuser is expected at the much lower ratio of 20-1. The mill would also be equipped with a separate sanitary sewage system. Its mercury would be used by the mill.

Air quality will be controlled by an electrostatic precipitator, guaranteed for 99.5 per cent removal of particles in waste vapors. A 300-foot stack — 50 feet higher than normal standards would permit wider dispersal of vapors in the upper atmosphere.

The entire control complex would be tied to an electronic alarm system and water quality in the area would be constantly monitored.

Company officials also emphasized safeguards against odor problems.

As a working example Mr. Witteberg cited a similarly-designed operation in Oregon. Residents within 500 yards of the mill site had no complaints and even a high school was located nearby.

The CIP spokesmen also emphasized their operation would first have to meet provincial government pollution control standards before the project could start.

"We would not approve of a system that we did not think had a very good chance of meeting the water standards in this area," OWRC official Tony Clark said. "This would be an exercise in futility."

He said basically the controls system proposed by CIP are sound and the OWRC approves of the system "on fundamentals."

He doubted if temperatures of effluent pumped into the lake would create a problem because of the five - day lagoon aeration process.

Intake system for an area-wide water supply system now under consideration, is a "couple of miles away" in the same area of the lake.

But the flow of currents in the area will be taken into account when effluent output devices are designed for the mill.

Preliminary data, said Mr. Clark, supports that each of properly designed and operated treatment system and diffuser concentration of materials in the mill effluent "should be rapidly dispersed" within a very short distance — perhaps several hundred feet.

If the mill is built, its operation would form part of a regular and "extensive" OWRC monitoring program, said Mr. Clark.

Tom Cross, official of the provincial government's air management branch, said such a project would also be subject to continued policing for air pollution control — including odor.

No modern pulp and paper operation resembling older projects now in vogue would be permitted in Ontario, he said.

"We are well aware of the sources of odor in those places and we're well aware of what can be done."

Control legislation gives the agency broad powers which can be used "quite stringently."

Odor is considered pollution by the legislation.

"I think we have all the ammunition necessary to make sure that this mill goes in properly," said Mr. Cross.

"I think I can assure you that this will get our strictest attention."

Any foam in the lake caused by the technically-proven ed effluent from the mill would be "very, very light" and dispersed by wave action, said Mr. Wittenberg.

Mr. Bowe-Evans said foam conditions caused by some old mills were "simply frightful."

"There's nothing like that because of today's mill," he added. "We have no intention of coming in here and becoming thoroughly unpopular."

Mr. Bowie-Evans said that the mill operation would be the first to suffer from any contamination of the lake, since its production demanded high water purity.

W. H. Martin, assistant manager of CIP woodlands operations, said "timber supplies would be obtained from operating logging licences and private land owners.

Logging operators are tightly controlled by the lands and forests department and the company intends to set up forestry management demonstration programs for the private land owners.

There will be no denuding of timberlands or dissolution of water tables in the Bancroft area "as a result of company operations, he said.

Douglas Drysdale, lands and forests department official said a detailed forest inventory of the area under CIP study already has calculated Bancroft district timber resources.

The amount that would be used by the company is "by no means" near the total of current surplus timber resources.

A Dakota and a Caribou from Trenton joined four Otters from CFB Downsview this morning as they combed the area from Sarnia through to the Niagara peninsula.

The missing aircraft departed Port Huron, Mich. September 8 for a flight to Wilkes - Barre, Pa. but has not been heard from since.

It is not known whether the plane is down in Ontario. Search and Rescue spokesmen here said today that the plane could have flown over Buffalo, N.Y. without checking in.

Giant Oil Slick Drifts Sluggishly in Gulf

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. (CP) — A giant slick of bunker C oil was drifting sluggishly in the Gulf of St. Lawrence late Wednesday without any apparent direction, although transport department officials said it was within 20 miles of the northwestern tip of Prince Edward Island.

The weather office said early today that winds in the area were "quite variable . . . quite light" and forecast little change in conditions for the better part of the day.

There was little immediate danger of the 20-mile-long slick coming to land because winds were light.

However, a transport department spokesman said the oil, spilled into the gulf waters following the sinking Monday of the oil barge Irving Whale, would have to come ashore somewhere, but where depended on the wind.

Captain John Anstey of the tug Irving Maple, which was towing the barge, told Wednesday night of a change in the weather which eventually led to the sinking of his charge about 35 miles northeast of Cape North, P.E.I.

A the "beautiful weather" of Sunday changed early in the following day to rough seas pushed up by winds "gusting to 30 miles an hour from the northeast, we reduced speed and lengthened the tow line to ease the strain."

Captain Anstey said the barge was holding fairly still about 1,800 feet astern of the tug at 7 a.m. Monday.

"It was still rough. Shortly after . . . we saw the barge slowly sinking by the stern."

The captain stopped his tug immediately and tried to manoeuvre the craft to see what was happening at the stern of the barge.

"We weren't able to get around to see the barge from the other side," Captain Anstey said. A ship-to-shore broadcast was made to all ships that the barge was sinking to which, "I had one reply asking if I needed assistance."

"I said no assistance would be necessary. There was nothing anyone could do," the captain said. Another tug "might have assisted it it had arrived within 10 or 15 minutes to tell me what was happening . . ."

The two-man submarine Pisces was aboard the coast guard ship Wolfe, which was standing by today near the site of the position of the barge, which sank in about 180 feet of water.

Weather permitting, it was to be lowered into the gulf waters and sent to the bottom where an observer could check the condition of the sunken craft and determine damages.

The observer chosen is Captain Sven Madson of New York, who devised the method of pumping oil from the sunken Liberian tanker Arrow sank in Nova Scotia's Chedabucto Bay.

Three witnesses from Imperial Oil Ltd., owners of the tanker's cargo, and one from a salvage company were called to give evidence during the second day of hearings into pollution of the bay by bunker oil leaking from the tanker.

The Arrow ran aground on Cerberus Rock off Arichat, N.S., Feb. 4. Approximately 125 miles of shoreline was polluted when half the tanker's cargo of 3.8 million gallons of bunker oil escaped.

Capt. Madson was chosen because he was familiar with the barge.

Meanwhile, officials at the Canadian forces base here have been preparing to deal with oil reaching shore as well as methods of stopping oil leaking from the barge.

Booms of peat moss, which would be used to sponge up oil reaching shore, were piled in an airport hangar and the Canadian National passenger ferry John Hamilton Gray was to arrive here early today carrying a special sea boom designed to corral floating oil.

Fishermen along New Brunswick's north shore fished as usual Wednesday and there seemed to be little concern about an oil threat.

Premier Louis J. Robichaud said "I don't think anybody should be alarmed with anything."

Politics Becoming Rich Man's Game

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian politics is "becoming a rich man's game more than an ordinary citizen's game" the Commons committee on election expenses was told Wednesday.

M. J. Coldwell, former leader of the old CCF party, said prospective candidates need "some protection against the very high costs they can incur" during election campaigns.

Methods of protection were outlined by Mr. Coldwell, Arthur Smith, former Conservative member of Parliament, and Gordon Dryden, treasurer of the Liberal Federation of Canada, who appeared before the committee.

Disclosure Measure Termed Dangerous

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposed disclosure provisions in the Canada Corporations Act were described Wednesday as dangerous and were opposed by the Canadian Manufacturers Association.

The association was represented before the Senate banking and finance committee by lawyers led by H. J. Hemens, vice-president of Du Pont of Canada Ltd., Montreal, and D. I. W. Bruce, vice-president of Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.

The CMA delegation also represented the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Hemens and Mr. Bruce said the main argument for public disclosure of corporate financial details has been the public interest. However, no one had defined why the public should be interested. Any interest that existed appeared to be curiosity.

Mr. Hemens said experience with company towns has shown that the public is interested in jobs, not figures.

Senator John Connolly (I—Ontario) referred to a recent speech by Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford in which Mr. Basford warned corporations may be spending too much on advertising and that regulation may result.

Mr. Bruce asked whether Senator Connolly was suggesting that Mr. Basford is a better judge of advertising needs than a corporation manager.

CN Pensions Change Backed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons transport committee gave strong support Wednesday to union demands for basic changes in the management of the Canadian National Railway pension fund.

The committee's report gently resists accusations of embezzlement made by the railway unions against CN at hearings into the issue in June.

It recommends, however, that the Crown corporation should give the 14 unions involved an equal representation on the CN pension board and that the government should appoint an impartial chairman.

"Such an arrangement should have a considerable effect in restoring the confidence of the employees in the pension plan," the report states.

It also recommends that any surplus generated by the fund should be used to increase pension benefits, particularly for workers already retired, rather than to reduce CN's liability.

Another important recommendation would establish as a matter of principle for all Crown corporations an escalator clause in pension plans to keep benefits in step with increases in the cost of living.

In a further recommendation, the committee states that CN workers who initially refused to participate in a pension plan inaugurated in 1959 should be permitted to join now.

PRODUCTION UP

Negro Singer Sorry For Today's Youth

TORONTO (CP) — Mahalia Jackson, the famous singer of Negro spirituals, says life is tougher for young people now than it was when she was growing up.

"I feel so sorry for the young people today," she said in a recent interview while in town to tape a television show.

She said the world has changed a great deal since she was young.

"We can't even walk the streets at night," the 59-year-old singer said about Chicago, where she now lives. "We can't even go to church at night.

"And it's getting so you can't even pass an opinion. That is not the way to solve anything.

"We are living in times we never saw before. We need prayer to lift us to longer know what tomorrow holds for us.

"It's terrible—the killing of people, the killing of policemen. I don't know why there is such hatred."

Miss Jackson seems to sense a sadness and lack of direction in young people these days.

"At concerts they come to me afterward with the tears in their eyes. I say to them, 'Baby, what's the matter?' and they just can't tell me."

So great is her concern that Miss Jackson would like to retire and spend more time helping the young.

"I'm tired of the glittering lights," she said. "I want to help."

Miss Jackson said she originally wanted to be a nurse before she left New Orleans and gained fame as a singer.

"Now I feel it's time to nurse my young people back. They need my understanding, my lullabies, my songs, my actions.

"I feel for them so. I never had a child but I think of them as my children."

MR. AND MRS. J. McDONNELL

'Trenton Couple Mark 50th Wedding Anniversary

TRENTON — A tornado that missed the Quinte area in September in 1920 wrecked havoc on the Niagara Peninsula according to a local couple celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. McDonnell of 158 Dundas St. W. were aboard an excursion boat on Lake Ontario bound for the popular honeymoon resort when the storm struck, the McDonnells recalled. They remembered vividly seeing huge waves uprooted and metal hydro poles with wires hanging from them bent over in grotesque fashion by the storm in Niagara Falls. At the time they heard they were lucky their boat was not in the path of the twister.

The bride was Helena Long daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Long of Trenton. The groom was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John McDonnell of Murray township.

The couple were married in St. Alphonsus Catholic church at Wooler with the Rev. Joseph O'Sullivan officiating.

Their attendants were the bride's sister Mrs. (Marguerite) Gerry Burke of Detroit, and Amadee LaMorre of Trenton.

The union produced seven children. Three daughters, Mrs. (Agnes) Reg Harrison, Mrs. (Margaret) Charles Shepard and Mrs. (Nora) Arbuckle. Four sons, Leonard, Gerald, Robert and Joseph. All live in Trenton and the area.

The McDonnells resided on a farm in Murray township until moving to Trenton 30 years ago.

Yesterday they received cards and messages of congratulations including the usual recognition by government representatives. They received visits from numerous relatives and friends in their home in the afternoon and evening.

MELROSE W. I.

"Saint Marie, land of the Hurons" was the theme of the program organized by Mrs. C. Bates Jr., at the meeting of the Melrose W.I. held at the home of Mrs. H. Melhorn with an attendance of 20. Mrs. Bates said that a trip to Saint Marie, near Midland where a 300 - year - old fort has been recreated, is a rewarding experience. Mrs. J. McFarlane won the "jumbled Indian names" contest and various Indian relics and handicrafts were shown. Mrs. Clare Weale and Mrs. E. Badgley were assistants on the program.

Earlier, during the business part of the meeting, it was decided that a bake display will be held by the members at the Shannonville Fair on Sept. 11. Mrs. J. McFarlane will be in charge of donations. Area convention dates were announced. It will be held on Oct. 28 and 29 at Club Canara. No evening meetings will be held this year.

It was also decided that the secretary should buy some articles to be on hand as suitable gifts for sick and shut - in people. The conveners for the September meeting are arranging a tour of a local industrial concern on Sept. 24.

The Senior Training School will be held in Stirling at the end of the month but no delegates were appointed.

Refreshments were served and a social time was enjoyed by all.

Do You Recall This Poem?

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: These was a recitation our teacher had my brother recite years ago. "Still sits the schoolhouse by the road, a ragged bag. It starts like this:

"And soon he learned in life's hard school how few who passed above him

My mother used to sing this to us when we were small. I am now 84 years old.

— Mrs. Canadian.

Dear Mrs. Canadian: I don't know that one. Can a reader help?

* * *

Dear Doris: Do you have anything on thumb sucking? How do I stop a three - year - old child from sucking its thumb? — Puzzled.

Dear Puzzled: Sucking is one of baby's satisfying early pleasures. He gets his milk that way. Then a finger or thumb touches his lips and he tries sucking it. That feels good too.

The only thing wrong with it is when the habit doesn't begin tapering off after six months or so. And that happens when the other satisfactions he needs (food, rest, exercise, a change) just aren't good enough.

Most of all, he needs your loving interest, your time, your imagination in challenging his awakening interests.

But if all you can think of just isn't enough, consult your doctor. I'm sending you an excellent pamphlet on Thumb Sucking turned out by the Department of National Health and Welfare and available from your local public health centre.

Confidential to Not Satisfied: In love making, as in other parts of married life, you can profit by knowledge and the use of imagination. If you and your husband have cared enough about each other to establish a home and family, it is worth while to work at getting the romance back into your marriage.

Your own doctor may be the person who can help you, or a marriage counsellor. I am sending you my leaflet, which recommends a number of books on "Sex, Marriage and Birth Control" (available to readers for 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope).

Kitchen Tested Recipes

An Explanation Due On Pre-sifted Flour

By MARY MOORE

A woman's editor suggested to me that I write a separate item on the subject of presifted flour.

Because this advertising term has caused a great deal of confusion to home bakers I wrote an explanation some years ago when the term was first used. Since we have a new generation of cooks now another explanation seems to be due.

To make flour you have to crush and pulverize wheat kernels. The bran is sifted out and to achieve the fine flour we are accustomed to buying, the flour is sifted and sifted through increasingly finer screens until finally it is sifted through fine silk. These siftings often run to 99 times. Of course the flour is sifted and presifted. It always was. Advertisers started reporting "presifted" out of the blue and this confused home bakers. They thought they never had to sift flour again. But flour packs down from shipping and on grocery shelves and to be sure bakers measure the correct amount for their cakes and other baking I specify "sifted flour" (or in some cases "unsifted flour" — whichever applies in the particular recipe we are working on). This means you should sift your flour and then spoon it into the measuring cup and measure it in the latest sifted condition.

Ann Landers

Woman Is Afraid To Follow Desires

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Here it is in a nutshell: I was married at 15 and had a son one year later. The following year I had another son and two years later, a third. After ten years of a stormy marriage my husband left me. I was determined to raise my boys to be good citizens.

For some unknown reason the women in my family do not show their age. My mother is 69 and could easily pass for 48. Although I am 35 I still get asked for my I.D. card when I order a cocktail.

Several of my son's friends have had crushes on me. I've always laughed about it until a few months ago when a certain 16-year-old started hanging around the house, writing poetry about me and playing my favorite songs on his guitar. I am ashamed to tell you how much I enjoy this. Ann, I've been dreaming about this kid for a week straight. The next morning I feel so guilty, I can't look at myself in the mirror.

I have plenty of friends my own age and do not lack for male companionship. My special beau is a police officer in the juvenile division who has been a tremendous influence in helping me raise my boys.

Do you think I need to see a psychiatrist? If I follow my desires, I hate to think where they will lead me. What should I tell myself to keep me on the straight and narrow — which I know I must do at all cost — R. J. of L.A.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR R.J.: If you really want to solve this problem, Mrs. Robinson, don't talk to yourself — say something to the kid. Like, "Flake off, Buddy Boy, I'm old enough to be your mother."

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This might be the most unusual letter you have received in a long while. You frequently call on physicians for help. This time a physician is calling on you.

Please tell me what to do about a 34-year-old daughter who is divorced, has two children and plenty of money from her ex-husband. The girl will not use the good brains God gave her. She runs around with a bunch of crazy kids (most of them younger than herself), drinks beer with vodka chasers, smokes about three packs of cigarets a day, is dangerously overweight and eats everything she shouldn't. She has high blood pressure and a peptic ulcer but refuses to take the medication I have prescribed for her.

If this girl were not my daughter I wouldn't bother with her for five minutes. I hate to turn my back on her, but the situation is going from bad to worse. She has seen two psychiatrists and didn't get along with either of them. I am drained dry, talked out, disgusted and fed up. What do you suggest? — DENVER DOLDRUMS.

DEAR DEN: This girl is going to prove that you can't tell her what to do — even if it kills her. And it might.

Tell her at once to find another doctor. Offer to recommend a couple and let her choose. Don't remind her to take her medicine and don't ask her how she feels. The punitive aspects of this girl's self-destructive behavior are enormous. She doesn't care what she does to herself so long as she makes life miserable for you. When she discovers you have resigned as her whipping boy she might give up and get well.

Confidential to WHICH ONE WHICH WAY?: Number one sounds like the best of the lot. A sinner can reform. Manners can be learned. But an idiot is forever.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I'm so worried for fear the baby will fall down the stairs. He's determined to climb them and heads right for the stairs every time he's out of his playpen. I spank him, but he doesn't seem to learn."

Mother: "Jimmy enjoys climbing up the stairs, so I'm showing him how to back down safely. That's the way, Jimmy, put one knee on the step . . . like this."

A small child doesn't have to be taught how to climb up the stairs. He should, however, have some instructions and help until he learns to back down them.

Joint Commission Standards for Pollution Control Urged

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial experts recommended Wednesday that the International Joint Commission be given power to establish joint pollution standards for states and provinces surrounding the Great Lakes.

The proposals will be submitted to the governors of the states and premiers of the provinces today.

George Kerr, Ontario's minister of energy resources and chairman of the first session of the two-day Great Lakes Environmental conference, told a news conference that delegates gave majority support to the proposal.

Attending are delegates from Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

The commission would also have power to:

—Regulate rapid exchange of information on all aspects of environmental programs;

—Act as a forum to review standards and achieve uniformity of such standards;

—Carry out surveillance and publish results of such surveillance restricting on the effectiveness of each government's program.

Premier John Roberts of Ontario arranged the conference in order to achieve some uniformity on pollution control on the Great Lakes.

He pointed to the necessity of implementation of fish in Lake St. Clair and the St. Clair River and phosphate discharges into Lakes Ontario and Erie.

Mr. Kerr explained that a separate treaty may be needed to bring the provinces and states into the commission, organized in 1909 by the U.S. and Canadian governments. It reports to the two governments on boundary-water conditions.

The commission has underlined the problems of water management but has not been able to set enforcing legislation.

Mr. Kerr said there are many problems left to discuss, especially standards and financial contribution.

"All the states and provinces are willing to give up some of their sovereignty so there could be some form of enforcement from an outside body," he said.

Phosphates Seen Key To Cleanup

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ex-cabinet Minister J. J. Greene told the Symposium of International Problems of Pollution Wednesday it would be a mistake for the government to establish a super agency responsible for environment.

And he said that unless the U.S. takes the "tough decision" to ban phosphates from detergents, the Great Lakes will not be cleaned up.

To achieve a clean-up, he added, the International Joint Commission might have to have its jurisdictional powers strengthened.

Mr. Greene's speech was read to the symposium by an assistant, Jack Burnett. The symposium will run through Friday.

Curb Urged On Exodus Of Capital

TORONTO (CP) — Two candidates for leadership of the Ontario New Democratic Party agreed in a televised debate there should be legislation to reduce the capital removed from the province by United States investors.

Stephen Lewis, member of the legislature for Toronto Scarborough West, and Walter Pitman, member for Peterborough, will contest the leadership at a party convention here in October. Their hour-long joint television appearance Tuesday night was the first of a planned series.

Mr. Lewis said U.S. businesses could be required to reinvest in Ontario some of the $2 billion that flows out of the province each year "without the Seventh Fleet appearing off the Gulf of St. Lawrence."

He said an NDP government might increase corporate taxes, impose a resources tax, force foreign companies to offer shares to Canadians and to reinvest some profits here.

Mr. Pitman predicted the next Ontario election would be fought on the issue of U.S. control of the Canadian economy. He has found "a frustration throughout the province at the sellout."

"I would go as far as demanding that we take over parts of Ontario industry," Mr. Pitman said.

"For example, we could put Crown corporations in the north to develop timber and minerals for the advantage of the people of the north."

GAS EXPORTS ARE OPPOSED

TORONTO (CP) — A University of Toronto economist charged Wednesday that Canada might become a "banana republic" in relation to the United States through a series of separate energy deals bich would amount to a continental energy policy.

Prof. Mel Watkins, also vice-president of the New Democratic Party, made the comment at a news conference held to announce cross-Canada demonstrations Saturday against the proposed export of nine trillion cubic feet of natural gas to the U.S. in the next 20 years.

Liner to Be Floating College

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A Chinese shipping magnate who made the $3.8-million high bid for the liner Queen Elizabeth says he plans to turn her into a seagoing international university.

The bid by C. K. Tung of Hong Kong at a bankruptcy auction Wednesday saved the former queen of the Atlantic—now tied up here—from going to the scrap yard.

Italian scrap dealers had made a pre-auction offer of $2.4 million for the liner.

Tung said his C. K. Tung Island Navigation Co., which owns 100 other passenger ships and freighters, would spend $4.5 million refitting the Elizabeth either in Hong Kong or Singapore to ply the seas as a luxury cruise ship until plans for the university are completed.

He said his C. K. Tung Foundation would finance the floating university at the start, but that he hoped to persuade the United Nations to take over permanent sponsorship.

The university, Tung said, "would be a step toward mutual understanding among many people of the world now in conflict with each other."

The 1,031-foot Queen Elizabeth was built in Greenock, Scotland, in 1938 and was the pride of the Cunard Steam-Ship Co. until she was retired here in 1968.

Cunard planned to develop her as a convention centre and hotel. But these plans fell through, and she was sold for $2.5 million to Dibbles Leasing Corp., Stanton and Robert Miller, and Charles Willard, all of Philadelphia.

Willard, the Millers and Dibbles Leasing formed a group called Queen Ltd., and began offering guided tours of the vessel. But last May Queen Ltd. filed voluntary bankruptcy proceedings, claiming assets of $6.6 million and liabilities of $12.3 million, and court-appointed receivers ordered the auction.

After receiving Tung's bid the receivers decided to see whether they could make more by selling the Queen piece by piece.

But the auction of things added only $59,000 to the Chinese scrapyard's $3.8 million, leaving Tung far and away the high bidder.

Clay to Sign Contract for October Battle with Quarry

NEW YORK (AP) — Cassius Clay is supposed to sign himself back into boxing's heavyweight title picture today, giving fight fans renewed hope for a dream fight against current champion Joe Frazier.

Clay, the former unbeaten champion who hasn't had a regular fight in more than three years during his appeals on a draft evasion conviction, and Jerry Quarry, will sign official contracts to meet in Atlanta Oct. 26, it was announced Wednesday.

At the same time, in Washington, Frazier confirmed earlier reports by announcing he would meet light heavyweight champion Bob Foster for the title Nov. 19 in Detroit.

Then, should both fights come off and both Clay, who prefers to be called Muhammad Ali, and Frazier emerge with victories, the logical progression would be for them to get into the ring against each other.

"I will fight Clay any place in the United States, including Atlanta," Frazier assured.

His manager, Yank Durham, expressed doubt that the Clay-Quarry fight would ever happen, but if it does, "we'll fight him in December any place in the United States if he can get a license."

A license has been Clay's problem ever since he was stripped of his title by the World Boxing Association and the New York Association and the New York Athletic Commission when he refused military induction and was sentenced to five years in prison.

Now 28, he has been refused a license in many cities. However, he did manage to get a license in Georgia for an eight-round exhibition against three little known heavyweights in Atlanta last Wednesday night, his first public appearance in the ring since he bested two three-round exhibitions in Detroit, June 19, 1967.

Quarry of Bellflower, Calif., who already has fought for the title and has, currently is ranked the No. 1 contender by Ring Magazine and No. 3 by the WBA.

Robert L. Kassell, chairman of the board of Tennis Unlimited, Inc., and Mike Maltz, president of Tennis Unlimited and Sports Action, Inc., made the announcement of the Clay-Quarry fight and will promote it in cooperation with Leroy Johnson, a Georgia State senator and head of House of Sports, Inc.

Stop Pirates 6-4

Cards Make Run at NL Leaders

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There are three teams and 7½ games between Red Schoendienst and first place in the nervous National League East. But the St. Louis Cardinals skipper still can talk about trading it all . . . as long as the front-runners keep playing grievously.

"We're going to win the pennant," Schoendienst proclaimed, with a straight face, after his Cardinals knocked off the plodding Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4 Wednesday night.

The Pirates' third straight setback cost them undisputed possession of the top spot for the first time in 5½ weeks. But the New York Mets, given an opportunity to pass Pittsburgh, could do no better than split a twi-nighter with Philadelphia Phillies for a share of the lead. And the third-place Chicago Cubs remained one game back after a 3-2 loss to last-place Montreal Expos.

Even if the Cards don't win the pennant they surely will have something to say about who does.

They play the Pirates again tonight, then meet the Mets and Cubs three times each in the following seven days.

In Wednesday's other NL action, Cincinnati Reds downed Los Angeles Dodgers 6-0; Atlanta Braves split a double-header with San Diego Padres, winning 6-3 in 11 innings, then losing 7-4, and San Francisco Giants topped Houston Astros 9-5.

The Cardinals erased a 4-0 Pittsburgh lead with three-run rallies in the fifth and sixth innings. Ted Simmons' second-double keyed the first uprising and ex-Pirate Carl Taylor pinch hit a non-scoring Mets double in the middle of the second bust, enabling left-hander Frank Bertaina to pick up his first victory of the year.

Willie Montanez, just recalled from the minors, struck a run-scoring pinch single in the ninth to send the Phillies past the Mets in their opener. But southpaw Ray Sadecki earned the home club a split by turning the Phils on four hits and striking out 12 in the nightcap. Duffy Dyer provided the margin of victory with a bases-loaded single in the sixth.

Light-hitting Bobby Wine beat the Cubs with a two-out, run-scoring single in the ninth and also contributed a pair of defensive gems at shortstop.

"You don't mind getting beat 15-1," grumbled Cubs' pilot Leo Durocher, "but not like this. With the pennant race at this stage, you ought to beat teams you think you should."

Rookie Milt Wilcox fired a five-hitter for the Reds, whose magic number was trimmed to seven enroute to clinching the NL West title. Lee May drove in two runs with a double and his 30th homer.

Bob Tillman's leadoff homer in the 11th triggered a three-run Atlanta flurry in the opener at San Diego, but the Padres rebound behind Earl Wilson, who hurled four shutout innings of relief for his 12th win. NL victory, and rapped his 35th career homer—two short of Wes Ferrell's record for pitchers.

Willie Mays slammed his 25th and 26th homers, good for five RBI's, to carry the Giants past Houston.

Perry, Cuellar Battle For AL Pitching Lead

Jim Perry and Mike Cuellar just about put the finishing touches on the American League divisional races but the pair of 20-game winners are battling on even terms for the pitching lead for most victories.

Perry captured 20 games last year and won his 22nd Wednesday night as the Minnesota Twins blanked the Oakland Athletics, 3-1.

The victory put the Twins 6½ games ahead in the West Division with 22 games remaining. The second game of their scheduled twi-night doubleheader was called by rain.

Cuellar 23-game winner last year and co-holder of the Cy Young Award with Denny McLain of Detroit Tigers, also swept to his 22nd triumph of the campaign Wednesday night, as the Baltimore Orioles stopped the New York Yankees 1-0 on seven hits.

In other AL action, Chicago White Sox swept a pair from California Angels 11-4 and 3-1 in twilight-nightcap split of twinnings; Washington Senators edged Cleveland Indians 5-4; Boston Red Sox stopped Detroit Tigers 4-1; and Kansas City Royals at Milwaukee Brewers postponed by rain.

Perry, 22-11, drove in the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning with a single as the Twins snapped Oakland's eight-game winning string.

It was the right-hander's fourth straight triumph over Oakland this season. Perry scattered five hits in eight innings before Stan Williams finished up.

Cuellar, 23-7 last year, stopped the Yankees on seven hits with his screwball and the left-hander increased his season's record to 22-7.

The Orioles scored the only run of the game in the sixth inning on two-out doubles by Frank and Brooks Robinson, ending the Yankees winning streak at five games. It was Cuellar's seventh straight triumph. He is 14-2 since July 3.

The White Sox won their first doubleheader of the season as they broke an eight-game losing streak and stretched the Angels winless skein to seven.

Bill Melton stroked a pair of homers and drove in five runs in the opener for the White Sox and won the nightcap, beating 19-game winner Clyde Wright with a pair of runs in the sixth. Luis Aparicio clubbed a homer in the eighth for Chicago.

Mike Nagy twirled a four-hitter and drilled a triple and single and scored twice as the Red Sox gained a third-place East tie in beating the Tigers.

Mike Epstein rapped a two-run homer and a triple in leading the Senators to their narrow victory over Cleveland. Roy Foster and Chuck Hinton had homers for the Indians.

Baseball's Brightest Star Facing Dim Future Prospects

NEW YORK (AP) — Only two years ago, Denny McLain had the world in his hands. He was baseball's brightest star.

He had fame, wealth and talent; and a future that promised only more of the same.

Today, Denny McLain is sitting disconsolately somewhere, probably with only his head in his hands.

In six short months, he had turned into baseball's bad boy. He is criticized, he is broke and his future is riddled with doubt.

It all came to a climax Wednesday afternoon when baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn suspended Detroit Tigers pitcher for at least the remainder of the 1970 season.

It was McLain's third suspension this year, and the words "at least" give some cause to think that this one might extend even longer than the 1970 season.

All Kuhn would say in announcing the suspension after a meeting with McLain and Detroit officials was that he was "pending further proceedings, e which by agreement of counsel will not take place before the end of the season."

McLain slipped away without comment, and Kuhn requested Detroit officials not to talk about the suspension.

Kuhn did say, in his statement, that "certain new allegations have been brought to my attention, including allegations regarding McLain's conduct with respect to the Detroit management and information that on occasions McLain has carried a gun."

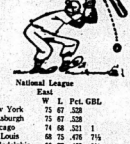
It represented the final blow to the 25-year-old right-hander, who, in 1968, became the first pitcher since 1934 to win 30 games in one season. He became the toast of baseball, the Cy Young Award winner.

Last year, he was almost as good, winning 24 games and sharing the Cy Young Award with Mike Cuellar of Baltimore Orioles as the American League's top pitcher.

But then the bottom fell out when he was implicated with gamblers and suspended in the spring until July 1. Then, on Sept. 28, he doused two Detroit sports writers with ice water, a prank, and drew a one-week suspension from the Tigers.

Missing all of spring training and most of the season, in his brief period on the mound he managed only a 3-5 record with a 4.73 earned-run average.

Russian Coach Misses Practice



TORONTO (CP) — Anatoly Tarasov, coach of Russia's national hockey team, arrived too late Wednesday to see Toronto Maple Leafs' first workout of the season.

Tarasov, who recently participated in a coaching symposium sponsored by the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association in Vancouver, said he had wanted to watch the Leafs' 45-minute skating and shooting session for pleasure rather than for new ideas.

Instead, he answered reporters' questions through the translation of Marika Foguel, an attractive 22-year-old Russian who emigrated to Canada three months ago.

Will Canada ever beat Russia in international hockey?

Coaching Change

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series named Frank Bonello their coach for the 1970-71 season.

Bonello replaces Gus Bodnar, who resigned earlier this week to take a coaching job with Salt Lake City Golden Eagles of the Western Hockey League.

The new Marlboros coach was manager of Markham, Ont., the defending OHA Junior B champions last season.

As a player, Bonello was with the Marlboros Midgets in 1948, and played with Whitby, Ont., Dunlops, winners of the Allan Cup in 1957 and the world championship in 1958.

McNeil Named Hab Assistant

MONTREAL (CP) — Al MacNeil, long-time National Hockey League defenceman and coach of the American Hockey League Montreal Voyageurs until last season, was appointed assistant coach of the NHL Montreal Canadiens Wednesday.

MacNeil, a 35-year-old native of Sydney, N.S., will act as a full-time assistant to Claude Ruel, starting his third season as coach of the NHL club.

Sam Pollock, vice-president and general manager of the Canadiens, made the announcement at a news conference.

Pollock said Ron Caron has been rehired as general manager of the Voyageurs, and will also assume MacNeil's previous coaching post with the club.

The announcements came on the eve of the Canadiens pre-season training camp opening. More than 70 players report to the camp here today.

MacNeil played with Toronto Maple Leafs, Chicago Black Hawks, Montreal, New York Rangers and Pittsburgh Penguins. He was playing coach with Houston Apollos of the Central Hockey League before moving to the AHL Voyageurs.

MacNeil's duties likely will include the running of some practices, advice to Ruel on game strategy, details of travel and extra work with certain players.

U.S. Open Tennis Washed Out

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — The U.S. open tennis championships were washed out Wednesday, and umpires and linesmen used the occasion to press for pay. They said they are tired of working for nothing.

At the same time, Rosemary Casals of San Francisco announced that eight of the top women players would pass up the Pacific Southwest tournament at Los Angeles two weeks hence to compete in a special event at Houston.

It's all part of their demand for a fairer portion of the prize money.

The best of the lady players, Margaret Court, was leading another Australian, Helen Gourlay, 8-2, in the opening set of the women's quarter-finals when rain cancelled play.

She resumes her match with Miss Gourlay today, and Nancy Richey of San Angelo, Tex., meets Lesley Hunt of Australia to compete the semi-final bracket.

Final rounds will be played Sunday, the men competing for a $20,000 first prize and the women for $7,500.

In the men's quarter-finals, Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield, Calif., will meet Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Tex., Arthur Ashe plays Wimbledon champion John Newcombe of Australia, the No. 2 seed; Stan Smith of Pasadena Calif., opposes Ken Rosewall of Australia, No. 3; and Tony Roche of Australia takes on unseeded Brian Fairlie of New Zealand.

The umpires committee of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association issued a two-page report warning tournament directors to expect pressure from the umpires and linesmen for a cut of the gate.

With players receiving such big cheques—$20,000 to the winner here, for instance—it is argued. "R. Michael Dunne, the umpires' chairman, said, for skilled umpires and linesmen to contribute their services for nothing.

Lead Series 3-0

Lakeshore Nears Minto Cup

PORT CREDIT, Ont. (CP) — Lakeshore Maple Leafs won their third straight game in the best-of-seven series for the national Junior A lacrosse championship Wednesday night but the team's general manager is a bit disappointed.

"We would have liked to play a stronger team," Boyd Bergar said after his Leafs downed Burnaby Cablevision 14-8 in the third game for the Minto Cup.

"I like good lacrosse and I would have preferred to play a better team."

The Leafs swept the first game of the series Sunday 22-6 and the second game Tuesday 23-13.

Bergar said getting the over-sized silver cup now is a cinch.

"We are coming here Friday to wrap up the series."

He said the Burnaby team has become stronger in the last two games and "we slowed," but added that he felt the B.C. team isn't a match for his players.

"They should have never made it down here to Ontario," he said.

The fault lies partly with the B.C. lacrosse league, he said.

"They haven't had enough competition out there, otherwise they could have been stronger.

"Their problem is that they don't protect their junior players. Junior clubs in B.C. get raided by the seniors. Not here. We have protection here."

Burnaby managed a 4-4 tie in the first period of the game but Lakeshore charged into a 10-5 lead in the second period.

Brian McGuiness and Robbie Patten led the Leafs with three goals each and Paul Suggate, Bill Foote and Ron McNaughton scored two apiece. Ogber Leafs goals came from Charlie Henderson and Joe Tompson.

Lakeshore outshot Burnaby 65-42.

Coach Clark Pulford of the Leafs said the western team's performance was much better than in the first two games.

"It was a more respectable game and a more respectable score."

Ron Delmonico, who coaches after the game and "I feel confident that if we can take the game Friday we will win the Minto Cup."

The Minto, one of the oldest strictly amateur cups in Canada, has been won by eastern teams 20 times since 1937 and only seven times by B.C. teams.

Oshawa Green Gaels held the cup continuously for the last seven years.

The Burnaby team, said it took his players time to adjust to the arena and the style of their western opponents.

His team is used to playing a more "methodical, scientific game," he said. "But now we are playing their game—break fast and get the goals."

He said the secret of his players was "tremendously high" spirits.

Harrington Suspended

TORONTO (CP) — Defensive end Ed Harrington, one of the Argonauts, thrown out of an Eastern Football Conference game against Ottawa Rough Riders last Monday for cloning Rider quarterback Gary Wood, has been suspended for one game and fined $200.

Greg Fulton, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Football League, issued a statement today on behalf of Commissioner Jake Gaudaur:

"The commissioner has reviewed the reports and studied the films of the incident that occurred in last Monday's game and his decision is to suspend Ed Harrington for the next game of the Toronto club and assess a fine of $200."

On the first play of the game in Ottawa, Harrington broke through and felled Wood with a forearm smash to the back of the head and was thrown out of the game.

Wood was knocked unconscious.

Referee Harry Ross, who ejected Harrington, also penalized the Argos 15 yards.

Toronto coach Leo Cahill, after watching films of the play, said:

"He did it, all right, but I've never heard of a player being ejected for hitting someone with a forearm."

Argos Try Two Cuts From NFL

TORONTO (CP) — Two former National Football League players arrived Wednesday for tryouts with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

Zenon Andrusyshyn, former Oakville resident, and Art Strahan, a defensive end released by Los Angeles Rams, joined the Argo camp. Andrusyshyn is a good kicker and punter out by Dallas Cowboys Sept. 2.

"We have until next Wednesday or Thursday to decide about him," Argo coach Leo Cahill said of Andrusyshyn.

"We're giving him a five-day tryout, but under the rules the day before a game and the day after a game don't count as the five, so we'll have a week to look at him."

Andrusyshyn led the National Collegiate Athletic Association in punting with an average of 44.2 yards in the last two seasons. He was the ninth draft choice of Dallas.

Born in Kamburg, Germany, of Ukrainian parents, he grew up in Oakville, where he gained prominence as a javelin thrower.

LONDON (AP) — American owner Charles Engelhard entered super racehorse Nijinsky Tuesday in the English St. Leger classic Saturday, and the British bookies had a nightmare. If Canadian-bred Nijinsky wins, then millions of pounds will disappear from the bookies' pockets. The betting on Nijinsky almost froze. If you could get a bet, the odds were prohibitive. Nijinsky, to be ridden by British champion jockey Lester Piggott, has been syndicated for a record $3.3 million ($3.8 million) as a stallion. The son of Native Dancer never has raced over the St. Leger course of one mile, six furlongs and 132 yards. The race is a furlong longer than the horse has ever travelled. One British bookie laid odds of 1 to 4 on Nijinsky. In other words, you had to lay out $4 in the hope of winning $1.

Murphy, coached by Lombardi when he played football at West Point, also proposed that $500 million of the $1 billion appropriation be utilized to construct five Vincent Thomas Lombardi cancer research institutions.
